Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
HOROSCOPE FOR WEEK OF
SEPT. 7, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Changing your mind doesn't come easily for Lambs, who place a high value on commitment. But new facts could emerge that might persuade you to rethink your situation.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is a good time to put that fine Bovine's eye for beauty to work in redecorating your home or workplace. And don't forget to indulge yourself in some personal time as well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your sense of loyalty to someone who asks for your help is commendable. But make sure there are no information gaps that should be filled in before you move too far too quickly.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't let difficult people raise the Crab's ire levels this week. Avoid them if you can. If not, resist telling them off, even if you think they deserve it. Things improve by week's end.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your suspicions about a colleague might be on the mark. But you also could be misreading the signals you believe you're getting. Do some discreet checking before jumping to conclusions.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Take some time out from your many tasks and see if someone might be trying to reach out to you. You could be surprised to learn who it is and why you might want to reciprocate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You still might want to do more investigating before taking on a new commitment. Later would not be the time to try to fill in any crucial gaps in what you need to know about it.

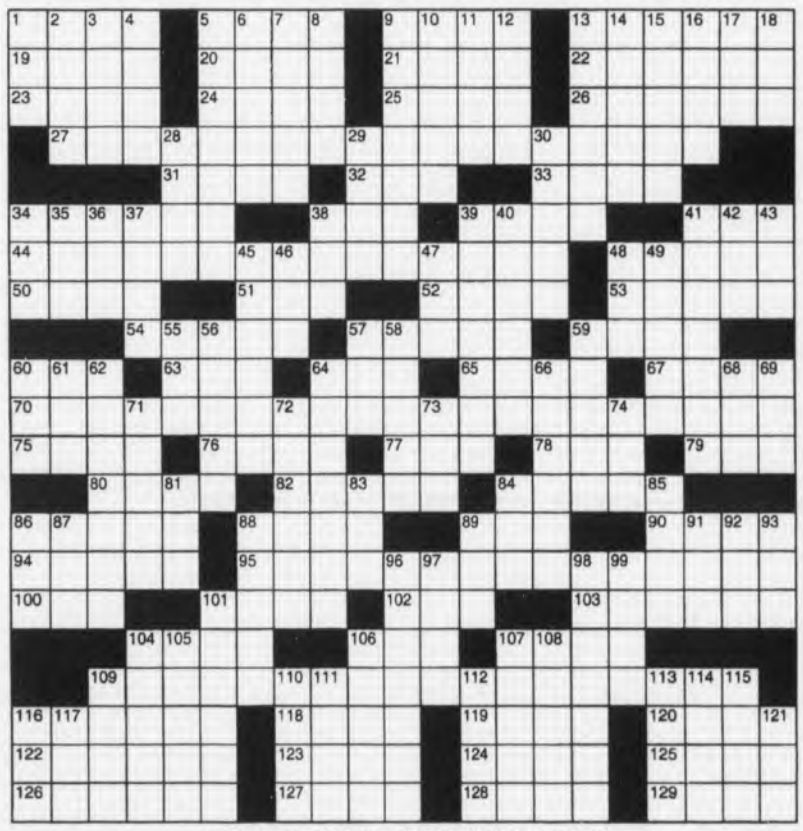
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new opportunity should be carefully studied. It might offer some of the things you've been looking for. Or it could contain new possibilities you never considered. Check it out.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have to work harder this week to get people to listen to what you have to say. But if you stay with it, you could start to get your message out to many by the week's end.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although family matters again take up a big chunk of the Goat's time, the week also offers a chance to explore a new career move you'd been contemplating for a while.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Applying your practicality (what does it offer me?) and your creativity (how can I improve on it?) could provide sound reasons for seriously considering that new offer.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The single set will find that keeping their romantic aspirations on high gives Cupid a better target to aim at. Paired Pisces will find that this week helps reinforce their relationships.



(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in encouraging others to demand the best from themselves. You would be a fine sports coach, as well as an enlightened teacher.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Melissa Etheridge likes it 'round' here

Singer/songwriter makes first visit to Music Circus

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Melissa Etheridge has played all kinds of places in her 25-year career – from barrooms to elegant concert halls – but the singer/songwriter has a special place in her heart for one venerable Cape Cod venue, which she returns to this weekend.

"I love the Melody Tent. I love the funkiness of it and the unique vibe it has because it's in the round. The audience is so close that it creates this amazing circle of energy," said Etheridge by telephone recently from Biloxi, Miss. "I can't bring my stage set and I can't bring my band, but I love it just the same."

Finding space for her band isn't a problem these days for Etheridge whose current "Live & Alone" tour – which brings her to Cohasset for her South Shore Music Circus debut on Aug. 27 and then to Hyannis on Aug. 29 – features just the performer and her guitar. Etheridge, a Kansas native who spent a few semesters at Boston's Berklee College of Music before heading to Los Angeles to pursue her music career, remembers many an early gig that found her alone in the spotlight.

"I worked this way a lot between the ages of 18 and 27 while I was trying to get a record deal. It was just me and my guitar. In the mid-1980s, I was playing mostly women's bars, because hair bands were in and there wasn't much room for someone like me in the music business."

That changed in 1988 when the now 48-year-old released her eponymous debut album for Island Records. For the next few years, Etheridge found success with songs like "Bring Me Some Water," "No Souvenirs," and "Ain't It Heavy," for which she won her first Grammy Award in 1992. The following year, her fame grew with the release of her fourth album, "Yes I Am," which included her chart-topping hits "I'm the Only One" and "Come to My Window," which won Etheridge her second Grammy for Best Female Rock Performance. There have been six more albums in the years since then. And more hits, too, including "I Need to Wake Up," from the soundtrack of the Al Gore documentary "An Inconvenient Truth," which won the 2007 Academy Award for Best Song.

That Etheridge would lend her voice to a film about global warming came as no surprise to the many who had long admired not only her music, but also her social activism and personal candor. Sixteen years ago, as her career took off, Etheridge came out publicly as a lesbian and became a gay rights activist. During a long-term relationship with Julie Cypher, ex-wife of actor Lou Diamond Phillips, Cypher gave birth to two children, Bailey Jean and Beckett, both fathered by legendary rocker David Crosby through artificial insemination. Etheridge and Cypher ended their relationship nine years ago. On Sept. 20, 2003, Etheridge married actress Tammy Lynn Michaels. On Oct. 17, 2006, Michaels gave birth to twins, a son, Miller Steven, and a daughter, Johnnie Rose, fathered by an anonymous donor. Between 2004 and 2005; Etheridge underwent successful treatment for breast cancer.

"I'm feeling wonderfully healthy and happy right now," says Etheridge, who just finished work on a new album, with the working title "Songs of Love and Fear."

"I don't think I've enjoyed myself so much in the studio for a long time. I'm very excited about the album. We have already a chosen a song called 'Fearless Love' to be the first single. We still have overdubs and vocals to do, but the album should be finished by the end of the year. Hopefully, it will be out in the spring."

Until it is time to promote the new record, Etheridge says she plans to enjoy stepping back in time when she steps on stage.

"I'm having a blast creating a different set list every night. It's like, 'Oh, I haven't done that song in 10 years – let's do that.' I always do 'Come to My Window' and the other hits, of course, but I also get to do more obscure, slower songs because it is such a relaxed show. Being on stage alone, however, means that if you hear a mistake, there is no one to blame but me. This is definitely a test of the songs, but it is also a very special experience for me and, I hope, the audience. A good song is one that holds up when it is just me and a guitar."

Melissa Etheridge will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Thursday, Aug. 27. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-745-3000, or go online at themusiccircus.org. Movie review

We can't quite get into the 'Game'

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

Play the Game (C)

Grandpa Joe (Andy Griffith) wants to become a "chick maggot." He turns to his grandson (Paul Campbell) for advice.

I just saw Andy Taylor poppin' Viagra and boppin' Mrs. Seinfeld in "Play the Game," and all I can say is pray the folks back in Mayberry don't find out.

Just think what it would do to poor Aunt Bee and Floyd the Barber to witness a naked Andy under the influence of "a little blue pill." Their weak hearts couldn't stand the shock. And what about Goober and Gomer? Shazam! And, oh my God, little Opie? "Gee, Pa!"

Most of all, what about me? Andy was one of the few beacons of decency in my entire life. The only thing worse would be to discover Ward Cleaver in the sack with Mrs. Costanza.

In a way, though, I must admire the moxie and guts of an iconic man of 84 dropping his drawers and exposing us, literally, to a phenomenon that's been sweeping the nation: senior sex. And no, by "senior," I don't mean high schoolers, although I doubt many of them could match Andy Griffith's prowess in "Playing the Game."

It wasn't always that way for his Grandpa Joe, a recently widowed gent longing to become a "chick maggot" at the nursing home where he resides with former sitcom stars Liz Sheridan (aka Mrs. Seinfeld) and Doris Roberts (aka Mrs. Barone from "Everybody Loves Raymond").

It's writer-director Marc Fienberg's intent to get us to question who's teaching whom on their Metamucil-fueled bootie calls in which Gramps' favorite pickup line has something to do with hemorrhoids and how many Gs your arse pulls when you sit down. (Hey, guys, give that one a try next time you're out crusin' for chicks.)

What you question more is whether or not Fienberg has lost his mind, as he frequently indulges his fixation on octogenarians doing the nasty.

The joke, if you want to call it that, is that while Gramps is getting lucky, the kid keeps striking out with the alleged girl of his dreams, played adorably by Marla Sokoloff, formerly of "The Practice."

Filling out this battle of the former network stars is Clint (brother of Ron) Howard ("Gentle Ben") as Joe's estranged son and David's less-than-nurturing father AND boss at the car dealership where David has proven he can "sell ice cubes to the Eskimos."

Where is this all leading beyond Griffith's seat-squirming sex scene? Hate to say it, but exactly where you expect, as Fienberg lavishes his movie with rom-com clichés and a "big twist" that everyone can see coming about 75 minutes before it's finally revealed.

Fienberg also is big on coincidences, always a cheap and lazy storytelling device, and contrivances, which are great for escaping the corners he repeatedly paints himself into. And don't get me started on his anachronistic dialogue, which has Gramps waxing poetic about Hollywood before "talkies." What is he, 84 or 110?

Yet, I must admit I was never bored by "Play the Game." Annoyed, yes, but never bored. A lot of that has to do with the talent and charm oozed by Griffith, Sheridan and Roberts. They're most certainly oldies, but they're still very much goodies in my book, frequently calling on their vast skills to overcome the sexist and ageist underpinnings of a story that undoubtedly means well even though it never plays well.

Cohasset schools 'up and running'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The shiny, just waxed halls of Cohasset schools filled up with students on Wednesday morning. Teachers greeted students new and old with smiles. And a new school year began.

The picture perfect day, with blue skies and warmer temperatures, complemented the exciting, if not a little nerve-racking, day.

"The opening went very smooth, we are very pleased."
— Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh

"The opening went very smooth, we are very pleased," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh. "Now, we're up and running and open for business."

Bus riding students at all three schools arrived on time. Even bus arrival at Osgood School, the third and final destination for the school buses, was on time.

"It was a testament to the preparation and planning done by our transportation team," Walsh said.

At the high school, there were some minor changes made in the drop-off routine due to the on-going construction of the artificial turf field and track at Alumni Field. But, Walsh said, parents and students were cooperative and the adjustments were made.

In visiting with the Osgood first and second graders, Walsh said she was impressed at how quickly and calmly they found their teachers and got into

Kasperowicz to run for Congress

Cohasset resident seeks Delahunt's seat

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

One of Cohasset's own intends to put his name on the ballot to run for the Massachusetts Tenth District.

Raymond Kasperowicz of 172 South Main St. confirmed last week he would seek election to the congressional seat currently held by Quincy Democrat, U.S. Rep. William Delahunt.

Calling himself a "citizen legislator," Kasperowicz, a republican, said he aims to bring a fresh perspective to the House of Representatives.

"I think Washington has lost touch with the average citizens out here," said Kasperowicz, 66. "I'd like to bring some normalcy, some common sense to the Capitol…and I'm tired of yelling at the TV."

Frustrated at the path the government has taken in many respects, Kasperowicz, a self-employed certified public accountant operating his own practice in Cohasset since 1980, said he decided to take action and run for Congress.

"Probably in March the thought came into my head that Washington needed a major dose of citizen perspective," he states in a campaign announcement.

Kasperowicz said citizens showed the right instincts when the economy turned sour.

"They hunkered down, reduced expenditures and increased savings. The federal government contemplated the opposite. It passed a stimulus bill to throw vast sums of dollars funded by debt — additional burden on the taxpayer and future generations," Kasperowicz stated.

When health-care reform came into focus in the early summer, Kasperowicz

Going to the dogs

Over 1,100 dogs call Cohasset home

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

From Abbey to Zulu and Airedale to Yorkshire terriers, Cohasset residents' "best friends" come in all different shapes and sizes.

Over 1,100 dogs are licensed in the Town of Cohasset, each one likely bringing a wagging tail, moist kisses, loyalty, and responsibility to its family.

Cohasset has plenty to offer an active dog: long walks and friendly furry pals in Wheelwright Park or Whitney-Thayer Woods, an early morning swim off Sandy Beach, or a game of fetch on the Common.

The Mariner caught up with new Osgood School teachers, Samantha Low and Beverly Bulkley, this week as they were getting their classrooms organized.

Names: Samantha Low and Beverly Elizabeth Bulkley.

Occupation: Kindergarten Teacher (Samantha). Second Grade Special Education (Beverly).

Best day of your life: My wedding day (Samantha). A beautiful summer day in July lobstering out of Green Harbor in Marshfield with my family (Beverly).

Favorite season: Summer (Samantha) Autumn! I love the falling leaves, apple picking, and of course, new school days! (Beverly).

Best book: Anything by Eric Carle (Samantha). "The Indian in the Cupboard," by Lynne Reid (Beverly).

Best movie: Finding Nemo (Samantha). Casablanca (Beverly).

Best TV show: 30 Minute Meals (Samantha). Everybody Loves Raymond (Beverly).

Best music, group, or artist: Country Music (Samantha). Celine Dion (Beverly).

Pet peeve: When people don't put their shopping carts into the corral (Samantha). The windows down in the car, and the wind blowing my face in the backseat! (Beverly).

Fun Fact: I once starred in a radio commercial for a pool company (Samantha). I go on a family canoe and camping trip for a weekend each year in August with my mom's side of the family. We canoe a different area of New England each year, and have family campfires every night! We have been doing this for 28 years! (Beverly).

Goal: To have a fun and exciting school year! (Samantha). I am so excited to be teaching in this beautiful and supportive town on the South Shore. My goal is to meet families in Cohasset and become a part of the Joseph Osgood school community! (Beverly).

Person you'd most like to meet: Eric Carle (Samantha). I would love to meet Eric Carle, and have him come into our school to teach dynamic writing and illustration to our students! (Beverly).

Biggest worry: That the school year will go by too fast (Samantha). I often think about how to best prepare my students to succeed in the 21st century. (Beverly).

Best part of Cohasset: Everyone at the Osgood School! (Samantha). I love the friendly and gifted staff that makes the Osgood such an outstanding place to grow! (Beverly).

18-year-old Quincy bridge jumper arrested

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police said the group, which appeared to be from out of town, was blocking the road. The boy who was arrested was openly defiant and challenged the officer.

An 18-year-old bridge jumper, who was defiant when approached by an officer, was arrested last week and charged with disorderly conduct and willful violation of a town bylaw (bridge jumping), police said. The Quincy teen was part of a large group of about 35 youth at the Border Street bridge on Wednesday (Aug. 26) at about 7 p.m.

When the officer arrived, he told the jumpers to disperse. Police said all of them did with the exception of the one teen. He climbed onto the railing and jumped into the river after the officer told him not to. The officer met the teen when he climbed out onto Government Island and made the arrest, police said. The teen was arraigned on the charges the next day in Quincy District Court.

Police said the group, which appeared to be from out of town, was blocking the road. The boy, who was arrested, was openly defiant and challenged the officer.

Witness

On Sunday (Aug. 30) at about 8:39 p.m. a 31-year-old Jerusalem Road man reported that a young man had taken off after being seen standing by the open door of the homeowner's car.

The car owner provided a description of a white man in his early 20s with a hooded sweatshirt and shorts. He left on a bicycle.

The case has been turned over to detectives who are trying to link evidence at the scene with the subject.

Stolen bike

A 13-year-old resident walked into the police station last week to report that his bicycle had been stolen from his front yard that is near the Little League fields on North Main Street. Police said the missing bike is a red and black Trek valued at $400. The teen looked at the bikes at the station that police have found abandoned and none fit the description.

Car break-in

A 65-year-old Scituate woman reported that someone entered her 2000 Volvo station wagon while it was parked in front of Atlantic Bagel. Police said the woman had been at dinner at the Red Lion Inn the evening of Tuesday (Aug. 25) when the apparent break-in occurred. Missing was a Canon Cybershot camera valued at $600, a book, and a needlepoint project the woman was working on. She reported the incident the following day (Aug. 26).

Red light

A 56-year-old Marshfield woman is being summonsed to court for operating on an expired license following a traffic stop last Thursday (Aug. 27) at CJC Highway and Pond Street at 6:47 a.m. Police said an officer on traffic assignment saw the Toyota SUV the woman was driving go through a red light. The officer pulled the woman over and a routine registry check revealed her license had expired on her birthday in July. Her car was towed.

Speeding

An officer on traffic assignment stopped a 55-year-old Foxboro man driving a 1999 Saturn for speeding near Hull and Cedar streets last Wednesday (Aug. 26) at 6:37 p.m. A registry check revealed the man had an expired license. He is being summonsed for operating on an expired license. He was also cited for speeding, police said. His car was turned over to a passenger who was properly licensed, police said.

Tailgating

A 22-year-old Weymouth woman operating a 2000 Isuzu Trooper was stopped for tailgating at 9:46 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 27). Police said she was only a few feet from the rear bumper of the car in front of her. She presented the officer with a valid New Hampshire driver's license but a computer check revealed her right to operate in Massachusetts had been suspended for non-payment of a speeding ticket in Newburyport. Police explained that a motorist can have a valid license in one state and have his or her right to operate suspended in another state. She is being summonsed for operating after license suspension and following too closely on a state highway. Her SUV was towed, police said.

Unregistered

An officer made a traffic stop on Friday (Aug. 28) at about 1:08 a.m. at Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road after running a registry check the plate of a gray Ford pickup with an expired registry sticker.

The officer ran a registry check through the cruiser's Mobile Data Terminal that revealed that the sticker had indeed expired and also that the registered owner's license had expired. The officer stopped the pickup and identified the operator as the registered owner. The 26-year-old Hingham man is being summonsed for unlicensed operation. The truck was towed.

Business B&E

Detectives are investigating an apparent attempted break-in at a local shop at West Corner. The owner reported that glass in the side door had been smashed and that both the front and side doors appeared as though someone had tried to pry them open with a crowbar No entry was gained, police said. Nothing was stolen. The incident was reported at 11:30 a.m. on Friday (Aug. 28). There were no witnesses but police have collected some evidence from the scene.

Spray paint

The manager of Dunkin Donuts on King Street reported vandalism to the drive up menu display that happened sometime between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. (Aug. 29-30).

Police said the vandal spray-painted obscenities on the menu display that had to be removed with a paint solvent. The incident remains under investigation.

In another incident, police are investigating the spray-painting of a stop sign at Wadleigh Park at Forest Avenue extension. In this case, bathroom slang was used. The sign has to be changed out, police said.

Hanging out

Police dispersed a group of teens hanging out near Tedeschi's in the village at about 8:15 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 29). While at the scene, police issued tickets for some cars that had parked over the time limit by the convenience store.

Truck hit

Police investigated an apparent hit and run of a parked truck near DiNero's on Sunday morning (Aug. 30). There was damage to the bed of the 1999 Ford pickup, owned by a Hingham man.

Off road

Reports of a car screeching its tires and racing up and down Atlantic Avenue turned out to be a 71-year-old motorist who went off the road in his 1991 Ford pickup and got hung up on a log. A tow truck had to be called to "unstick" the truck which had some damage to the undercarriage, police said. The incident occurred about 2:15 a.m. on Sunday (Aug. 30).

Intoxicated

Police responded to a report about a man stumbling along North Main Street near the train station on Sunday (Aug. 30) at about 12:50 p.m. Police gave the 63-year-old man a ride to his house which is just over the Hingham line.

All beaches open this week

This week, all Cohasset beaches are open for swimming. All six sampling locations and recreational swimming areas came back with results well within the state limits.

The Board of Heath takes water samples each Tuesday to ensure the ocean water is safe for swimming. If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

Bassing Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website. Testing results for all sampling stations are available on the Department of Public Health website dating back to the summer of 2002.

The most common health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

For more information on beach closures, please contact the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

said that was the tipping point for him, "at this point the thought crept into my ear that we've got to do something, and if there was no one stepping up, then maybe it's incumbent on me to do it."

Kasperowicz had some harsh words for Rep. Delahunt who, he said, "is no where to be seen."

"I think he needs to start worrying about the tenth district," Kasperowicz said.

Delahunt has represented the Tenth District in Congress since 1997. The 10th District includes the South Shore, the Cape and the Islands.

Kasperowicz has been active in local town government. From 1999 to 2008, he served on the Cohasset Sewer Commission. He also has a stint on the Advisory Committee in the 1980s. He said his professional and civic involvements have provided him a comprehensive understanding of municipal financial and fiscal policy.

Kasperowicz's campaign is still in its formative stage, he said. A campaign website (www.raykforcongress.com) is in the works. He is gathering a political team and has begun speaking at local republican events, he said.

A campaign advertisement has been running on local radio station WATD-FM 95.9.

"I think Washington has lost touch with the average citizens out here."

— Ray Kasperowicz, candidate

He envisions his campaign to reflect what his political style will be if elected. Calling it a "citizen's campaign," he is going to reach out and bring his message to the everyman in a grassroots campaign.

He said he would seek out support from individuals, not unions or big businesses.

"Big business will have no interest in me anyway…I think they are part of the problem," Kasperowicz said.

Kasperowicz said given the early stages, he is not sure if he will face competition.

"I don't know who will be in the field, but I know I am running," Kasperowicz said. "I'm thoroughly convinced someone like me can win."

Kasperowicz was born and raised in suburban Philadelphia and attended Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa. A veteran, he served two years active duty in the United States Navy and four years in the reserves. Upon completion of active duty, he entered the University of Rhode Island where he received a degree in accounting.

For 10 years he was an auditor at both Price Waterhouse and Gladstone & Chain, and also served as controller and treasurer of Walpole Woodworkers and Mutual Enterprises.

In 1980 Kasperowicz founded a CPA (certified public accountant) practice in Cohasset and still runs his business out of an office on Route 3A. He and his wife, Tanna, have lived in Cohasset for the past 34 years. They have two grown sons. Peter is a government affairs specialist working in Washington D.C. Thaddeus (Tad), a Navy veteran and CPA, joined the family business in 1998. Tanna is the publisher of the Tinytown Gazette, a bi-weekly newspaper serving Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate.

School Comm. meetings

The School Committee will continue to hold its meetings on the first and third Wednesdays of each month throughout the school year. The meeting schedule is subject to change, but generally there was a consensus among the School Committee members to keep the same schedule they have had for several years. All meetings are televised live on local cable station 22.

Eighth graders in HS sports

School Committee member Lucia Flibotte requested the School Committee review the policy that allows eighth graders to play high school sports in some instances. Flibotte said she had received some call from parents and had some questions and concerns she'd like the committee to discuss.

The committee established a policy where eighth graders could participate on high school sports teams if the school could not field a team with strictly high school students. The policy was established in 2007.

The issue will be discussed at the Wednesday, Sept. 16 meeting of the School Committee.

Planning board weighs associate

Sixth member would have say on special permits

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A sixth Planning Board member?

It could be possible.

At its Wednesday night meeting, the Planning Board mulled over the idea of having an "associate member" to sit in (and vote) on special permit applications.

For many years Planning Board chairman Al Moore said the board did not have to deal with special permits, but in recent years several bylaws have been put in place requiring the Planning Board to handle special permit applications.

Applications under the wind energy conversion bylaw, the transit oriented district bylaw, the cluster development bylaw and the village business district bylaw all require special permit approval.

The issue with special permits is four out of the five members have to approve the application in a unanimous vote. In addition, all the voting members have to present for all the public hearings and deliberations, or their vote can be called into question in an appeal.

"It's not a simple matter of one member blowing off a meeting – I think as a board we've been very good about attendance," Moore said. Rather, it was the unexpected absence that most concerned Moore.

For example, two years ago a member resigned from the board leaving the board in precipitous shape if a member had to miss a special permit hearing — or if an election was coming up and a member lost the election, or decided not to seek re-election. Moore said there could also be conflicts of interest where a member had to recuse himself from voting on an application.

More recently, an election fell in the middle of the special permit public hearing process for the Cohasset Heights wind turbine application. Former member Mike Westcott did not seek re-election and newly elected member Jean Healey Dippold could not vote on the project because she was not a board member through all the hearings. The board then had to reach a four-person unanimous vote for the project to be approved. It failed to get the "super majority" and was subsequently denied.

Vice chair Stuart Ivimey was "underwhelmed" by the idea, "I think there needs to be a strong, consistent point of view coming out of this board."

Ivimey worried a revolving set of associate members would be bad for consistency and predictability.

The associate member could be an elected position and it was the Planning Board members' feeling that would be more appropriate. Election to a longer term, about three years, seemed to be the consensus among the board members. Full board members are elected to five-year terms.

The associate member would be called into action when a special permit application is filed.

Legally speaking, Town Counsel Richard Hucksam said the Planning Board can have an associate member, but a warrant article requesting a bylaw amendment(s) and Town Meeting approval would be required.

Unlike some board who may use the associate members as a "training ground" before becoming a full-fledged member, Moore and other planning board members ideally would like to see someone with land use experience be elected to the position.

"Special permits is not something we want to break someone in on," Ivimey said.

Other town boards have associate members: the Zoning Board has three full members and three associate members. The Conservation Commission as well has two associate members alongside the full members.

The Planning Board directed Town Counsel to begin drafting a warrant article for Special Town Meeting (usually scheduled for sometime in November).

Rec plans busy season

Eight-page booklet out this weekend

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We're really excited with all the programs we're offering this year. We hope Cohasset residents will take full advantage."
— Ted Carroll, Recreation Director

There is something for everyone — even the dogs — this fall at the Cohasset Recreation Department.

From Legos to rock climbing to continuing education, recreation is looking forward to keeping the residents of Cohasset extremely busy.

To accommodate the many new programs — and returning favorites — Recreation Director Ted Carroll said he had to change the format of the fall brochure.

"We ran out of room in our old tri-fold style," Carroll said as he folded over the new eight-page booklet brochure containing all the programs, classes, and trips scheduled for the next four months.

"We brought back many of our favorites: fencing, babysitting, CPR, dog training. But, we're also expanding our offerings," Carroll said.

One of the programs Carroll is excited to offer the community is the opportunity to take online continuing education classes. An affiliation with www.ed2go.com has made available hundreds of options.

"The number of classes are just incredible," Carroll said. "It has everything from grant writing to an introduction to all Microsoft programs to website creation to photography. There are over 300 courses."

The online courses flexibility and affordability for those who can't make it to a class in person, Carroll said. Most classes cost about $100 and run for six weeks. Residents can sign up online from a link on the www.cohasset rec.com homepage.

"We're the only Rec Department on the South Shore offering it this fall," Carroll said. Winchester Recreation is offering the program on the North Shore. "It's a way for us to extend our programs and branch out to continuing education."

Ed2go.com is affiliated with several local colleges as well – Bridgewater State, Salem State, Massasoit Community College.

For the kids, the Rec Department has plenty of options. The monthly middle school dances will be back and a new program for fourth and fifth grade Friday parties has been added. Drama Kids, Dance with Caroline, Kitchen Kids, Kids Just Love Crafts, Computer Explorers and Story & Craft Hour are just some of the other kid's programming.

For parents looking for programs on those teacher professional days and December school vacation, the Rec Department has something to offer.

On Friday, Oct. 9, a scheduled school professional day, there are three options for kids. From 10 to 11a.m., there will be an all ages "drum circle," an interactive music-making experience. Then from 1 to 2:30p.m. there is a Frisbee workshop by two-time world freestyle champion. He'll teach kids age 7 and up to do tricks, throws and catches. Carroll is hoping for a nice day so both programs can take place on the Common.

For the middle school students, the Summer Xtreme team will take kids for an extreme paintball experience.

For December vacation week, there are multiple options: the Play-Well TEKnologies LEGO engineering program is back for two weeks, a special four field trip "vacation xtreme" for middle school students, and a "staycation" day camp at the Recreation Center.

"We're really excited with all the programs we're offering this year. We hope Cohasset residents will take full advantage," Carroll said.

One of the reasons Carroll has been able to expand the department's programming is because of a new recreation assistant 30 hour a week position. Mike Barra, one of the directors of the Summer Xtreme program, was hired for the position over the summer.

Sign up for all programs can be completed online (www.cohassetrec.com) or in person at the Recreation office on the first floor of Town Hall.

Carroll expected the brochure to be delivered to Cohasset mailboxes this Saturday, Sept. 5.

Poised and confident

Fashion Focus for girls comes to Community Center

Maria Wood created and teaches the Fashion Focus Modeling and Finishing Program.

Nothing is more beautiful than self-confidence.

That is the driving mentality — and mission — behind a new program being offered this fall at the South Shore Community Center.

Fashion Focus Modeling and Finishing Program, created and taught by Pembroke resident, Maria Wood, promotes a positive self-image for young girls.

"It's an opportunity to show the girls the building blocks for self-awareness, which leads to self-confidence," Wood said. Through lessons on poise, posture and confidence, skin care, fashion, balanced nutrition, social etiquette, Wood aims to bring out the best in each girl from the inside out.

As a teenager, like many young girls, Wood struggled with self-confidence and self-esteem. Through modeling, fashion and healthy living she was developed a strong sense of self and went on to become a successful model.

When she became a mother of two girls, she wondered how she would teach them to be self-confident in the face of increased media influence over how young women should look and act.

"As a mother you want to do the absolute best for them," Wood said. Knowing there were other girls out there facing the similar problems, she was inspired to start Fashion Focus Modeling and Finishing Program.

"I had a formula that worked for me, and I thought it might work for other girls…I wanted to teach something authentic and real."

Now, nearly 10 years after opening Fashion Focus, she is just as passionate about connecting with young women and giving them a foundation for future success as the day she opened.

One of the cornerstones of the program is keeping it relevant. Through interactive activities — role playing, short presentations, facials — Wood works to get to know the girls and bring out the best in them.

"For me, it's not about which fork and knife to use or walking with a book on your head. This program is a relevant way to communicate to young women that if they have the knowledge of how to interact with others and are confidence in themselves then the sky is the limit," Wood said.

For example, each other her age group classes showcase their skills in real-life situations. For the younger girls, it is hosting their mothers, grandmothers and siblings at a tea party. For the pre-teen girls, it's going to a restaurant in Boston. For the teenagers, she will take them to Macy's, ask them to pick out an interview outfit and a manager will ask them one interview-style question.

One of the most important aspects of the class is establishing a nurturing atmosphere and tone of acceptance. Her classes often bring together girls from around the South Shore and very quickly a dynamic group evolves. The more outgoing girls help the more shy girls to break out of their shell, Wood said.

"Once you've been accepted somewhere and experience that feeling of fitting in, nobody can take that away from you," Wood said. "When I see that light bulb go off or the girl's demeanor change, that's what motivates me. The connection with each girl is priceless. This has never been a business for me."

While modeling is in the program's title, Wood said it is only a small part of what the program does and is about. However, she said the girls have fun with it ("the girls really like the fashion") and walking down a runaway showcases the girls' confidence, posture and poise.

Each semester there is a Graduation Fashion Show where each girl wears her own outfit; proceeds go to different charities.

Wood stresses, "there's nothing wrong with wanting to like what you see in the mirror and looking nice, as it is tempered with a healthy lifestyle."

She talks to the girls about exercise, nutrition, eating disorders and encourages the girls to be happy and confident with who they are.

Fashion Focus will be offered on Tuesdays at the South Shore Community Center beginning Tuesday, Sept. 22. The Young Miss class (ages 5 to 9) will meet from 4 to 5p.m for 10 weeks at a cost of $230. The pre-teen class (ages 10 to 12) will meet from 5 to 6p.m. for 12 weeks for $275. The teen class (ages 13 to 18) will meet 6 to 7p.m. for 12 weeks for $275.

Noted landscape designer is guest speaker

Mark your calendars for a rare opportunity to hear Marie Stella, noted landscape designer and historian, describe fascinating, innovative ways to use plant material to clean your air, soil and water.

Highlights of her talk include: Biosulpture — beautiful living sculptures created from carefully chosen plants that also clean and filter water; New technologies for Rainwater and Greywater harvesting to irrigate your property above and below ground; Phytoremediation — which plants will clean soil and create a healthier environment for you and your family; and more — natural swimming pools without chemicals, dry gardening, the meadow, plant buffer zones, paving alternatives, water conserving mulches, the green eco roof.

Marie Stella holds degrees from Harvard, Vassar and NYU and currently teaches at the Arnold Arboretum, New York Botanical Garden and the Landscape Institute, among others.

The Cohasset Garden Club and the Cohasset Gulf River Association are sponsoring her lecture. It will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 16 at 7:30 p.m. at St. Anthony's Church Hall.

AROUND TOWN
JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

LONG WEEKEND

Hello Cohasset and Happy Labor Day Weekend to all! Make sure to enjoy the unbelievable weather in a safe, fun and memory filled weekend. I also want to wish all students from preschool through college an exciting and wonderful new school year. Make sure to send in your news about any events, school news, photos and celebrations for next week. Here is one from me and I know, a day late, a dollar short is my middle name!

Happy 21st Anniversary to my husband and me, which was yesterday, Sept. 3. Not sure what we did yet as it has not happened yet but hope you had a great day Bobby and have enjoyed (and endured) the last bunch of years.

SPECIAL DAY

A great lady in town had a birthday last Saturday, Aug. 29th and everyone wants her to know, HAPPY 29th, woops 39th, well whatever number it was you look great and certainly not your age! Happy Birthday Mary Snow from your family and friends. Here's to another fantastic year for you.

SCHOLARSHIPS

The Nancy Williams Memorial Foundation of Scituate this week awarded two $2,500 scholarships to Jillian DiNardo and Melanie Sardinha at the offices of Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology in Weymouth.

The women are the granddaughters of the late David Boyajian of Cohasset. Boyajian died of pancreatic cancer.

COURTESY PHOTO

The foundation funds pancreatic cancer research and supports the education of those whose lives have been affected by the disease.

"My mother really put a big value on education," said Joanne Williams, Nancy Williams' daughter. "We're trying to help students who need assistance to achieve the goal of a good education."

Nancy Williams of Scituate died in July 2007, just four months after she was diagnosed with late-stage pancreatic cancer. She was treated by Dr. James R. Everett, senior medical oncologist with Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology. Pancreatic cancer is especially deadly because it is often not detected until the disease is advanced and has spread to other parts of the body.

Dr. Everett said researchers are exploring news ways to defeat aggressive tumors like pancreatic cancer.

"A lot of the current research is aimed at finding targeted therapies that will help exploit a weakness in the cancer cell," said Dr. Everett, who has practiced on the South Shore for 31 years. "The therapy would hit a very vulnerable part of the cancer cell and avoid the need for treatments that harm healthy cells."

The foundation seeks to help families who have been affected by pancreatic cancer.

PEAK CLIMB

Congratulations to Scott Wilson for achieving his 46er! Scott completed his 46er last week when he climbed 9 peaks in 5 days. Scott has climbed all 46 peaks in the Adirondacks over 4,000 feet. The picture includes Chris Wilson (left), Scott Wilson (center) and Brendan Horigan (right).

This is a great accomplishment and you Scott should be so proud of what you have done. Nice news to share from your very proud parents, family and friends.

PARENTHOOD

Buttonwood Books & Toys welcomes author Katrina Kenison at Buttonwood on Wed. Sep. 23 at 7 p.m. Katrina will be discussing her new book, "The Gift of an Ordinary Day." Like her previous book, "Mitten Strings for God." Katrina offers parents support and perspective as they navigate the sea of parenthood.

That is all the news for this week. Too many outdoor and fun things to be doing with the weather being so nice and a holiday weekend that has arrived to send in the news. Make sure to start sending again next week no later than Tuesday by 5:00 pm.

Cohasset could practically field its own Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show it has so many different (and rare) breeds, but there are two breeds where there would be stiff and broad competition. Labrador Retrievers (yellow, black and brown) are far and away the most popular with 218 specimens (19 percent). Yellow and black labs are the most popular with about 80 each. Golden Retrievers are the runner-up with 124 scattered about town (10 percent).

With 68, the next most popular dog breed is the mixed breed or, as they are affectionately called, mutts.

Yet, some of those "mixed breeds" have come to have special names. Often called "designer" or "hybrid" dogs these two-breed combinations are scattered throughout the dog license list.

Among the most popular is the "cock-a-poo," a mix between a cocker spaniel and a poodle, of which there are nine in Cohasset. Labradoodles, a mix between a Labrador retriever and a Standard Poodle, and Golden Doodles, a cross between a Golden retriever and a Standard poodle, total 10 in number.

Others include a pek-a-poo, a mix of a Pekinese and a Toy poodle, a Papichon, a mix of a Papillon and a Bichon frise and a shi-poo, a Shih-tzu, poodle mix.

After the Labrador and Goldens, there is no clear third place breed. There are about two dozen of each of the following breeds: Jack Russell Terriers (27), Springer spaniel (26), Yorkies (26), Beagle (22), Cocker Spaniel (22), Bichon Frise (21), Shih tzu (21),

Of the 1,147 registered dogs in Cohasset, the split between male and female dogs is almost right down the middle. There are a total of 569 male dogs (480 are neutered) and 578 female dogs (511 are spayed).

Choosing a name of a new puppy addition can be a tough decision. But, there are several pet names Cohasset residents seem to gravitate toward.

Say the name "Molly" or "Lucy" too loud and you might just get 18 dogs running toward you. Those two female names tie for the most popular dog name in Cohasset; those names are followed closely by Daisy (15), the gender-neutral Bailey (14, 3 male, 11 female), Max and its derivatives (Maxi, Maxine, Maximus, etc.) (14).

Disney-inspired names pepper the list: Tinkerbell ("Peter Pan") to Simba ("The Lion King") to Nemo ("Finding Nemo") to Belle ("Beauty and the Beast").

There's a Chihuahua named Cujo, the title character in a Stephen King novel about a rabid dog that wreaks havoc on a New England town. There's a Beethoven, but he is a springer spaniel, not a St. Bernard like in the 1992 family comedy.

There are three dogs named Angus — a West Highland White Terrier, a Siberian Husky and a Bernese Mountain Dog.

Two dogs in Cohasset are named Oreo and, perhaps not surprisingly, both dogs sport black and white markings.

There are two Angels, but only one "Lucifer," a black flatcoat retriever, in Cohasset (but one creative owner named their Beagle "Lucy-Fur").

At least two huge Red Sox fans reside in Cohasset — if naming their dog "Fenway" is any evidence.

Many names stand on their own with no other licensed dog sharing the same name including Duncan, Comet, Copernicus, Vader, Lego, Mr. Magoo, Mugsy and Precious.

Portuguese water dogs, the same breed as the Obama's First Dog, Bo, and the late Senator Ted Kennedy beloved pets, are 14 in number. One dog, a black lab, shares the same name as the First Dog, but its owners spell it "Beau."

All dogs are required to be licensed, which entails bringing a copy of their rabies vaccination to the office. If the dog is spayed or neutered (and the majority in Cohasset are), the license fee is reduced from $15 to $8. Licenses must be renewed every year, and applications are mailed out with the census. A $25 late fee is levied for an unlicensed dog after May 1.

The license period each year is from January 1 to December 31.

Dog owners are required to adhere to all the animal control bylaws. One of the rules is the "pooper scooper" law, which mandates an owner pick up after his/her dog after it relieves itself.

The town also requires that a dog be under its owner's control at all times — meaning it must be leashed or closely supervised. The fine for the first infraction of animal control bylaws is $25, and it increases with each offense.

Note: Breed and name information derived from the Town Clerk's master dog license database. Variations on how dog breed information was provided by the owner (i.e. yellow lab vs. Labrador retriever) may have led to some discrepancy in the ultimate tallies.

their lines. Osgood kindergarten and pre-school students will begin the regular school routine on Tuesday, Sept. 8. Yet both grades were at Osgood to meet with teachers, classmates and check out the classrooms.

"Each school, each grade level has a different entry plan to smooth the transition," Walsh said.

The way the calendar fell this year has allowed Cohasset Schools a pretty unique start to school. Students went back to school for two days, then Friday they were off again for a long four-day weekend and will begin school in earnest (homework and all) on Tuesday.

"The first two days have allowed the teachers to set up the syllabus, distribute the text, fill out forms. These are all things that have to be done in the first days of school," Walsh said, adding families appreciated having the chance to celebrate the long Labor Day weekend.

"It's a last chance to enjoy the summer, yet parents, students and teachers have the first day out of the way," Walsh said. On Tuesday it's down to business."

The school community and town at large have the completion of the turf field to look forward to at the end of September. The artificial turf went down this week and the crews are working into the night to complete the track over the next few weeks. The aim is to have the field complete by the first home football game on Sept. 25.

"We'll be able to put that to good use, everyone is excited about it" Walsh said.

Cohasset Day is child's play

In addition to shopping, music and more

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The countdown begins. The 2nd annual Cohasset Day is one week from tomorrow, Sept. 12th from 12:30 – 6 p.m. and there will be something for everyone from age 1 to 100. The downtown will be closed to vehicular traffic and all will be encouraged to stroll through the stores and browse and shop the sidewalk tables that will be lining the streets. The village is not the only site of Cohasset Day. All are encouraged to head over to the Common for some good ole' fashioned fun.

"Generally speaking what we're trying to do is make the kids aspect of Cohasset Day filled with old fashioned spirit, like that of a true hometown fair," says Thom Powers, who with along wife Christine, who works at Caldwell Banker (sponsor of the dunk tank), and serve as co-coordinators of Kids Games on the Common for Cohasset Day.

"We wanted it to be time off from video games and electronics. We want kids and adults to roll up their sleeves and participate in the tug of war and three legged races. Fun…pure and simple."

The Powers have planned a "back to basics" afternoon for the kids including hometown games like a dunk tank to drench the "lucky" volunteer who will be perched above the water waiting for some great throwing arms to send him or her to the watery depths of the tank (if younger arms are not strong enough, running up and pushing the lever with both hands is also effective.). There are also smaller, sweeter activities for the youngest among us, like eating a Dunkin' Donut from a string. For some of the older kids it will be smooth sailing on the duck pond, which is newly cleaned courtesy of the local boy scouts. The pond will actually be filled with several rowboats for kids to use and possibly have relay races in. According to Thom Powers, last year the boats served as a great photo opportunity for a bride and groom who were married at a church on the common that afternoon.

"Touch a Truck" is always a hit and will be located in the Town Hall parking lot. Among the touchable vehicles will be a fire engine, squad car, fire truck and an ambulance all accompanied by Cohasset's finest who can help explain the vehicles purpose to the kids. A dump truck and backhoe will also be parked for all to see…and touch.

Parents take note…there is one significant change to the schedule of events. The kid's Duathlon has been cancelled.

"In the interest of our children's safety", said Bill Burnett. "I feel its best that we cancel the event this year.....please be assured we will definitely be back next year."

The route, which was to include the streets around the Common will not be fully paved in time for the event and poses a significant hazard to young athletes. Burnett — organizer of the run, bike, run — along with Peter Brown and the Cohasset Day Committee, made the decision to remove the Duathlon from the full kid's menu of Cohasset Day activities.

All the moving parts that make this day happen are being finalized and the excitement is building thanks to the beautiful posters, banners and brochures designed and produced by Twist Creative Group. The husband and wife team of Joyce Whitman and Keith Conforti of Cohasset have created a "brand" that will be as lasting and memorable as this new town tradition.

As the day draws nearer, residents are encouraged to go to Darilynn's, French Memories in Cohasset Village or Stop & Shop (Cohasset) to purchase tickets for the Fine Food Galore event — an event within the overall Cohasset Day-which will take place from 4-6 p.m. on South Main Street in the Village. This gastronomic aspect of Cohasset Day, which includes local fare by more than 23 local eateries, is the only one for which there is a fee.

Every other Cohasset's Day activity can be considered "priceless" — the fun and camaraderie of being among familiar and new faces will come free. In addition there will be a parade procession down Main Street featuring the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Decorated Bike Parade, Decorated Dog Parade, music from the Rusty Skippers and local sports teams and groups all coming together to march and show their town pride. There will also be a special Saturday edition of the Farmer's Market and Historic Society buildings will be free and open to the public.Everyone is invited to come learn more about Cohasset's rich history.

The South Shore Art Center will be featuring Our Towns: Scene & Unseen an exhibition showing almost 90 works that capture the beauty, light, and inspirations of the South Shore.

During the day, artist demonstrations and class "samplers' will be ongoing at the Art Center and throughout the village. Please plan to attend the opening reception for Our Towns, on Cohasset Day, Sept. 12 from 6-8 p.m. Artists interested in demonstrating throughout the village should contact dkennedy@ssac.org

Another main attraction for many on Saturday the 12th will be the 2nd annual Classic Car Concours. Public viewing and people's choice awards judging will take place after the cars cruise down Main Street. Details on that and some featured cars will appear in next week's Mariner, along with more details about the much anticipated Fashion Show which will feature clothes from all three of Cohasset's boutiques including Ports, Pink Tulip and Wendy's Closet..

Bells will be ringing on Cohasset Day courtesy of resident Mary Kennedy from 12 – 1 p.m... The beautiful music of St. Stephen's world class carillon is one of the things that make our town so unique. Other music will include the Jackson Weatherbee Band and Drift Away with J. Place.

Cohasset Day is a joint initiative of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Economic Development Committee. Donations will be made to the Council on Elder Affairs, the Cohasset Food Pantry and the American Legion.

Workers' champion

Labor Day will be overcast no matter what the weather is like on Monday.

As we light the grill and toss together a salad for the traditional cookout that is the highlight of the worker's dream of a three-day weekend, the loss of a tireless champion of the people will cast a tinge of sadness over the day.

So many people today are living their dream because U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy refused to accept that any dream was unreachable.

Kennedy, a strong voice in Congress, was deeply loved by those who had no voice in those grand halls.

Kennedy, 77, passed away at his home in Hyannisport surrounded by his family after a valiant battle with brain cancer lasting more than a year.

Labor Day is a day when those who have worked hard through the summer can enjoy the fruits of their labor.

Massachusetts has also lost a champion.

Thousands paid their final respects to Kennedy at a public viewing in the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum in Boston. So many people came that viewing hours were extended to 2 a.m.

Countless thousands watched on television the moving Celebration of Life memorializing Kennedy at the JFK Library Friday evening.

Everyone viewing had glimpses of Kennedy's sense of humor. Each distinguished speaker had at least one anecdote of Kennedy's trademark wit.

Today most people think of Labor Day as a time for family cookouts and fun as summer wanes. For sports fans, Labor Day kicks off the football season for the NFL and on college campuses around the country.

Just for this year, as we remember Sen. Kennedy, let's think of the deeper meaning of Labor Day, for this holiday originally served a serious purpose.

Labor Day, first observed in the United States on Sept. 5, 1882, was imported from Canada by American labor leader Peter J. McGuire.

In those days, the occasion featured speeches and parades intended to show "the strength and espirit de corps of the trade and labor organizations" before culminating in a festival for workers, according to online encyclopedia Wikipedia.

Labor Day honors the worker, as Kennedy did.

Labor Day is a monument to the work ethic. Love may make the world go round, but the work ethic keeps the world stable.

Labor Day is a day when those who have worked hard through the summer can enjoy the fruits of their labor.

Think of the fable about the ant and the grasshopper. The ant strove all summer long to store up food for the winter, while the grasshopper fiddled away the months. When fall came along, with winter not far behind, the ant could enjoy the last days of summer with the peace of mind that came from working hard and being prepared. The frivolous grasshopper hopped frantically around in circles, not knowing what he was going to do in the months ahead.

Sometimes, though, fables need updating.

It's part of the American creed that hard work equals getting ahead, yet the reality of the ant and the grasshopper is that sometimes the ant works hard and circumstance squashes the anthill.

Kennedy advocated tirelessly for the worker, the needy, the disadvantaged, and the disabled. He strove for equal opportunity for all.

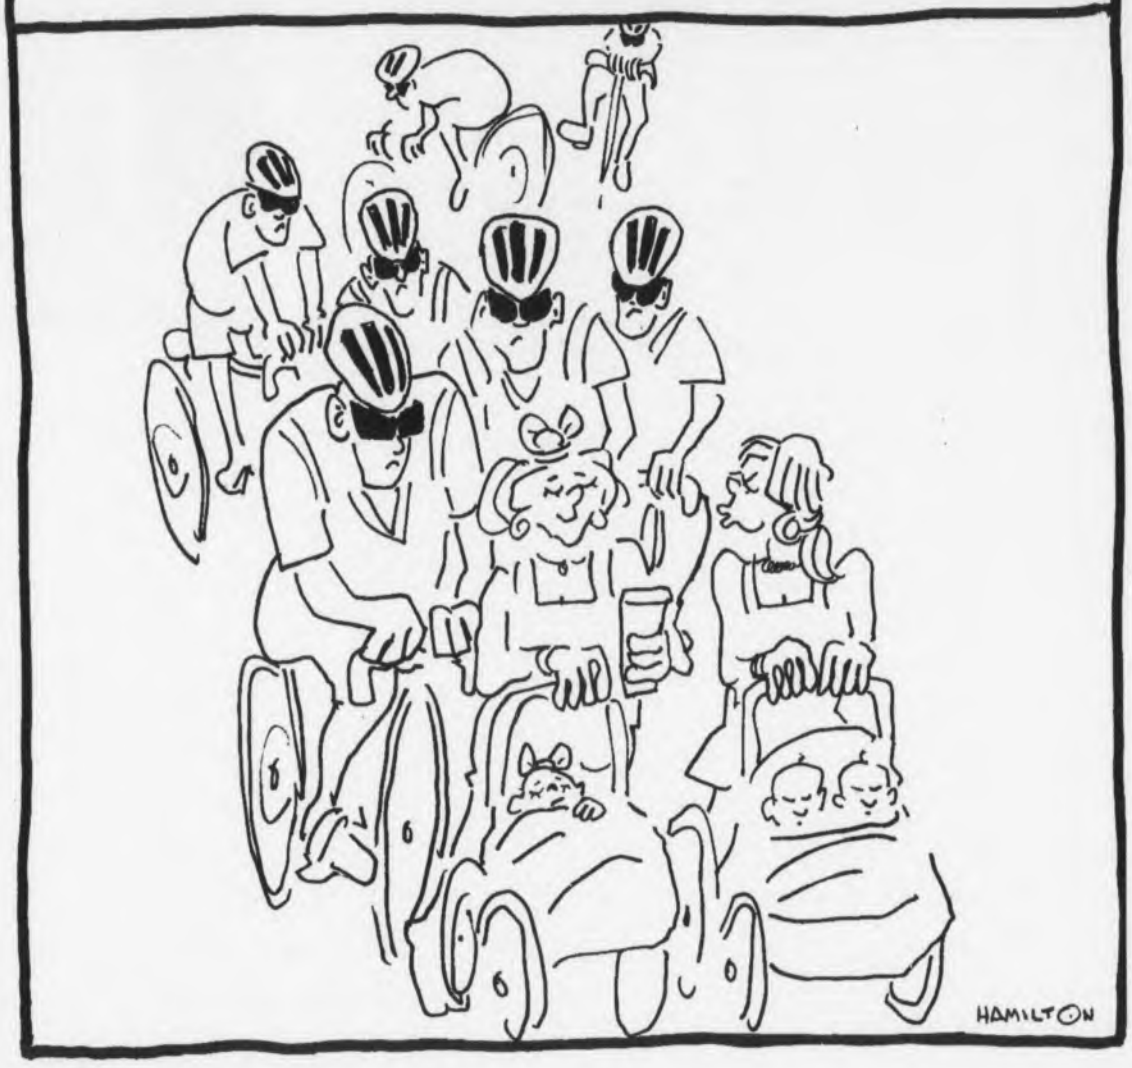
This song sums up why Kennedy is so honored by so many.

Through even personal tragedy and hardship, Kennedy kept this song in his heart as he strove to make a better life for the guy and gal who are struggling for their place in the American dream.

Ants, rejoice!



Keep on working and keep on reaching for that impossible dream, because Ted Kennedy proved that nothing is beyond reach if you keep hope in your heart and keep on trying.

The legacy of Kennedy, the star those who mourn him will continue to follow, is to make the impossible a possibility.

One commentator noted that although Kennedy had been a senator, the nation had bid him a presidential farewell.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Starting blocks are great!

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Swim Center and the Cohasset Swim and Dive Team, we would like to thank the South Shore Playhouse for their generous donation used to refurbish the starting blocks used for practice and at our home swim meets.

Dating back to the mid-1970s, these starting blocks were in desperate need of reconditioning and the South Shore Playhouse granted us the funds in order to have this work done during the off-season. Our swimmers have commented on how sturdy and straight they are and that they really make a difference in their race starts! Thank you for your generosity.

MINOT LIGHT POLL RESULTS

The United States General Services Administration, is looking for a new caretaker for Minot Light, the 115-foot structure, which has guarded the rocks near Cohasset Harbor since 1860. They have made the structure available to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge.

Which organization should take care of Minot Light?

105 voted in the Cohasset Mariner poll on line. Here are the results:

- Cohasset Historical Society: 13 percent (14 votes)
- Town of Cohasset: 7 percent (7 votes)
- Joint effort between the towns or historical societies: 39 percent (41 votes)
- New organization specifically created to "fundraise" and maintain Minot Light: 31 percent (33 votes)
- Other (Town of Scituate, Scituate Historical Society, or none of the above: 10 percent (10 votes).

On-line comments:

David Wadsworth: It now seems that the National Park Service is in the running to take over the responsibility for Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. The Coast Guard would retain responsibility for the optics and fog whistle. Minot's Ledge Light is listed in the National Register of Historic Places, which is a branch of the National Park Service. Local and area organizations could come on board as interested parties. And the Boston Harbor Islands organization could play a role. From the financial view it would seem important that an organization such as the Park Service, that would have deeper pockets than any local group, be the party responsibility for maintenance and repair (particularly the latter) to the structure. The Park Service already has a stake in the well being of the light though its National Register listing. Letters of support for this solution written to the appropriate authorities would be welcome.

R. Murray Campbell: Although the Coast Guard will maintain the light for a while, it is only a matter of time before it ops out. Electronics and satellites render the light unnecessary. For some organization to keep it operating for sentimental/historical reasons would be costly. If not operating, it isn't much of a museum, except as a pillar of stone, because few will be able to visit it. It will need a financially strong and dedicated organization to take it over meaningfully (as opposed to just owning it and doing nothing).

Paving projects are looking good!

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – Last week, miracles of miracles, Nichols Road and all of its side roads received their final paving. The project required three full days of paving, starting about 7:00 in the morning to between 4 to 4:30 PM. We are extremely pleased with the way the road turned out.

At the base of Nichols Road, near Atlantic there was a large puddle that normally collected against the hill near a catch basin that never seemed to properly collect the storm water. The puddle would extend halfway across the road causing the traffic to swing wide to avoid the water. The paver was able to re-contour the area so that after last Saturday's rain event the puddle was mostly gone.

T L Edwards, our paving contractor, paved about one third of Nichols and the adjacent side roads each of the three days. Edwards was able to do the paving in such a way that nearly no seams show. First, they paved the side roads along about one third of Nichols. Then, Edwards did that part of Nichols itself. By doing the side roads in an area, and then going back to do Nichols proper, Edwards could still blend the Nichols paving in with the side road paving and make the seam nearly "disappear."

Edwards' paving technique for Nichols was also interesting. Some pavers will pave one half of a main road, like Nichols, and then pave down the other side. This tends to leave a seam between the two paving strips that somehow never seem to blend perfectly. Edwards used two paving machines, one slightly ahead of the other. But, actually they were actually paving the whole road width at nearly the same time. The very first thing they did was roll the place where the two strip met. Since both strips were still very hot, they blended perfectly under the asphalt roller. Voilá! An excellent paving job!

Coming Paving Work – This week we raised the structures on Rust Way, Jerusalem Road Drive, Haystack Lane, Joy Place and Gammons Road. These will be the next in the paving sequence, possibly next week or the following week.

We get lots of questions about "When are you going to pave the Common?" The real answer is that, very unfortunately, it will be a while. As it turns out there are about 23 structures that were raised that somehow were damaged in the process. We are in the process of trying to get contractors lined up to correct the damage as well as work with the contractors who are responsible for the damage. But, we expect it could take several weeks to get this corrected.

Other Stuff – This week we were sitting in our palatial office thinking about what might be of interest to our readers and we thought we'd talk about some of the more mundane things we get involved in during the course of our day. As we have mentioned before on the Little Harbor Project, we work in concert with the Cohasset DPW in support of the paving, which is their responsibility. (Once again, we'll mention that the reason is that the DPW is doing the paving is that, as a member of a South Shore bidding consortium, they can get better prices for paving than LM Holdings the project contractor.)

Nichols Looking From Jerusalem.

As a result of our daily contact with our DPW, we are pressed into service in a variety of ways to support them. For example, one of their major concerns is the inevitable collateral damage that often occurs to Town infrastructure as a contractor passes nearby with their work. One of the DPW's greatest concerns is that some damage might have been done to the drainage systems that we depend on for our roads. So, whenever the DPW sees poor drainage near a construction zone, they look for a cause.

On Jerusalem Road Drive adjacent to the new sewer line, the DPW found slow drainage in one of their lines. There are numerous potential causes for slow drainage from catch basins to the supporting underground pipes. Causes such as broken pipes, blocked pipes can always be an issue. In this particular situation the DPW turned to one of their newest high-tech devices, a fiber optic camera. They have a camera that is about 2 or 3 inches in diameter and has a powerful built-in light source. This camera fits on the end of a long fiber optic cable and can be inserted into a pipe from an access manhole. A photo of the cable on its reel accompanies this article.

The camera is threaded into the pipe in question and the interior of the pipe can be viewed from an operator's console mounted in a DPW truck. Thus, the crew can easily see the interior of the pipe and its condition. Occasionally, the camera becomes useless if the camera becomes totally submerged in water or muck. But, the camera does give a good idea of the pipe condition quite easily.

Since both strips were still very hot, they blended perfectly under the asphalt roller. Voilá! An excellent paving job!

In this particular case, the DPW was worried about a potential pipe break. The next step in their investigation was to see if the could flush the pipe to clear it. A large hose from a near-by fire hydrant was fed into the pipe's upstream manhole. The crew carefully watched the downstream manhole for any signs of flow making it through the blockage. Sure enough, finally debris laden water began to flow through the pipe from the hydrant water. The water substantially flushed the pipe out so that drainage in the area was restored. That not only saved an extensive repair; but enabled us to proceed with paving this area in the near future. Another day in the life of the DPW and more problems solved.

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

For the fourth time this summer, Sandy Beach was buried in several inches of seaweed last week, this time as a result of Hurricane Bill's off shore rage. To preserve the delicate nature of beaches, municipalities along the U.S. coastline have imposed strict guidelines regarding clean-up following a storm. In Cohasset, the trustees of the Sandy Beach Association work with the Conservation Commission to both protect Sandy Beach's fragility and provide a safe environment for Cohasset's residents.

Seaweed is manna to sea creatures and gardeners, and when left lying lifeless on sand, it decomposes and becomes part of the cycle of renewal for the life of the beach; however, when the beach is part of a recreational area, the dying kelp can be a nuisance to beachgoers — it harbors potentially dangerous flotsam and waste, producing flies and odors. Indeed, the sea gulls eventually eschew its motley treasures.

Even a moderate storm leaves a good amount of detritus on Sandy Beach, which is raked and tidied up by the lifeguards and beach maintenance workers. But when a major storm hits and leaves several inches of debris, it is necessary to have the seaweed removed. Until recently, the seaweed had been sent to an out of town compost area; however, thanks to the efforts of Gary Barrow, Hurricane Bill's seaweed was delivered to the compost piles at Holly Hill Farm. So next summer, though most of us won't remember Bill, we will benefit from the enduring cycle of life that Bill's fury contributed to as Holly Hill farmers turn the kelp into the soil where tomatoes, spinach, squash, etc. will set down deep roots and flourish.

Years ago, when there were no laws governing access to washed up seaweed, Cohasset residents would bring their shopping bags to the coast following a storm and fill them up for their mulch or compost piles. (Today, seaweed cannot be removed from Sandy Beach without the approval of the Conservation Commission.) Kelp is rich in silica, which is the quartz that whitens our sand and helps aerate and strengthen growth cells; it also contains heavy deposits of granite, which grays our sand and contains precious trace elements. Nitrogen, phosphate, potassium, minerals, vitamins, amino acids, plant hormones, and carbohydrates are all found in common weeds from the sea.

When a major storm hits and leaves several inches of debris, it is necessary to have the seaweed removed from Sandy Beach.

Seaweed is an excellent fertilizer and soil conditioner; it affects seed germination, disease resistance, and root development. Because it is 90 percent water, there is little matter left after decomposition. If it were incorporated into the landfill's compost, it would encourage oxygen-loving bacteria and microbes to break down herbicides and pesticides that might be present because of additions from chemically treated lawns and shrubs, thus yielding up a chowder of gold for all good things we nurture in the soil. Seaweed or enriched compost can be dug into garden earth or left on the surface as a mulch.

Caution

Never, under any circumstances, remove live seaweed from rocks or shoreline. Living kelp is a source of food and shelter for many small creatures such as periwinkles, mollusks, crustaceans, etc.

(Sandy Beach Association wishes to thank Gary Barrow and Marylou Lawrence for collaborating on this informative article and especially for their green thinking which has enabled the trustees to make seaweed removal an environmental benefit.)

Plenty of timely topics in September!

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

By the time this goes to print the short summer will be practically over. Children will be back in school, older teens off to college, some just beginning their first year, and most summer vacations over.

So, too, the Senior Center is starting its fall schedule. Wednesday seminars are beginning again in September at 11 a.m. followed by lunch. The topics have been planned through the month. They are as follows: Health Care Reform, Reverse Mortgages, Elder Hostel's Adventures, and Managing Your Blood Pressure. We are looking forward to the re-opening of the Cohasset Café at the Light Keepers Cottage on Sept. 14. Come and enjoy coffee and pastries with friends old and new.

Many thanks to the Golden Living Center for inviting us to lunch on three occasions during the summer. In August a group enjoyed a great trip to nearby Hull. Jack Buckley drove the van, taking us on a tour of parts of Hull that most of us had never seen. We made a stop at Fort Revere before going on to Allerton Point, were we could see some of the harbor islands as well as Graves Light. Jack had thoughtfully prepared a map of the island for each one present. Then on we went to Raphael's where we were joined by members of the staff for a delightful dinner.

Now we are looking forward to Anna's End of Summer Picnic at the Sailing Club on Sept. 10.

Now we are looking forward to Anna's End of Summer Picnic at the Sailing Club on Sept. 10. Also a trip is planned to Cambridge Side Galleria, where we will lunch at the Cheesecake Factory before going for a cruise on the Charles River. This event will take place on Sept. 22. Be sure to get your reservations in as this trip is popular and fills up early. If your wish to have your name on the list, call 781-383-9112.

Scituate COA has invited Cohasset seniors to join them on two excursions. One is to the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, with lunch at Maggiano's Little Italy restaurant. The other is a trip aboard the Winnipesaukee Turkey Train, where you will enjoy a full turkey dinner while passing by the beautiful scenery. On the return trip there will be a stop at the Apple Hill Farm. For information about the Scituate trips and to make reservations, call Carolyn Sachs at 781-545-8722.

REMEMBERING TED KENNEDY

Editor's Note: Members of our Readers Advisory Network were asked if they had any reflections about U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy to share.

Internship

Upon graduating from the University of Massachusetts with a Bachelor of Arts degree in political science and urban studies, I was honored to be afforded an internship in Senator Edward Kennedy's Capitol Hill Office. This was a prized internship as evidenced by the other interns that I met who were from the nation's top universities.

My college mentor, Dr. Robert C. Wood, an adviser to President Kennedy and President Johnson, and former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, had recommended me for the position. Dr. Wood wanted to be sure that I was given meaningful work and was not in the "boiler room".

The Senator was a member of the Judiciary Committee and I was assigned to work with the Legislative Aide for this committee. The Senator's work ethic was immense, and thusly, so was his staff's; and the work never stopped. In meeting the Senator for the first time, I was taken by his wonderful kind manner and his interest in me, my background and most of all his warmth. This welcoming feeling was always present in all interactions with Senator Kennedy. The time spent working for him left a lasting impression on me and fueled my desire for public service. This service has led me to a career in working to advance health care reform initiatives here in the Commonwealth for the past fifteen years.

Compassionate justice

At the barely ripe age of 20-something, when I was a graduate student at New York City's Union Theological Seminary and the war in Vietnam was raging, other seminarians and I journeyed to Washington, DC for a visit to the office of Senator Ted Kennedy. These were his early years in the U.S. Senate, but even then he took chances on the side of compassionate justice, opposing a war that should never have been fought and seeking to reach out across the humanly — albeit not humanely — crafted barriers of friend and enemy. I remember sitting alongside my fellow seminarians astride one of the desks in Kennedy's office, as the young senator listened to us make our case to send humanitarian supplies — medicine and blankets — to the North Vietnamese.

Just a few years ago, I sat in Quincy's Church of the Presidents, a Unitarian Universalist church whose undercroft holds the remains of John Adams, Abigail Adams, John Quincy Adams, and Louisa Catherine Adams. With hundreds of other concerned citizens, I listened to an aging senator with a booming voice that had not lost one decibel of audibility or one iota of eloquence, speak out on behalf of a living wage for our fellow residents. Ted Kennedy was there as part of a campaign called, "Let Justice Roll," echoing the proclamation of the 8th century BCE prophet Amos.

Senator Edward Moore Kennedy listened and acted for 46 years on behalf of compassionate justice. As a Unitarian Universalist minister, I believe compassionate justice is what bridges caring religion and caring politics. Yes, Kennedy was definitively human; he acknowledged publicly his faults and sometimes perilous foibles. For the millions of lives he has saved worldwide through the policies and practices for which he has worked relentlessly, I as minister, mother, grandmother, citizen, and woman, am forever grateful.

— Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull
First Parish in Cohasset

My family will be eternally grateful to Senator Kennedy for his part in assisting us and his caring attention.

Missing Marine

In 1968 we were a young family with small children living in Cohasset. My family lived in Hull and The Vietnam War was on. My 18-year-old brother Jimmy enlisted in the Marines and was sent to Vietnam after completion of Boot Camp. My mother worked at the Hull Middle School as a "Cafeteria Lady."

One day the Principal called down to the Cafeteria and asked my mother to come up to his office. When my mother arrived she was greeted by two marines in dress uniforms who informed her that Jimmy had been missing in action for about two days and we would be contacted by government /military personnel. Needless to say, the family was devastated by this news and feared the unknown. The Marines left a letter with contact numbers to call the military for updates whenever we wanted to.

After three days of calls going back and forth with no new information, my father, who was non-partisan politically, called Senator Kennedy's office to see if he could help us get information.

His staff told us they would let the Senator know and they would get back to us. Within two days Senator Kennedy called us to tell us that Jimmy had been found, badly wounded but alive, and had been taken to a hospital ship off the coast of Vietnam. The ship would be heading to the states with all the wounded to be sent to hospitals for care. He let us know that we should be getting more detailed information from the Military and if we didn't hear from them within the next two days to call him back. Senator Kennedy called several times after that checking up on Jimmy and our family up to and including the time when Jimmy was transferred back here to the Chelsea Naval Hospital.

My family will be eternally grateful to Senator Kennedy for his part in assisting us and his caring attention.

May God Bless you Senator and give you peace.

— Joan Brown, Cohasset

Biafra

This past week there have been legions of stories of Senator Kennedy reaching out quietly and without publicity to help ordinary individuals in need of assistance.

I would like to add to that list of stories. In about 1967, the Biafrans attempted to secede from Nigeria in order to control the oil wealth of the country that resided in the Biafran territory. The State Department did not intervene because it feared the balkanization of all of Africa. Nigeria did not have the military strength to conquer the territory but it did have the resources to cut if off from food supplies and use starvation as a weapon of war.

In the US church groups rallied to provide relief to those starving in Biafra led by Catholic Relief Services, Church World Service and the United Jewish Appeal who collected funds and shipped food to a little island off the Biafran coast – Fernando Po. There the food languished because of a naval and daylight air blockade by the Nigerians. A survey by the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, that sent a team to Biafran, measured the highest rate of starvation ever measured – 40%.

The church groups appealed for help to Senator Kennedy and Speaker McCormick who went to President Johnson 10 days before leaving office and asked for the release of mothballed C-97 aircraft to fly the food into Biafra. President Johnson ordered the release of 15 C-97's and these planes became the backbone of a nighttime air operation from Fernando Po into the Uli airstrip in Biafra – it was the busiest airport in all of Africa.

Tragically the relief operation was not sufficient, it is estimated that 4-5 million Biafrans died of starvation and the Biafrans were forced to surrender. Without Senator Kennedy's direct intervention with the President, the airplanes would never have been released and perhaps millions more would have died of starvation. Tragically, that failure of the US to act was the precursor to a continued policy of US inaction in the face of multiple genocides in Africa that have occurred in the last 50 years.

Senator Kennedy's role was never made public. He never took credit for it to my knowledge but it is emblematic of Kennedy's career to respond to human suffering and reach out with the influence in his command to help relieve the suffering of others – sometimes, as with Biafra, on an unimaginably horrendous scale.

Having been in Nigeria in the Peace Corps before the civil war, I was active in Biafran relief groups and go to see Senator Kennedy's contribution first hand.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate during the week of August 24-28.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of "per diems" collected by the 40 state senators in 2009 for mileage, meals and lodging expenses. The list reveals that senators have collected a total of $51,685. Per diems are paid by the state to senators "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse."

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. These payments are not taxable and range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Senators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often are the ones who collect the highest total of annual per diems.

The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. Supporters of the hikes defend the raise and note that the per diems had not been increased for many years despite the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. Some opponents say that the hikes were excessive and noted that most other private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others argue that the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when the state is in the midst of a recession, funding for important programs has been cut and taxes have been raised.

These per diems are paid to senators above and beyond their annual salaries which in January 2009 were raised 5.5 percent from $58,236 to $61,439 under the terms of a constitutional amendment approved by the voters in 1998. The amendment requires legislative salaries to be increased or decreased biennially at the same rate as the state's median household income for the preceding two-year period - as ascertained by the governor.

All 40 senators also receive additional stipends ranging from $7,500 to $35,000 for serving as committee chairs or in other leadership positions. This means that the lowest salary that any of the 40 senators receive is $68,939 while the highest is $96,439.

The 2009 statistics indicate an even split with 20 senators who have received per diem payments ranging from $410 to $7,470 and 20 senators who have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The senator who received the most per diem money in 2009 is freshman Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) with $7,740. Downing is one of 40 senators but he received almost 15 percent of the total per diems collected in 2009 by all 40 senators. The other recipients in the top five include Sens. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst) $6,540; Michael Knapik (R-Westfield) $5,676; Harriette Chandler (D-Worcester) $3,996 and Stephen Brewer (D-Barre) $3,105.

LOCAL SENATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2009

The dollar figure next to the senator's name represents the total amount of 2009 per diem money that the state has paid the senator through August 24. The number in parentheses represents the number of days that the senator certified that he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

A total of 20 or half of the state's 40 senators did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean that these 20 senators were never at the Statehouse in 2009. It simply means that they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

KENNEDY SEAT - Debate has intensified on Beacon Hill and across the nation over whether Gov. Deval Patrick should be granted the power to appoint a temporary short-term replacement for the late Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Shortly before his death, Kennedy urged state lawmakers to approve a proposal that would amend a 2004 state law that took away the power of the governor to appoint a temporary replacement to fill any U.S. Senate seat that becomes vacant in Massachusetts. Prior to 2004, the law stated that the governor would name a replacement that would serve out the remainder of the term and also be eligible to run for the seat at the next regular election. The 2004 law, now in effect, does not allow a temporary replacement to be appointed and instead requires that a special election be held within 145 and 160 days.

Democrats in 2004 feared that then Republican Gov. Mitt Romney would have the opportunity to appoint a Republican to fill Sen. John Kerry's seat if Kerry won the 2004 November presidential election. That GOP appointee, under the pre-2004 law, would have served in the U.S. Senate for four years until the regular Senate election in 2008.

Kennedy's new plan would leave the special election in place but also allow the governor to appoint a short-term temporary replacement until a new senator is elected. Kennedy also urged that the appointee, as a condition of his or her appointment, promise not to run in the special election.

Supporters of the Kennedy plan argue that in light of Kennedy's death, the state under current law would not have a second senator for some five months. They say that the appointment power is necessary in order to ensure full and continuous representation for Massachusetts in the U.S. Senate. Some acknowledge that Kennedy's plan is also designed to ensure that the state has a second pro-health care reform senator in place during any future vote on changing the nation's health care system.

Some GOP legislators are crying foul and criticizing Democrats who voted for the 2004 law and now want to change it again. They argue that some Democrats are singing a different tune now that Democratic Gov. Patrick is in the corner office and would have the power to appoint a temporary replacement if the law is changed.

'Ancient mariner' reflects on commuter boat service

By Martha Bewick
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Hingham commuter boats have been part of the bones of the area ever since the Route 228 Committee, made up of selectmen from five area towns, worked with regional and state agencies to get ferry service started between the South Shore and Boston in 1975.

As the MBTA takes its look at all transit services, many of the ferry riders are stepping up to try to describe why cutting the ferryboats in Boston Harbor, particularly those to Hingham, would be such a great loss, and why commuter boat service should be retained. In one interview, it was clear that the Hingham commuter boat has become over time more than just transportation. For some, it became an important part of their personal lives, involving new friendships and adventures.

I recently received a call from Jim Pilalas, a long-time Hingham neighbor, who has ridden the Hingham commuter boat to Boston from its first day of operation in 1975. He is one of a loyal and true group of ancient mariners, some not so ancient, who even schedule reunions from time to time.

Jim was a Vice President at New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, located across the Boston Common on Boylston Street. A graduate of Boston University, he became a CPA, but also studied at a Harvard program in preparation for his World War II assignment to the Navy Supply Corps. After the war, he moved to Hingham in 1951, and then lived on Lincoln Street for many years. After he retired from New England Mutual, he became Executive Director of the Leaders' Association there for many years.

We met at Colonial Village, where Jim, at 90, is now a resident, and talked and reminisced about the early boat days: the first day, when the Hingham Militia marched down to the pier to celebrate the startup, and when Governor Dukakis met the first trip at Long Wharf; the early low-bid commuter boats, which included a submarine chaser, a mine-sweeper, and various fishing boats; the blizzard of '78, when some commuters slept over in Boston during the storm using the boat as a shelter, and then found the commuter boat the only way to get to Hingham and back over the next week.

He talked about the few times when the commuter boat couldn't get through the ice, which happens about once every seven years. "When there's a steel hull, the boat acts like an icebreaker. When it's steel, then the boats can't get through."

Jim's daily commute included both the ferry trip, and a long walk across the city to his place of work, joined by fellow commuters — some three miles a day. Many became fast friends, and celebrated important events as they came along.

To commemorate his colleague John Visser's retirement, when Visser and his wife Ginny planted a pot of petunias on the end of the wooden commuter boat pier in the Shipyard, Jim Pilalas contributed poetry, which he recalled in part:

I must go down to the Pier again,
To the Visser Pier by the sea,
Where petunias bloom
And there's lots of room
While you wait for the Julia Marie."

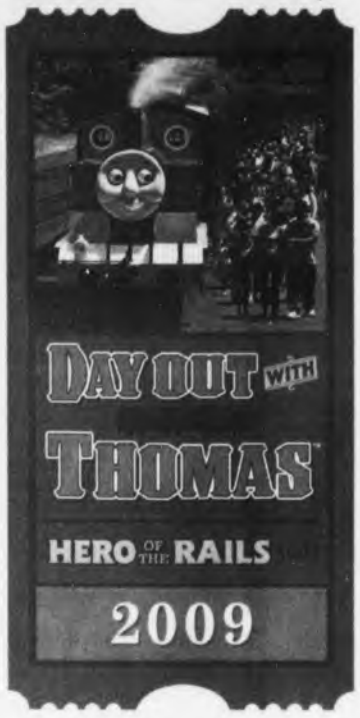
The Julia Marie was one of the low-bid boats, probably a converted fishing boat. One of these was memorable for its double-bunk beds, where homebound commuters could even enjoy a nap!

Jim Pilalas shared other memories of the boat trips: the rumble of planes flying low overhead as you pass Logan airport…Hood Company's CEO Ed Gelsthorpe riding his bicycle from the pier in Boston to work in Charlestown…the commuter who boarded one very stormy night, and asked as he entered the boat cabin "does anyone know the words of 'Nearer my God to Thee?"…passengers talking, playing cards, reading newspapers en route…the fragrance of the bread baking at Sahara's, the Syrian bakery in the Shipyard.

Jim was concerned about the impact of the potential loss of the commuter boats to the new "smart growth" Hingham Shipyard development, where so many millions have been invested in housing, retail stores and the movie theaters. "The Shipyard will suffer," he said, if the ferries are stopped.

Jim passed along some photos from his retirement party on the Amberjack, one of the ferries providing commuter service in 1983. This was before the MBTA became involved in the more frequent schedules in 1984, when these were provided as a transit alternative to the Southeast Expressway during the time of reconstruction.

As part of Pilalas's retirement celebration, the commuter boat made a special trip out in the harbor and landed on Peddock's Island, something he'd always wanted to do, clam chowder was served, and a fine time was had by all.



Jim's message to today's commuters is to fight to keep the commuter boats, which have provided so much to Hingham and South Shore commuters and families for more than 30 years.

Martha A. R. Bewick is a long-time ferry advocate, who was an Associate Commissioner for Highway Construction in the Massachusetts Department of Public Works.

There is a Laser way to treat severe gum disease without cutting or stitches

Introducing
Laser Periodontal Therapy™

Finally, there's good news for those of you who suffer from gum disease (gingivitis and periodontitis). We now offer an exciting laser based technique for treatment of periodontal disease called Laser Periodontal Therapy™. Through the use of the Millennium Dental Technologies, Inc. PerioLase® Laser, designed especially for Laser Periodontal Therapy™, we can treat your moderate to severe gum disease and you can quickly return to your normal routine!

There's no incision (scalpel) and no stitches (sutures). Discomfort is greatly reduced, often there is not any pain at all. You heal naturally with full retention of your gums. Local area dentist Dr. Michael Thomas is fully trained and licensed to perform Laser Periodontal Therapy™, an FDA cleared and patented laser gum therapy that greatly reduces the pain and recovery time associated with traditional gum surgery. Dr. Thomas is the only dentist in the South Shore area using the PerioLase MVP-7, the first ever digital dental laser with FDA approval for use in the treatment of gum disease. If you suffer from tender, red, swollen, bleeding gums, or have been told you need periodontal surgery to treat gum disease, call us today for an appointment to evaluate your condition and see what a difference the laser treatment can make for you.

Ginny Ballou of Hingham is holding a still warm blueberry/peach pie that she made for the potluck dinner. The blueberries were from her daughter's garden in Marshfield and the peaches were grown in Boylston, Mass.

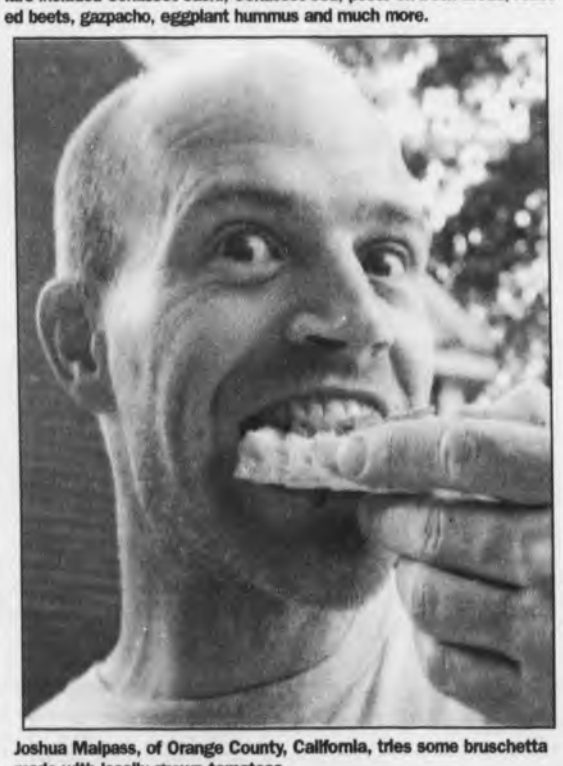
The film Tableland was shown following the potluck dinner. The film was projected on the backside of the tomato barn.



Holly Hill Farm hosted a potluck dinner and film night this past Sunday evening. Long tables were set up with fresh flowers to hold the many locally prepared dishes. Guests were asked to bring a dish that serves eight and made from as many local ingredients as possible. Some of the fare included Cohasset sushi, Cohasset cod, pesto on fresh bread, roasted beets, gazpacho, eggplant hummus and much more.

Adrienne Dubois of Hingham sampled the local fare at the annual Holly Hill Farm Pot Luck Dinner and Film Night. Guests were asked to bring a dish using as many local ingredients as possible. Holly Hill is off Jerusalem Road.

Cohasset youngster finishes second in F1 league

For his tenth birthday, Chris' dad, Paul, signed him up for racing lessons at the F1 Boston cart track in Braintree.

"I kept taking them there on Sundays for burgers," Paul said. "We could watch the racing and the NASCAR races on the big screen there."

"It was a surprise," Chris said about his introduction. "We used to go to the restaurant to eat and watch. I wanted to try it. When I started I was a little nervous at first. The cars are really fast. I didn't like how fast it was on the first day, but by the second day I got used to it."

Driving school is a requirement for youngsters to get a license to race and help assign drivers to the right skill level for racing.

Cars can hit 50 m.p.h. in the right circumstances, and on a 1/3 mile track indoor, that can feel really fast.

Chris averaged 38 m.p.h. during the summer racing season, on the way to a second-place finish in the league.

"He raced in over 25 races at three different tracks," Paul said. "Each race you get points, just like NASCAR. He finished second."

When the season was done, there was a special race for the top six racers, held at the F1 outdoor track in East Bridgewater.

"That was an exciting race," Paul said. "He went from fourth to second in the final two laps, then got into a bump-and-grind with the first-place car in the last lap. They both spun out and went into the dirt. It was a lot of fun, like watching Tony Stewart."

Chris said his favorite part of racing is winning.

"I really like passing and coming in first," Chris said. "I've come in first a lot. It feels really good. My dad gets really excited. He's always cheering me on."

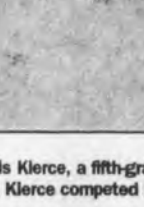
Chris has a little experience driving.

He has a battery powered Jeep that can his 18 m.p.h. that he rides at home for fun.

"My dad used to take me to Starland and drive me around the track on the go-carts," Chris said. "And I have my own little go-cart I drive down the street."

With the solid and fun first season, Chris decided he wants to keep going.

"I want to try to get first place next time," he said. "I'd like to win a few more races. I know I can."



To keep things fair, all carts are provided by the track and

Seven or eight wishes for a successful fall

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Last night, in a dream, a big blue genie came to me and told me I could have ten wishes for the fall.

Yes, a strange dream, made stranger by the fact that the genie looked like a blue ALF the space alien (OK, I was watching a kind of obscure ALF cartoon called ALF Tales that had an Aladdin spoof) and not the Barbara Eden genie from I Dream of Jeannie.

It was also strange because he asked about the fall.

I said I'd wish for a jillion dollars, all legal with no tricks, but he said no money or jewels. He also reminded me there's no such number as a jillion.

With that in mind, I started thinking about what really would work and came up with a plan.

So here are my wishes for the fall season, which in my book started this morning when my kids packed off to the first day of school.

My first wish is dedicated to the world of baseball.

I wish to see the Red Sox playing meaningful games in October with a healthy team, a full pitching staff and a rejuvenated David Ortiz.

I figure that's a reasonable request.

I could go for winning a World Series, but that felt too much like cheating.

My next two wishes are also for the pro ranks.

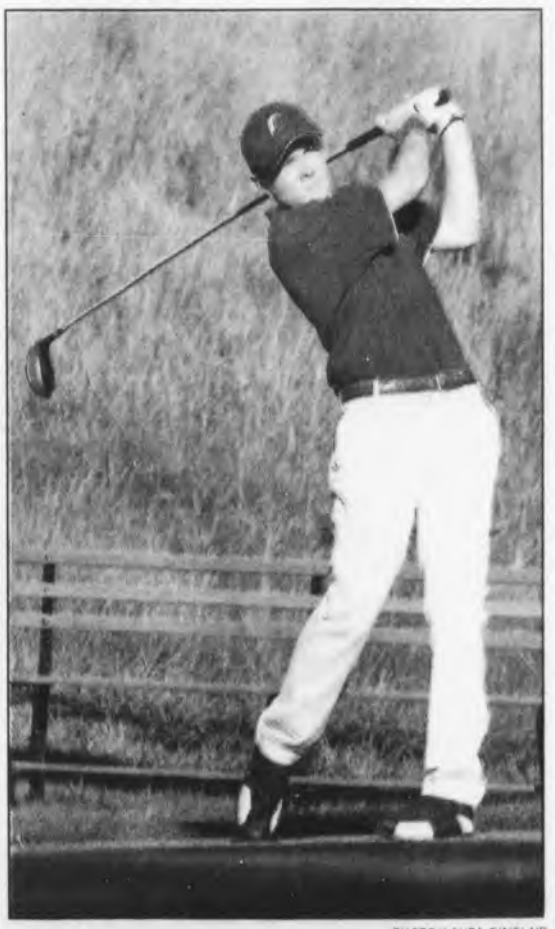
Bruschi was an inspiration and a player that kids all over can look up to as a positive influence.



He also is someone who knows when it's time to hang up the cleats. There's no doubt that he could play and play well, but with the career he's had, why not take his leave at age 36 before he gets hurt.

He's also a one-team career

Experience key for golfers

Skippers expecting strong season

Ian Quinlan is a senior captain with strong experience.

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

If everything goes right, this should be a good season for the Cohasset varsity golf team.

With tryouts heading into the final stretch, veteran coach Torin Sweeney has a good feeling.

"I'm looking forward to a good year," Sweeney said. "This is a very experienced team. We have four seniors to lead the way."

Golf

The veteran presence starts with Ian Quinlan, a third year starter and captain for the Skippers.

"For Chase, this will be his fourth years starting," Sweeney said. "He started for me as a freshman. Sebastian played varsity last year. He'll play varsity this year. Chase and Ian have a lot of experience. They played in the State Tournament the last couple of years. They're both capable of shooting into the 30's for nine holes. They can hit the high 30's."

Sophomore David Hill brings a youth infusion into the mix and has been hitting very well in practices.

"David was on the team last year," Sweeney said. "He'll be playing near the top of the rotatation. He's been putting up very good practice numbers."

Robbie Hill, in his third year on varsity, who also plays tennis and wrestles, will be in the mix.

"Robbie is a good golfer," Sweeney said. "He hits low-to-mid 40's and can shoot a 39. He'll help us."

Rounding out the group is Morgan Grasz.

"Morgan has had some good practice rounds in the mid 40's," Sweeney said.

Junior Julian Heargh is another returnee.

"Julian played a little varsity last year," Sweeney said. "He probably has the least experience of the group."

With the wealth of experience returning, Cohasset only loses one impact player.

"John Wade was solid for us

Cohasset youth notches an ace

Stanganelli, a 13-year old, aced on the seventh hole from the yellow tee box (100 yards) using a nine iron.

Tim Cavanaro, Joe Cavanaro and Max Fitzgerald were there to watch the ace.

Registration for the Winter Games opens on October 26.

WOBURN – The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation (MASF) is excited to announce the competition dates for the 2010 Bay State Winter Games. The 25th anniversary of the annual Olym-pic-style amateur sporting event will take place January 22-24, 2010, in the Northern Berkshire region of Massachusetts.

"We are very pleased to be returning to the Northern Berkshires, host of every Winter Games since its inception," said Kevin Cummings, Bay State Games Executive Director. "The beautiful setting, quality venues and outstanding volunteer support have all played a vital role in our ability to host a successful event year after year. We look forward to returning for our silver anniversary in 2010."

Registration for the Winter Games opens on October 26. The Games features individual competitions in alpine skiing and figure skating, and team competition in masters ice hockey. The figure skating competition will take place at the Lansing Chapman Rink on the campus of Williams College in Williamstown, MA, and features both ISI and UFSF competition for males and females. Masters ice hockey will be played in two divisions, 40 plus and 50 plus, at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Skating Arena in North Adams, MA. Alpine skiing, with open and masters divisions for athletes 19-35, and 36 and older, respectively, as well as a scholastic division for participants in grades 9 through 12 as of the 2009-2010 academic year, will be held at Bousquet Ski Area in Pittsfield, MA.

Since its inception, the Berkshires have played host for all events in the Bay State Winter Games. Athletes participating in the Games represent over 200 Massachusetts communities, and range in age from 8 to 60.

For more information regarding the Bay State Winter Games and other programs run by the MASF, please visit our website www.baystategames.org or call the Bay State Games' office at (781) 932-6555.

Adult hockey returns to Plymouth

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

In its heyday, the Plymouth adult hockey league had over 200 players participating.

Scott Palladino figures he'll need less than one-third that number to get the league back up and running this fall.

"Our minimum goal to get it going again is to get four teams with approximately 15 players per team," said Palladino, whose name is well known in South Shore hockey circles. "Right now, I think we've got three teams pretty firm, so it's looking like it's going to happen. Of course, we'd really prefer to have six teams."

The Plymouth adult league, featuring skaters ranging in age from early 20s to don't ask, flourished for many years at the Armstrong Arena, but started shrinking when other area rinks began welcoming adult leagues. Finally, around 2004, with league organizers falling away for one reason or another, the Plymouth league disbanded.

All games will be played weekday evenings at the Armstrong Arena, and the league will be called, appropriately the "Armstrong Adult Hockey League." Games are scheduled to get underway on Sept. 16 and last through March, with playoffs going into April. Each team will play 30 regular season games. Palladino is hopeful he'll be able to keep the cost per player under $400, but hopes to get it lower still as more players sign up.

All games will be played weekday evenings at the Armstrong Arena, and the league will be called, appropriately the "Armstrong Adult Hockey League."

"I think $400 is pretty fair for 30 games plus playoffs in games with refs and given the price of ice time and insurance" said Palladino, who has stepped up to direct the league.

The games will last roughly an hour, and each roster figures to run about 15 deep.

"There will probably be nights a few guys can't make it, but all you really need is 10 players to play good games—two lines, three or four defensemen and a goalie."

Palladino was a standout hockey player at Plymouth-Carver High School who went on to play at Springfield College. Upon graduation, he became active in adult hockey leagues, playing and later refereeing, and also started helping out as a coach at the high school level. He got his first assistant coaching job at Wareham High, but came back closer to home when an assistant coach's job opened up at Plymouth South in the late 80s. He accepted the Panthers' head coaching position in 1994 but resigned that position after the birth of his first child in 2000.

He has continued playing and refereeing in various adult leagues, though, and that has kept him in contact with dozens of veterans of the old Plymouth adult league, as well as with several other local skaters who've said they'd be interested in getting the Plymouth league going again.

Palladino sounds confident he'll get enough players for six teams this season, and hopes he can ultimately build it back to where it was in its heyday, with divisions for different ability levels and games going on at Armstrong Arena virtually every night of the week.

"This really is a for fun league," Palladino insisted. "Everyone who plays knows the guys there need to get up for work the next day. There's no checking or fighting or any of that other garbage. If guys want to hang out afterwards and enjoy some camaraderie, that's all the better."

Anyone with questions or interest is encouraged to call Scott Palladino at 508-889-1791.

Commonwealth Atrius Cancer Center

"After my father had bladder cancer surgery, he was referred to Commonwealth Atrius Cancer Center for radiation, and I was very impressed when I took him for treatments. A year later, at my annual mammogram, I found I had breast cancer. After my surgery, there was no question about where I would go for my radiation treatment. I'm a nurse, and I marvel at the technology combined with personal care provided here. And I certainly appreciate the short drive to the Cancer Center and back to work. Paul likes that aspect.

"They rotate karts and drivers," he said. "If he races with six guys, they all start in different positions each time. From a parental issue it gets parents out of hot water. Nobody can say there's an unfair advantage."

One thing Paul likes is the atmosphere.

Valentine is an accomplished racer himself. He recently won the Rolex 24 Hours at Daytona race, becoming the oldest driver to accomplish the feat at age 64.

His memorabilia is all there.

Next up for Paul and Chris is endurance racing.

"We want to start an endurance team," Paul said. "It would be two hours of nonstop driving. I think that's an educational experience for the kids.

As for some advantages, Paul said there are several.

"The kids are competing against other kids, but they're also racing against themselves," he said. "They learn about strategy and teamwork It's fun for them."

for three years," Sweeney said of his player who was also the goalie for the hockey team. "He'll be a tough loss, but we have good players to fill in. We're a very experienced team. We should do well. We're in a competitive league (South Shore League). Norwell is going to be strong. They're very competitive."

Last year's Skippers tied for third in the league.

Cohasset plays match-play in league matches, playing six players for a total of 54 holes, each worth a point.

The season was scheduled to start yesterday with a home match against Mashpee at the Cohasset Country Club.

The Skippers travel to Norwell on Wednesday and host Carver on Thursday.

player and that in itself is pretty amazing.

As for Brady, this is just for extra luck.

Brady looks good so far, and doesn't seem to be in any kind of trouble, but a little extra luck can't hurt.

My next wish is for Cohasset.

May your field be ready for your opener in a few weeks. From what I've heard, so far so good. So with this wish, let the weather cooperate the rest of the way.

Next up is a wish for nice weather through October.

Give me less Jon and Kate and more Psych and Smallville and even iCarly. The kids will know what you're talking about.

Lets keep the temperatures at least in the upper 60's and low 70's until at least Halloween.

That way when I hit the football, soccer, field hockey fields and whatever else I'll be watching, I don't freeze before my time.

Speaking of freezing, with Hanover moving its soccer games out of the night and into the daytime because of the construction, I just have to say I don't mind.

I know I'm in the minority, but I never quite understood night soccer in the fall.

The kids wear shorts and it's the fall.

During the afternoon the temperatures aren't usually bad, but at night it can get downright chilled.

Give me less Jon and Kate and more Psych and Smallville and even iCarly. The kids will know what you're talking about.

Gene Simmons can stay though.

Finally, and most importantly, I wish for a safe and fun season for all, from the kids to the pros.

Kind of says it all, doesn't it.

The good news behind Cohasset's beach closings

CSCR

ELLIE TEDESCHI

As of the summer of 2009, CSCR volunteers have been helping test the water at Cohasset's Beaches for five years.

Cohasset residents were no strangers to beach closings this summer. Sandy Beach was closed twice for multiple days in June and July, and the town had a total of 15 days where a beach was closed. But there is good news behind the bad … There is a young group of dedicated volunteers helping Board of Health Agent Tara Tradd regularly test the water quality at Cohasset's Beaches.

Ms. Tradd leads a group at Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR), a non-profit organization dedicated to educating students in environmental sciences and encouraging environmental awareness. "The mission of my group at CSCR is to learn the importance of water quality testing, and to develop a procedure for water quality assessment by volunteers," explains Ms. Tradd.

Ms. Tradd's group has gone to six local beaches and recreational areas weekly since June 9, to collect samples for testing. Half the samples are sent to professional labs and the other half are brought back to the CSCR lab. "The student volunteers conduct all the testing on their samples at the CSCR lab on Parker Avenue," added Tara Tradd. " Their weekly water quality results have closely matched those from G&L Laboratories. This is quite an achievement for the student volunteers at CSCR."

The volunteers have been taught that water is safe for swimming only when bacteria levels are below 104 cfu per 100 mL of water. On several days this summer, however, the results have been much higher than that, and this year's tests have noted bacterial levels even higher than results found in previous years. After one especially heavy rainfall in July bacteria levels at Black Rock Beach reached as high as 5,000 cfu. Fortunately those numbers decreased dramatically in the days that followed and Cohasset beaches have been safe for swimming most of August.

In the future, as CSCR continues a track record of accurate sampling and testing results there might be a role for the Center for Student Coastal Research to help assess bacteria levels when additional tests are needed. This could be very helpful particularly when the services of a professional lab are unavailable. CSCR's ability to offer 'in - house" testing may become a valuable tool for the town and its stakeholders to leverage…. while recognizing that Massachusetts Public Health law does impose limits on the use of student data.

"We appreciate and support all of CSCR's work," notes Dr. Robin Lawrence, President of Cohasset's Sandy Beach Association. As of the summer of 2009, CSCR volunteers have been helping test the water at Cohasset's Beaches for five years. It is exciting to think that one day their work could supplement the work conducted by the Cohasset's Board of Heath to help our town meet state mandated water quality testing requirements in the years to come.

Author at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present author Katrina Kenison at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 23, at Buttonwood, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. Kenison will discuss her book, "The Gift of an Ordinary Day: A Mother's Memoir." In the book's introduction Kenison states how unprepared she was for the vicissitudes of teenagers. What sets Kenison apart is her ability to write about those experiences with precision and honesty in a style that is rich with warmth and inspiration.

Kenison is the author of "Mitten Strings for God: Reflections for Mothers in a Hurry." She has appeared on "Oprah" and other television programs and has written for O: The Oprah magazine, Real Simple, Family Circle, Redbook, Better Homes & Gardens, Health and many other publications. She wrote, with Rolf Gates, "Meditations from the Mat: Daily Reflections on the Path of Yoga." She lives in New Hampshire with her husband and sons.

Refreshments will be served. Those who are unable to attend and would like to order a personalized and/or signed copy can call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

On the Job program at New North Church

The weekly On the Job program at New North Church, 1 Lincoln St., Hingham will offer a workshop on how to establish oneself as a "contract" employee on Monday, Sept. 14. In today's new job market steady employment is often easier to find through becoming a contract worker. The session will be led by Jim Harris, a Project Management Professional. His presentation is titled "Is Contracting Right for You?"

This practical assessment will help job seekers understand the pros and cons of successfully establishing oneself as a contract employee and provide direction in assessing personal and professional goals in today's economic environment.

Harris is a certified Project Management Professional with more than 25 years experience in the information technology field including the financial, manufacturing, retail and insurance industries. He has transitioned from full-time to contract employment and will share his strategy and thoughts on how to prepare for the next step in one's career.

New North Church's networking support group On the Job meets from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m., every Monday, and provides support to those seeking employment.

POND CLEANUP

These photos are from the Boy Scout town common pond cleanup project, completed this past Saturday. This is the second year members of Troop 28 have done a cleaning of the pond on the common. The cleaning this year was timed to prepare for Cohasset Day, during which rowboats are available to use on the pond. Bone marrow drive in Hingham on Sept. 12

A bone marrow drive hosted by Hingham resident Tammy Devine will take place from 1 to 5 p.m., on Saturday, Sept. 12, at Hingham Community Center, 70 South St., in conjunction with Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Last year, Devine spent time at Dana-Farber, where her 10-year-old son, Cameron, was being treated for a tumor. "During that time, I became educated on joining the bone marrow registry and was surprised by the simplicity of the process," Devine said. "Although my son's medical condition did not require a bone marrow transplant, I am committed to educating others about becoming a potential donor."

The process to become part of the registry requires a simple saliva test called a buccal swab. In Massachusetts, many insurance companies are mandated by law to cover the cost of the test. Dana-Farber will cover the cost for those who do not have applicable insurance, Devine said.

For every person who joins the registry during the drive, their name will be entered into a raffle for a chance to win four club seats to a Patriots game with a parking pass donated by the Devine family. Light refreshments will be served.

To become a member of the registry, an individual must be between the ages of 18 and 60; be willing to donate to any patient in need; and meet the health guidelines.

For more information, call Devine at 781-740-4575.

Turf field nearing completion

Thanks to extraordinary community and town support, the Town got turf? project is on schedule and nearing completion. Work crews have been busy all summer preparing Alumni Field for the installation of the new synthetic turf field. After the original field was removed the loam and topsoil was placed at Paul Barry's property for the Town to reuse in various other projects (see Mariner article Aug. 28). Mr. Barry has been extremely generous in helping with the storage of the loam and removal of other materials.

Crews are finalizing the turf installation and the resurfacing of the track will commence next week. The track and field will be ready for play by the middle of the September.

In addition to the new turf field and resurfacing of the track, other improvements have been made to the Clark Chatterton Athletic complex. Lighting has been replaced, and landscaping around the field and stands has been added with the help of donations from Wayne Sawchuk. The drainage around the field has also been improved.

The brick donor field is currently being finalized will hopefully be installed before the opening ceremony. If anyone would like a last chance to buy a brick please contact the Sports Partnership immediately at 781-383-1341.

Docket No. NO09P2044PM
CITATION GIVING NOTICE OF PETITION FOR APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATOR OR OTHER PROTECTIVE ORDER PURSUANT TO G.L. c. 190B, 5-304 & 5-405

In the matter of: Patricia Fallon Meyrick

Of: Cohasset, MA

RESPONDENT
(Person to be Protected/Minor)

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by John C Meyrick of Scituate, MA

In the above captioned matter alleging that Patricia Fallon Meyrick is in need of a Conservator or other protective order and requesting that (or some other suitable person) be appointed as Conservator to serve Without Surety on the bond.

The petition asks the court to determine that the Respondent is disabled, that a protective order or appointment of a Conservator is necessary, and that the proposed conservator is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M., on the return date of 09/10/2009. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person's right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. Robert W Langlois, First Justice of this Court.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
HOROSCOPE FOR WEEK OF
SEPT. 14, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) It might not be wise to pursue goals involving others, unless you can stop impulsively rejecting new ideas. Either open your mind or wait until next week, when this "ornery" mood passes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for the Bovine to be creative and practical for yourself and your surroundings. Shop wisely, not impulsively, and keep your Bull's eye focused on quality, not quantity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You should feel more confident about moving ahead with plans that had to be delayed by an unexpected turn of events. Also, family matters might need more time than first anticipated.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be considerate of others as you move into a new area in your professional life. Take time to meet people and discuss mutual goals. The more you get to know each other, the better.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Creating a fuss could get your ideas noticed quickly. But it would be best to present your case, and then wait for a reaction to follow in due course, rather than try to force it to happen.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Unkept promises might cause plans to go awry this week. You can either grumble about people "letting you down" or find a way to make the best of it and move on. The choice is yours.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Putting off making a commitment early in the week could be a good move. Best to act when you know you're making an informed decision. Expect more facts to emerge by the week's end.

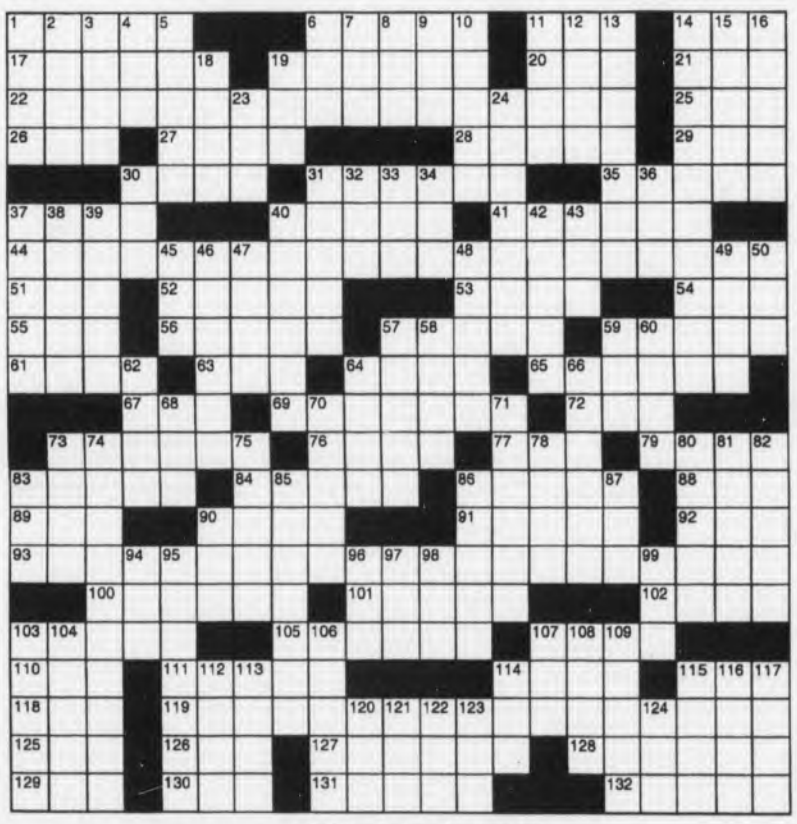
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A recent act of kindness on your part could take on special meaning this week. Also, look for signs of upcoming changes in both your personal and professional relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Many of the tougher communication barriers between you and others in the workplace or at home could begin breaking down this week. Expect some surprises to emerge.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your "tough love" attitude toward someone you care for could be misunderstood. Try to be less judgmental and show more consideration in the way you relate to that person.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unexpected workplace challenge could be daunting. But take what you know (and you know more than you realize) and apply it to the problem, and you should see positive results.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Recent relationship changes for both single and paired Pisces continue to influence much of your week. Keep your focus on developing the positive aspects as you move along.



(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You set your goals with assurance and influence others to follow suit. You would be an excellent philosopher and teacher.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

There is no enrollment fee, but pre-registration is required and space is limited. Contact Joyce Schwartz for more information at the Union for Reform Judaism office 781-449-0404 or jschwartz@urj.org. Visit the Reform Jewish Outreach at www.reformjewishoutreach-boston.org

House of Prayer global mini-mission festival

House of Prayer Lutheran Church has announced that it is hosting a Global Mini-Mission Festival on Saturday Sept. 12 at 916 Main St., Hingham. Regular Saturday worship will begin at 4:30 p.m. with the presentation and a Honduran inspired dinner to follow at 5:30 p.m.

House of Prayer's festival is geared towards educating and raising awareness within the community of the mission trips to Honduras that are sponsored by the New England Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) in partnership with Angledisch, the Episcopalian Honduran Relief Agency.

For the past two years, the New England Synod has sponsored trips to the northern region of Honduras to work on projects coordinated by Angledisch and the local villagers. Eleana Mayorquinn, Assistant to the Honduran Bishop for Angledisch, will be flying from Tegucigalpa, Honduras to attend this event and share some of her experiences.

In January 2009, 30 members of Lutheran churches throughout New England traveled to Chachagualla, Honduras for a week. During that time, participants worked on health infrastructure projects that had been identified by the community as necessary improvements.

This festival is open to the public and will feature an illustrated report from Ms. Mayorquinn on the mission as well as comments from recent mission trip participants from New England. RSVP by e-mail to Ed Martin at EMartinkFifieldEabrics.com so that dinner can be planned accordingly.

Movie review

Glorious 'Basterds'

Inglourious Basterds (A-)

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

How does one do justice to a movie as warped, wacky and way out there as Quentin Tarantino's "Inglourious Basterds"?

Truth is, you can't. That's how glorious this bastardized version of World War II history becomes, as the master of pulp fiction leads us on a genre-hopping journey full of wit and surprise.

There's literally something for everyone, whether you crave comedy, romance, action or melodrama. It's all here and more. But the people who will enjoy it most are the cinephiles who share both Tarantino's encyclopedic knowledge of movie history and his unique vision of where the medium can go next.

Those are the folks who will dig all the references to Ford, Reifenstahl, Jannings and Dietrich. They're also the ones who will recognized the way Tarantino mixes and matches genres from spaghetti Westerns to the propagandizing pap of war hero-turned-actor Audie Murphy.

The beauty is that even if you don't know the difference between G.W. Pabst and Pabst Blue Ribbon, you're going to be thrilled by a writer-director working at the top of his game.

Q.T. creates a superior blend of words and pictures that make you sit up and marvel. Yet his greatest contribution to "Inglourious Basterds" is his spot-on casting, whether it's big names like Brad Pitt and Mike Myers (unrecognizable as a British general), or a virtual unknown in Christoph Waltz, who flat-out steals the movie – and quite possibly a Best Actor Oscar – with his turn as Nazi Col. Hans Landa, aka "The Jew Hunter."

Heck, even the usually lightweight Diane Kruger ("Troy") shines, playing a sexy German movie star working undercover as a British spy. Just wait until you hear the sultry way she encourages a comrade to stick his finger in her bullet hole after being shot in the leg. Talk about hot!

The person guaranteed to put fannies in the seats, of course, is Pitt. And even though he's absent for nearly two-thirds of the movie, he manages to make quite an impression. As Lt. Aldo Raine, a former Tennessee moonshiner commanding a ruthless squad of Jewish-American soldiers dropped behind enemy lines to hunt, kill and scalp as many Nazis as possible, Pitt dazzles, fortifying Tarantino's finely honed prose with a convincing Southern twang.

As with "Burn After Reading," Pitt proves what a dynamic actor he can be when presented with a script that plays directly to his strong comedic senses.

True, he falters a bit in the final act when action takes precedence over the always-tantalizing dialogue (delivered in four languages by an international cast), but Tarantino provides him with an unforgettable coda that leaves you very much impressed.

But not as impressed as you are with Waltz, winner of the Best Actor award at Cannes this past spring. He makes Col. Landa as iconic as Hopkins' Hannibal or Schwartzenegger's Terminator. And like those two archly played villains, Waltz infuses Landa with as much humor and charm as he does menace.

When he makes his entrance in the first of the film's five "chapters," he's so luminous, it's like staring into the sun. It's a roughly 25-minute scene that ranks among the year's best, as Tarantino establishes both the film's revenge motive while also paying homage to Sergio Leone with a Western-like showdown of words between Landa and a French farmer the colonel suspects of hiding Jews.

The scene builds and builds, beginning in deftly comedic tones and ending in an act of devastating violence. It's a wild, but gradual shift in tenor that probably would not have worked if not for the depth of Waltz's nuanced performance.

The only downside is that "Chapter One" is such a triumph, that the following four chapters have nowhere to go but down, as twin plots to kill the leaders of the Third Reich kick in.

The drop off is minimal, though. Tarantino and his excellent ensemble create a rich noir-ish mood through a series of long, dialogue-driven scenes that attest to the cast's level of stamina and skill.

They're not just delivering words, either. Their characters are exchanging thoughts, ideas and philosophies that cause you to think and, yes, laugh. And through each of those scenes a palpable sense of fear and danger washes over you because you know bloodshed is inevitable. After all, this is Tarantino.

No shock there. But what is surprising is the strong satirical bent he lends "Basterds," making fun of everyone from Hitler (Martin Wuttke) and Goebbels (Sylvester Groth) to the Audie Murphy-like Nazi war hero, Frederick Zoller (Daniel Bruhl).

Just as surprising is Tarantino's more chivalrous view of women, as evidenced by Kruger's duplicitous German movie star and Melanie Laurent's vengeance-seeking Parisian theater owner. Unlike the ladies in "Kill Bill" or "Pulp Fiction," Kruger's Bridget von Hammersmark and Laurent's Shosanna Dreyfus are more flesh and blood than exaggerated male fantasies.

The same could be said for the entire movie. It's most definitely emanating from an alternative universe, but the emotions remain largely rooted in reality.

For Tarantino that's saying something. He not only rewrites history, he enlivens it with moxie and pizzazz in delivering a war story in which movies triumph over tyranny in a most joyously unorthodox way.

Rated R. "Inglourious Basterds" contains strong graphic violence, language and brief sexuality.

KING RICHARD'S FAIRE

FILE PHOTO

A knight takes a break from jousting competitions during a previous King Richard's Faire. The annual event returns to Carver Sept.5.

King Richard's Faire, New England's largest and longest-running Renaissance Festival, begins Saturday, Sept. 5, at 235 Main St., Carver, and will run for eight consecutive weekends until Oct. 25, including Labor Day and Columbus Day Mondays. Hours are 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. King Richard's Faire is a vivid recreation of a 16th century English marketplace at festival time. Actors, dancers, puppeteers, jugglers, minstrels, mimes, magicians and musicians perform each weekend. Many new acts have been added to the list this year along with a jam-packed schedule of special events that encourages faire goers to join in the fun.

Highlights will include the following.

"Bite Me," An original musical comedy in the tradition of Young Frankenstein and The Rocky Horror Picture Show. Inspired by the blockbuster novel and film Twilight, "Bite Me" is a supernatural love story spotlighting a visit to the court of King Richard by the Count and Countess von Wolfenstein of Transylvania.

The Big Cat Show: Big cats and exotic animals on stage with Dr. Bhagavan "Doc" Antle. The show includes a Liger, the world's biggest cat weighing in at more than 900 pounds and a rare white lion.

The Tortuga Twins: A new twist on the Robin Hood legend and its fairytale sequel, Red Riding! The Tortuga Twins (all three of them) are outrageously unpredictable with lots of laughs and improv-comedy.

Knights jousting on horseback: Knights in shining armor wow crowds with theatrical jousting on horseback, acrobatics, comedy skits and death defying feats.

Aerial Angels: Named "Most Daring Act" at the London Fringe, the Aerial Angels perform feats of grace, strength, and skill on the aerial silk and hoop. The show includes fire-eating, acrobatics and bullwhip cracking stunts.

Special events are as follows: Sept. 12, Cleavage Contest; Sept. 19, Royal Tournament of Beers; Sept. 26, Prince and Princess Costume Day; Oct. 3, Renew the Romance - Vow Renewal Ceremony; Oct. 10, Tattoo Contest; Oct. 24: Adult Halloween Costume.

North River Arts Society's OTB: Outside the Box Silent auction closes Friday

Bidding ends on Sept. 4 at noon

Time is running out! Don't miss your last chance to place a secret bid on an original piece of artwork in the North River Arts Society's "OTB: Outside the Box" silent auction exhibit. Bidding on the 200-plus anonymous works by internationally acclaimed painters and photographers, local artists, and one Hollywood celebrity draws to a close in a matter of days. The silent auction continues at the G.A.R. Hall, 157 Old Main Street, in Marshfield Hills, until noon on Sept. 4, when the final bids will be accepted.

This is your opportunity to own a piece of original artwork for a low starting bid of $25. Each 8 by 8-inch unsigned piece was created by a local luminary, such as trompe l'oeil master David Brega, actor Steve Carell (star of "The Office" and "The 40-Year-Old Virgin"), or perhaps one of your own friends or neighbors. No one knows whose work is whose, and that's part of the fun. Everywhere you turn inside the Hall, you see something that's visually stunning, or playful, or serene, or just plain different. That was the whole idea: for the artists to think Outside the Box, and they sure let their imaginations run wild!

The exhibit is open to the public for viewing and bidding this Monday through Friday only, 9 a.m. to noon. Bidding numbers are available for $10. The exhibit will close temporarily after the final bid is placed on September 4. On Sept. 8, the show will reopen with the artists' names revealed, but the auction winners' names will be kept secret until the Closing Party reception, featuring hors d'oeuvres and a cash bar, on Sept. 11, from 7 to 10 p.m. This event, which will be held at the G.A.R. Hall, is also open to the public.

All proceeds will support the North River Arts Society, a grassroots nonprofit organization that has been providing arts education, programming, exhibits, and events to people of all ages throughout the region for 40 years. For additional information and to view images of the unsigned artwork online, visit www.northriverarts.org/exhibits.html http://www.northriverarts.org/exhibits.html.

24-hour Labor Day weekend event

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"Even during these difficult economic times, our work is not done. The race to find a cure continues."
— Jay Tolman, Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Telethon Party

The Tolman family is gearing up for the 33rd 24-hour Muscular Dystrophy Association telethon party at Hingham Community Center during the upcoming Labor Day weekend, and the entire community and beyond is invited. The more the merrier, says event organizer Jay Tolman.

After traveling from New Jersey with their three children for many years to put on the event with the help of many supporters, Jay and Jodi Tolman are enjoying the quick trip from Cohasset, where they moved last year.

"It's a big reunion every year," Jay Tolman said. "We have the opportunity to meet new people who will join our efforts to end muscular dystrophy and become part of our telethon team."

Despite the name of the event, it is not a phone bank but a major show of local support for the national Jerry Lewis MDA telethon.

Although no one makes phone calls, donations are collected throughout this Hingham gathering in various ways – by children and adults collecting on street corners and by partygoers tossing a contribution into a large fishbowl at the community center. It's all about having fun while supporting a good cause.

Cohasset resident Sharon Smith will be attending the Tolman event for the first time this year.

Her son Gregory, 7, does not have muscular dystrophy but does have an underlying muscle condition. The Smiths first heard about the telethon party from the Massachusetts MDA office recently.

"We try to participate in as many local MDA events as possible," she said. "I heard there was this really fun party the next town over that it would be fun to bring the boys to, and we will be there. I hope Jay realizes how grateful families affected by muscular dystrophy are for his efforts to raise money for this worthwhile cause."

The Smiths first became involved with the MDA when it was discovered that Gregory, at age four, had a muscle condition.

"The MDA has been very supportive, sending Gregory to a fantastic summer camp, setting up specialized clinic appointments, and hosting get-togethers for families affected by muscular dystrophy," Smith said. "These kinds of events bring families under similar circumstances together year after year for a really good cause, providing an opportunity for them to talk and learn what activities and therapies have worked for them."

Tolman is pleased that the Smiths will participate in this year's telethon party and has enjoyed watching the event evolve over the many years he has hosted the Hingham get-together. What became an annual effort began as a small gathering of friends watching the Jerry Lewis telethon and raising a few dollars to fight muscular dystrophy in his family's Hingham backyard more than three decades ago.

"Our telethon party moved from 'Izzy' [Jay's mother] Tolman's backyard to the Community Center in 1988, and that has been our home ever since," Tolman said.

Since that time, the event has raised more than $422,000 for the MDA. The Tolman family and countless other volunteers are looking forward to this year's event, which promises fun for everyone. (See related sidebar.)

"The race to find cures for the 40 neuromuscular diseases continues," Tolman said. "Thanks in part to those who have supported our event over the years, amazing advancements are being made."

Volunteers help the Tolmans organize the event, make homemade cookies, taco salad, and other tasty offerings, and post flyers throughout the community. All are welcome to attend.

"Our volunteers are hard at work again this year, giving of their time and energy to make our event a success," Tolman said. "For example, Nancy White from Hingham took vacation time a few weeks ago to work on donations for the raffles. The list of family members and friends who participate in this event every Labor Day weekend goes on and on."

The Tolmans' daughter, Chloe, has some surprises for partygoers this year. At the 2008 event, she and her friend, Ana Delong, sold handcrafted "MDA Rocks." This year Chloe has come up with yet another creative idea.

Thousands of volunteers have participated since the first event in 1977. Many return year after year, forming new friendships and renewing old ones.

Tolman attributes the fundraiser's continuous success to widespread support from Hingham and other South Shore residents, as well as those who travel from longer distances, some from out of state.

"The support we receive from the local community, including many businesses, is very generous," Tolman said.

For many years, Jay's father, John, has traveled from Florida to support the effort by counting the money people donate and pitching in where needed. This year is no exception. "At age 88, he hits the streets with bucket in hand to collect for MDA," Tolman said with a smile.

Families with loved ones suffering from the disease often find that events such as the Tolman party give them hope that a cure will be found soon.

"One of the most important things we can give is hope," Tolman said. "It is the desire of all of us that someday, not too far into the future, we will all gather together to acknowledge not the years of hoping but the year that muscular dystrophy was defeated."

Smith also spoke of the advances the MDA has made in treatments and cures over the years. "They are getting so close," she said. "It gives us hope that eventually there will be a cure for these disorders."

MDA-funded scientists have made great strides toward treatment or cures for neuromuscular disorders over the years, Tolman said. For further information, visit www.mda.org.

Hingham MDA telethon event is this weekend

With the arrival of Labor Day, it's time once again for the 24-hour Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Association Telethon Party. The event, now in its 33rd year, is scheduled for Sept. 6 and 7 at Hingham Community Center, 70 South St.

This fun-filled fund-raising party runs from 7 p.m. Sunday until 7 p.m. on Monday, Labor Day.

Despite the name, guests do many fun things, make donations, and watch the Jerry Lewis Telethon on a large-screen TV, but they do not make calls.

Attending has become a tradition for many families living in Hingham, other South Shore communities, and beyond.

The event begins at 7 p.m. Sunday. A lively, group of costumed, award-winning Irish Step Dancers will kick off the festivities, followed by more fun, good food, and the showing of classic Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis comedies. Channel 5 will cover the event Sunday evening.

The partty continues throughout the night as tireless and enthusiastic volunteers and supporters "Stay Up and Watch the Stars Come Out" from midnight to 8 a.m.

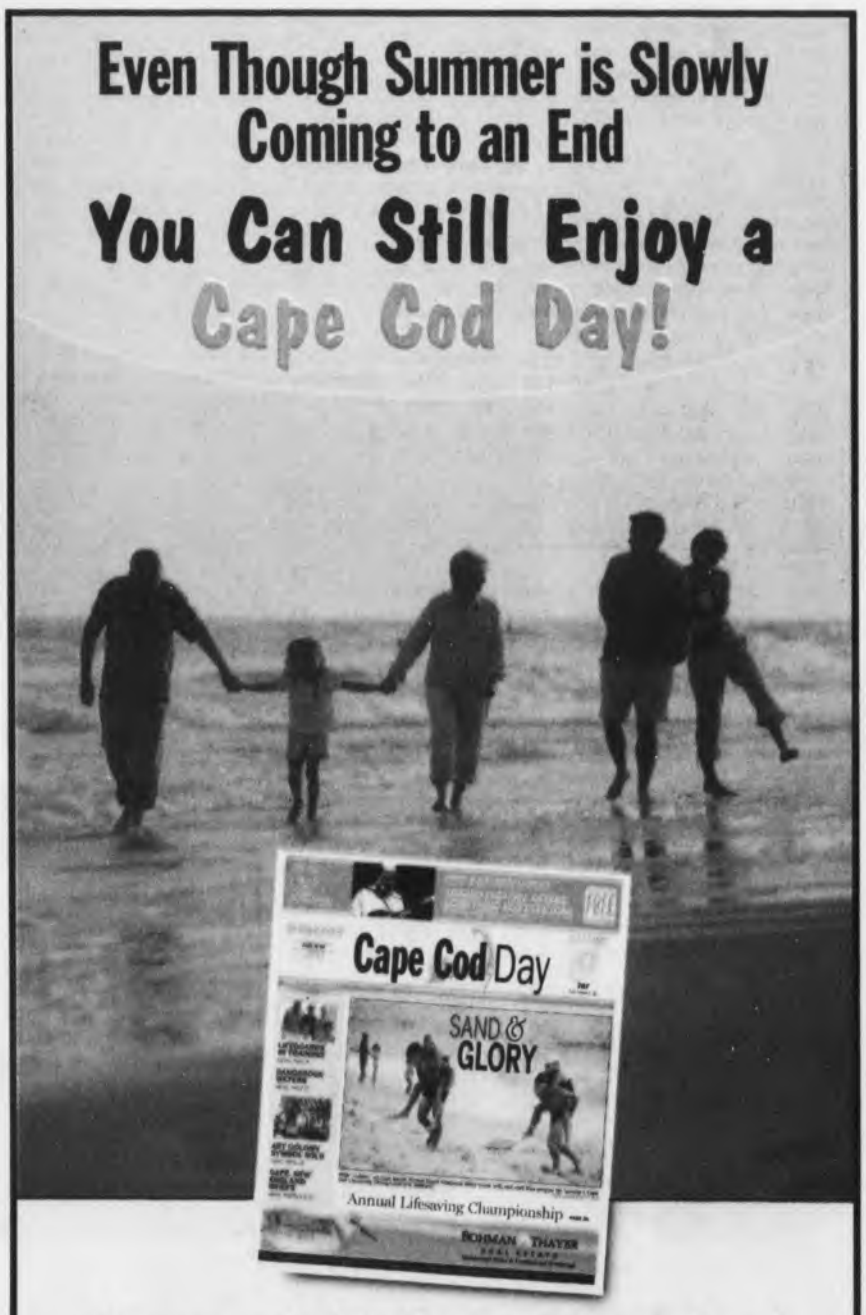
Wake-up call (for those who manage to catch a few winks Sunday night) is from 9 to 11 a.m., when a continental breakfast is served.

Wrapping up the event, a Labor Day cookout is planned from 1 to 6 p.m., featuring the music of The Infractions (from noon to 2 p.m.), clowns, pony rides, balloons, face painting, T-shirts, raffles, and food. The Hingham telethon finale is from 6 to 7 p.m.



For more information about the event, raffle, how to make a donation, photos, and the history of the telethon party, visit www.tolmantelethon.com or call the telethon hotline at (781) 749-9786 beginning Sun., Sept. 6.

The MDA is a voluntary health organization dedicated to eradicating more than 40 forms of the disease.

Those who cannot attend the event but who wish to make a donation may send their contributions, with checks made payable to MDA/Muscular Dystrophy Association, to: MDA Telethon, c/o Jay Tolman, 3 Forest Circle, Cohasset, MA 02025. Donations may also be made online at www.tolman-telethon.com.

Proceeds from this year's party will be donated to the MDA in memory of former Hingham resident Richard Berberian Jr., son of Richard and Joan Berberian; former Weymouth resident John Fasci, Jr., son of John and Mary Fasci; and Mattie Stepanek, son of Jeni Stepanek, all of whom succumbed to the disease. "The spirit and courage of these young men and their families is an inspiration to us all," Jay Tolman said.

Journey to your center

Second Congregational Church acquires labyrinth

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Webster Dictionary defines "labyrinth" as "a place constructed of or filled with confusing, intricate passageways; a maze."

But, some labyrinths are not meant to confound or confuse, in fact, just the opposite. For some, the labyrinth can be a spiritual journey — meditative and prayerful.

The Second Congregational Church recently became the proud owners of a canvas labyrinth. Based on an ancient archetype, labyrinths are a single-path maze-like structure found in many religious traditions in various forms around the world.

Walkers amble through the well-defined pathway that winds its way to the center and back out again. For each participant, the experience is different — each time walking the labyrinth can yield different emotions, thoughts and results.

"It's a mysterious journey inward as you make your way to the center. It's very reflective, very restorative, very illuminating," said Judy Ritts, a member of Second Congo. "It opens you up to something beyond logic…sometimes you feel grateful, sometimes you feel a yearning to be with someone or somewhere."

Ritts sees the journey as a spiritual metaphor where although the participant is twisting and turning and perhaps a bit unsure during the journey — "you always end up in a safe place."

Second Congregation's labyrinth is portable, but was custom-made in an octagonal shape to fit between the four pillars in church's Bates Hall first floor meeting room. The labyrinth's paths are outlined in a deep purple on sturdy cream-colored canvas.

Underneath the deep purple paint are prayers written in pencil by the congregation over the past few months. A large group of church members spent many hours hand-painting the labyrinth making sure to stay within the penciled lines of the maze-like drawing.

"I like the geometry of it; I'm amazed by it. It is a beautiful symbol to me," said the Reverend Gary Ritts, pastor of Second Congregational Church.

Besides mundane rules like walking in bare feet or with socks and staying relatively quiet in order to be respectful of each person's journey, each labyrinth walker can establish his or her own way to walk the labyrinth.

Although for many the experience of the labyrinth is a journey inward — a path one walks on one's own — often the experience is shared by a group.

"You have to move or adjust along the way (as you come upon other people)," said Rev. Ritts.

In order to walk the narrow path, the participant must be aware of the people walking around them. Often, a walker has to step aside to let another pass or marvel at the way one minute a friend is on the other side of the labyrinth and the next minute he/she is on the path next to you.

"There is no right or wrong way to walk the labyrinth," said Susi Coley, church member.

"I like to think of it as east meets west," Judy Ritts said. "It's meditation

Clutter Coach

Cohasset resident gets organized

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset resident Molly McGowan started her business probably like no other.

Six years ago, she found herself rearranging other people's possessions while visiting her friends' homes. While talking, she would organize in a logical fashion — potholders near the stove, shorter glasses to the front of the cabinet.

One day a friend told her, "you know, you could get paid for that."

And Molly the Clutter Coach was born.

"Now I go to people's houses and help them de-clutter their kitchens, their closets, their garages, their playrooms, their home offices," McGowan said.

Not always an organizational maven, McGowan began to develop her simple organizational logic when she bought a condo at age 25.

"I was so house proud, I wanted to make it the nicest, neatest most organized place," she said. "Since then I can't help myself."

Regional dispatch

Grant for new center

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A long-anticipated regional dispatch center could open in Hingham by next July, thanks to a $2.1 million grant awarded last week.

Town Manager Bill Griffin confirmed the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Norwell and Hull have received the hefty state 911 Department to move forward with a regional center. The dispatch center, based in Hingham, would initially serve Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, and Norwell, and possibly more communities later on.

This week, Cohasset officials indicated many pieces needed to come together for the four-town dispatch center to come to fruition.

"It's another step in regards to making the regional dispatch center a reality," Police Chief James Hussey said of the grant this week. "There's still a lot of work to be done."

To date, the towns have received a $1million grant from the State 911 Department to design and construct the center itself, and now the $2.1 million for equipment from the same agency. Since the funds are being

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Adopt-a-street program

The Board of Health's Adopt-a-street program is looking for more participants. Families, organizations and businesses are welcome to join.

Health Inspector and program coordinator Tara Tradd has targeted additional areas of town that need a little help with litter.

Organizations, businesses, families and individuals can adopt a street, a portion of a street, park or other public place and keep it free of litter. If interested, contact program coordinator Tradd at the Board of Health office, (781) 383-4116 or by e-mail at tarat@townofcohasset.org.

POLICE BEAT

Road rage ends in assault

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The man on the motorcycle admitted to swearing at the motorist and yelling, "you almost killed me!" before the driver exited his car and the incident escalated.

A 56-year-old Scituate man on a motorcycle on Border Street by Atlantica was cut off by a motorist pulling out of a parking space along Border Street on Saturday at about 1:05 p.m.

The man on the motorcycle told police the driver of the newer blue car (possibly a Nissan or Lexus) did not check for vehicles before pulling out. The men had words, police said. The motorist then got out of his car and allegedly punched the other man three times on his helmet. He also allegedly spat at the motorcyclist but missed.

The man on the motorcycle admitted to swearing at the motorist and yelling, "you almost killed me!" before the driver exited his car and the incident escalated.

The alleged victim provided a plate number but it was apparently incorrect because it does not match up with a vehicle, police said.

Summonsed

• A 22-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for operating after license suspension after a detail officer saw him drive-by his Cushing Road location at 9:21 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 31). The motorist, whose license was suspended for distribution of marijuana, is known to police. The man is also charged with operating with an obstructed window (over-tinted glass).

• An officer stopped a 2007 Jeep Wrangler on King Street by Sohier Street after seeing that the Jeep had an expired inspection sticker. A registry check showed the owner, a 44-year-old Cohasset, man had a suspended license. The officer pulled the Jeep over end identified the owner/operator who is being summonsed for operating after license suspension (failure to pay for a previous ticket). Police said the man said the non-payment was an oversight and he would make his peace with the registry.

• A 38-year-old Hingham woman is being summonsed for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and speeding following a traffic stop on Sohier Street at about 5:44 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 3). A registry check after she was stopped for speeding in a 2003 Ford Expedition showed her license had expired on her birthday last March, police said.

• While conducting radar patrol, police stopped a 2007 Ford pickup on Saturday at 9:16 p.m. on Hull Street near Cedar Street for speeding. A computer check revealed the operator had a suspended license for a payment default. He is being summonsed to court for operating after license suspension and for not wearing a seatbelt.

Arrest

Police arrested at 24-year-old Scituate woman driving a 2001 Saturn following a traffic stop on Friday (Sept. 4) at Depot Court and S. Main Street. A routine check on the plate through the cruiser's mobile data terminal by the officer revealed the woman was wanted on a warrant (for past motor vehicle offense). The registry photograph matched the driver, police said.

Banned

A 37-year-old Milton woman in a 2007 red Toyota has been banned from the parking lot at Sandy Beach after repeatedly speeding through the lot. She also did not have a beach sticker, police said.

Swear words

A passerby notified police about a group of teens in the process of painting the face of Beacon Rock on Government Island. Police responded and stopped seven teens (six, 13-year-olds and one, 12-year-old), all from Scituate. Police determined which youth painted the obscenities on the rock. His parents were contacted and are working with the Cohasset DPW to have the graffiti taken off with a power washer, police said.

A 59-year-old South Weymouth man operating a 2002 Mitsubishi Galant northbound on Route 3A at the Beechwood Street intersection was cut off by a 22-year-old Scituate woman, traveling south, who was making a left onto Beechwood from 3A. The woman was operating a 1997 Chevrolet Blazer. The Mitsubishi, which had to be towed, hit the Chevrolet that pulled in front of it, police said. There were no apparent injuries. The Scituate woman was cited for failure to yield the right of way. The crash occurred at 2:04 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 1).

Bike, scooter

A resident turned in a green and silver Trek mountain bike found on the Common and a red Sharper Image electric scooter found on Sohier Street last week. The scooter had been abandoned on Sohier Street for four days, police said.

Suspicious teens

Police responded to a call reporting a vehicle full of teens acting suspiciously at about 7 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 4) on Brook Street. The caller walked to the back of the Masonic Lodge and discovered some beer and wine coolers. The teens left in a car. Police did not have a description of the car or the teens. Found were eight Bud Lites, two Coors Lites, two Twisted Teas and one Budweiser, police said.

Larceny

A 67-year-old Cohasset man who has a 1997 Saturn station wagon reported that his car had been entered several days before. He reported the incident on Saturday but did not immediately realize that items were missing. Missing are his eyeglasses valued at $500. The man, who routinely leaves his car unsecured, saw his console open on Sept. 1 but did not think anything of it at the time.

The 'artists' for the planning board

Design Review Board gets guidance

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Design Review Board needed some guidance.

Back up and running after being saved by a Town Meeting vote in 2007, the advisory group is still getting a handle on its role in Planning Board filings.

"We're looking to the Design Review Board for the subjective judgment that I was always uncomfortable with on this board," Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said at a recent meeting. When it came to adherence to the bylaw, technical expertise, Moore felt comfortable expressing concerns to the developers. Yet, when it came to rooflines or the color of the building, he felt that was out of the Planning Board's purview.

"That's where I see Design Review fitting in," Moore said.

While the planning board could not deny an application solely based on the failure to comply with Design Review's recommendations, Moore said he would want a developer to be cooperative. "We do have some clout with any developer."

Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey likened the Design Review Board to an artist while the planning board is the engineer.

Planning Board member Jean Healey Dippold said the developers should view the Design Review Board as free constructive advice.

Rob Skolnick, Design Review chairman, agreed. "I think we are able to impact a design, simply based on having another set of eyes come up with some ideas."

Yet, Skolnick said they faced an uphill battle with their first application review, the 8 James Lane condominium development. Part of the reason, he said, was the board's involvement late in the process.

In the future, Planning Board member Clark Brewer said to leave contact information in the Planning Board and Building Commission office so they can get involved early on in the process. If a project comes to the Planning Board for a preliminary discussion of the project, Moore said they would refer the applicant to the Design Review Board.

Ultimately, Moore said he was counting on the Design Review Board to work with each developer to ensure the prospective building is a positive addition to the town.

"I want you all (the Design Review Board and the applicant) to come in here hand and hand and singing a happy song," Moore said.

Another piece for the Design Review Board was the village design guidelines, which are currently in draft form. The Planning Board has been waiting for the design review board's input before adopting the regulations.

The design guidelines, simply stated, are a set of regulations to go with the village zoning bylaws to aid both the Planning Board and the applicants during the permitting process. It includes a set of guiding principles as well as specific areas for application assessments from rooflines to materials to signage to landscaping.

Brewer and Ivimey disagreed on how strict the guidelines should be on village design.

"The guidelines shouldn't be so prescriptive as to discourage creativity in design," said Brewer.

Meanwhile, Ivimey said, "I think we should legislate quality and taste and not count on the good will of the developer to do it."

All agreed they wanted the draft guidelines to be approved as soon as possible. The Design Review Board will be back to discuss the guidelines with the Planning Board in the near future.

Three seasonal flu clinics offered

The Cohasset Health Department will begin its seasonal flu campaign with three clinics this year.

• The first clinic will be on Tuesday, Sept. 22 from 10 a.m. to noon at Town Hall.

• The second clinic will be on Tuesday, Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to noon at Town Hall.

These clinics are for seniors (65 or older) and high-risk adults (those over 21 with a chronic health condition).

• From 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Oct. 24, there will be a town-wide seasonal flu clinic for any resident 9 years of age or older.

Clinics are free of charge and open to Cohasset residents. If Medicare covers you, bring your card.

Stay tuned for further updates and news about availability of the H1N1 vaccine.

Anyone with questions should call Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210. People are encouraged to get a seasonal flu shot early this year.

Remote risk for EEE in Cohasset

According to a state map released by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Cohasset is considered in the remote risk category for the EEE (Eastern Equine Encephalitis) virus.

EEE is a rare but serious disease caused by a virus. The virus that causes EEE is spread through the bite of an infected mosquito. In Massachusetts, the virus is most often identified in mosquitoes found in and around freshwater, hardwood swamps.

EEE is a very rare disease. Since the virus was first identified in Massachusetts in 1938, fewer than 100 cases have occurred. Over 60 percent of those cases have been from Plymouth and Norfolk counties. Outbreaks of EEE usually occur in Massachusetts every 10-20 years. These outbreaks will typically last two to three years. The most recent outbreaks began in 2004 and included 13 cases with six fatalities through 2006.

awarded based on this being a regional center, Hingham, as the lead community, needs to execute an inter-municipal agreement with at least one of the other towns to begin accessing the grant funds, Griffin said.

"An inter-municipal agreement for the four towns is being finalizes and will need to be approved by the Board of Selectmen of each town," Griffin said. Town Meeting approval is not needed.

The dispatch center needs to be designed by an architect and the entire project (the communications systems, the physical construction and the equipment outfitting) needs to be put out to bid, then constructed. The $2.1 million will cover capital costs, including telecommunications and electronic equipment.

"While it would be great to have all that done by July of next year, it remains a real challenge," Griffin said.

In addition, each of the four towns will have to impact bargain with their respective dispatch unions. Griffin said Cohasset has given notice to its unions that the consolidation is planned and offered to meet with them to discuss their concerns and the future. As of last Thursday, the Cohasset union had yet to respond to that offer.

Each of the towns will need to figure out how to operate its department when the regional dispatch center opens.

"The town has to determine how to handle the station and that hasn't been decided yet," Hussey said. Right now, the station is open 24 hours a day.

Yet, officials expect the regional dispatch center to provide a cost savings for each town and enhance services.

Griffin did not yet have a budget estimate of what will be saved by the consolidation. The current dispatch costs between the four towns is $1.4 million annually. Each year, the towns received approximately $107,000 in state grants annual, with regionalization that number could quadruple to $420,000.

"It will give the dispatchers more support and they can rely on each other if things get busy."
-Chief James Hussey

Negotiation on cost sharing between the towns and finalizing the expected budget for center are ongoing, Griffin said.

One of the primary benefits of the dispatch center according to Chief Hussey is the ability to really do "emergency medical dispatch," where a dispatcher works with someone over the phone until medical help arrives. A second dispatcher can pass information on to the responding units. In Cohasset where is typically one dispatcher on duty it is difficult, if not impossible, to do both.

"It will give the dispatchers more support and they can rely on each other if things get busy," Hussey said. When the electricity goes out, there is a major accident, or multiple incidents at about the same time, police dispatch can get flooded with calls and there is only one person to answer them. "(Regional dispatch) will make the quality of their job a lot better."

Hingham officials said construction for the center could begin by February. The dispatch center will be located in the current Hingham Police Headquarters on Central Street.

Building such a facility in Hingham has been a top priority among public safety and other town officials. Town safety officials have been hammering out the details of the project for about two years.

The regional dispatch center is expected to increase safety for fire, EMS, and police personnel with improved radio systems, common database software, and protocols for operations and information-sharing among the four towns, public safety officials said. This would lead to improved response times and ensure compliance with state and federal standards.

Services to the public would also be improved, including 9-1-1 response times. Emergency medical dispatch service would be provided across all four towns; certified dispatchers would provide pre-arrival care instructions in accordance with national standards; and regional 24/7/365 coverage would be available.

Such a system would also provide better application of technology, including software upgrades, to facilitate information-sharing and new radio systems to eliminate dead spots and to standardize frequency bands.

This is not the first time a cooperative effort to regionalize emergency services was attempted. In the early 1990s, Cohasset, along with Scituate, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell, received a grant for a $30,000 feasibility study for a regional fire and rescue service. Despite initial support from local politicians and emergency service personnel and the promise of cost savings, the effort never got off the ground.

Hingham Journal staff reporter Carol Britton Meyer also contributed to this report.

President Obama's 'Back to School' message

A full day of instruction planned for Cohasset Public School students led the district to not show President Barack Obama's nationwide "Back to School" message in the classroom, Superintendent Denise Walsh said by e-mail Tuesday afternoon.

Some parents in other South Shore school systems — and across the nation — contacted their respective superintendents or school principals indicating they did not want their children watching the speech during school time. Others objected to the suggested lesson plans that accompanied the speech.

In lieu of the video being shown in classrooms, a copy of the transcript from Obama's address and a video link to the actual speech was posted on the Cohasset schools web homepage, "for parents to use to discuss with their children if they choose," Walsh said.

In lieu of the video being shown in classrooms, a copy of the transcript from Obama's address and a video link to the actual speech was posted on the Cohasset schools web homepage...

The White House posted the speech online Monday so parents and teachers could read it before he delivered it at an Arlington, Va., high school on Tuesday.

Superintendent Walsh said at the secondary level, history/civics teachers used the opportunity to discuss the President's message within the context of their studies.

The Superintendent's Office had one inquiry on the matter on the day the speech was scheduled to be shown (Tuesday, Sept. 8), Walsh said.

"Therefore I feel parents were comfortable with how it was handled," Walsh stated.

Cohasset, Scituate meet over Minot Light

The deadline to express interest in becoming the next caretaker of Minot Ledge Lighthouse is fast approaching. At the end of September, letters of interest are due at the federal General Services Administration office.

Neither the Town of Cohasset nor The town of Scituate has completely shut out the possibility of becoming lighthouse owners (or teaming up in the endeavor). Minot Light has special significance to both towns — the light was built in Cohasset and its lightkeepers' lived in Cohasset, but the structure itself it located in Scituate waters. Minot Light is visible from both towns' coasts.

The selectmen sub-committee delegated to look into the details of owning a 149-year-old lighthouse was schedule to meet with the Scituate selectmen delegation Thursday night after the Mariner went to press. (Check www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset for updates).

Selectmen Karen Quigley and Ted Carr were appointed to find out more information and explore options in regards to the historic lighthouse. Scituate Board of Selectmen designated selectmen Rick Murray and John Danehey to represent Scituate in discussions with Cohasset about Minot Light.

The selectmen sub-committee delegated to look into the details of owning a 149-year-old lighthouse was schedule to meet with the Scituate selectmen delegation Thursday night after the Mariner went to press.

At the Selectmen's meeting held on Aug. 24, the Selectmen agreed on the historical significance of the lighthouse to the town, but hesitated to jump in head first without knowing the specifics, especially cost-related specifics, of maintaining the lighthouse structure going forward.

In early August, the United States General Services Administration announced the availability of Minot Light to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge. An effort that's part of the National Historic Lighthouse Act of 2000, which began the process of taking historic lighthouses off of the national ledger.

If no non-profit agency is found to take control of the light, the lighthouse will be sold at public auction.

The delegated Cohasset Selectmen are expected to report to the greater board what they have found out in upcoming meetings, so the board can make a more informed decision about sending a letter of interest to the General Services Administration.

The Cohasset Historical Society has announced it is willing to support the organization that ultimately takes over the lighthouse, but is not able to take on the responsibility (and liability) on its own. Historical Society officials said previously they do not intend to submit a letter of interest to the General Services Administration.

Food service partnership on table

The school's three cafeterias are open and September's lunch menu is up on the school's website (www.cohassetk12.org). Cohasset and Hingham Public Schools are still looking to partner in a shared food service director's position.

"We want the director to grow the program, offer new menu items and healthier options," said Business Manager Dave DeGennaro. The management position would oversee both towns' school cafeteria operations. The towns' school business managers and two teachers have interviewed 10 candidates for the position from a pool over 80 applicants.

DeGennaro said the towns are still looking at the partnership and nothing is set in stone. There are some questions in regards to the position's retirement system as the towns are in separate counties.

The cost sharing of the position whether it is 50/50 or 60/40 or some other division is yet to be determined, DeGennaro said.

"We want to be sure both towns are comfortable and happy with the agreement," Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said.

41 Year Old Loses 25 Pounds & 4 Dress Sizes!

BEFORE

"Like many others, my time is stretched every day with work and family life. Over the past few years I struggled with thoughts of wanting to improve my health and fitness. I joined several gyms but after a couple of visits all I was left with was an expensive key chain tag. Last November I decided to give Get in Shape for Women a try. What a difference the right gym can make. Get in Shape for Women is fun, challenging, and the results have been fabulous! I hate working out, always have and always will. But Get in Shape is different; they hold me accountable for my diet and exercise by appointment requirements, personal attention, and result monitoring. Most importantly the trainers there are very motivating. I only have to show up and let them take over. Each possesses qualities and knowledge that drive my mental and physical progress with every visit. They correct my form making sure I get the most out of my workouts. They focus on the positive results, inspiring me. They push me to go "the extra mile" and maximize my competitiveness. The atmosphere of family is what keeps me coming back. Since joining Get in Shape for Women I have lost 25 lbs. 15% body fat, and have gone from a size 12 to a size 6. I know I could not have achieved these results without Get in Shape, the staff and support of fellow clients. I highly recommend this program to anyone who may need that added nudge to maintain a healthy lifestyle."

with movement."

Unlike many Eastern meditation traditions where one sits and contemplates for meditation, Ritts said the labyrinth appeals to Westerners (Europeans and North Americans) because of the movement involved.

Rev. Ritts said when walkers arrive at the center there can be a strong spiritual response. He said he has seen people leave tokens at the center of the labyrinth, some hold hands with friends, some sit or lay down. Some merely turn around and walk out while others linger in the center.

"There's a simplicity about it that's beautiful," Judy Ritts said.

"There's a simplicity about it that's beautiful."

— Judy Ritts

During the Lenten season this past spring, Second Congregational Church rented a portable labyrinth and held a workshop on "Walking the Labyrinth." After the experience, the congregation's interest was piqued and they decided to purchase one of their own labyrinths.

The spring labyrinth experience had candles lit and Celtic music in the background.

"Bates Hall became a different place," Coley said.

Second Congregation aims to continue this tradition and is making their labyrinth available for the public on the first Sunday of every month from 7 to 9p.m. The first night will be Sunday, Oct. 4. Labyrinth walkers should allow between 30 and 45 minutes to walk the labyrinth.

There are several other labyrinths in Cohasset and the surrounding area. In Cohasset, there are two outside labyrinths, one in Wheelwright Park and one at the St. Joseph's Retreat Center on Jerusalem Road. In Hingham, Old Ship Church has a labyrinth built into the floor of its parish house (this one is open to the public on the second Tuesday of every month from 7 to 9p.m.) and there is a labyrinth at Glastonbury Abbey.

The congregation is willing to accommodate local groups interested in walking the labyrinth, contact the church office at 781-383-0345, scc@2ndcc.org.

Second Congregational Church is located at 43 Highland Ave., across from the Common.

Landscape designer Marie Stella lecture

The Cohasset Garden Club and the Cohasset Gulf Association, Inc. are co-sponsoring a lecture by landscape designer Marie Stella. Open to the public and free of charge, this lecture will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 16, at St. Anthony's Church Hall, Cohasset. Refreshments will be served.

Marie Stella, noted landscape designer and historian, describes innovative ways to use plant material and other innovative methods to clean your air, soil and water.

Highlights of her talk include: Natural swimming pools without chemicals; dry gardening; the meadow; plant buffer zones; paving alternatives; water conserving mulches; the green eco roof. And more: Biosulpture—beautiful living sculptures created from carefully chosen plants that also clean and filter water; New technologies for Rainwater and Greywater harvesting to irrigate your property above and below ground; Phytoremediation—which plants will clean soil and create a healthier environment for you, your family and community.

Mother of three surpasses weight loss goal and is back in "skinny" jeans!
Amazing and Wonderful! That best describes how I feel since joining Get In Shape For Women, and, it has been one of the best things I have done for myself. Tired of scarcely being able to button my pants and having a lack of energy all the time, I needed to do something that would make me feel better. Get In Shape For Women has done more than that! My initial goal to lose 12 pounds and fit back into my favorite jeans has been surpassed. Losing 15% body fat and 21 pounds has far exceeded my expectations, and I could have never done any of this on my own. By following the exercise program and nutritional advice that Get In Shape For Women recommends, I have lost over 10 inches around my waist and hips. I actually look forward to working out with the trainers because I feel so good both physically and mentally after my workout. My trainers show how each exercise should be done correctly to make sure that it is effective. They push you to your fullest capacity and are exceptionally supportive and encouraging. The atmosphere is very welcoming and energetic. I absolutely love it! I cannot thank Get In Shape For Women enough.

AROUND TOWN
JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

THOUGHTS, PRAYERS

Hello Cohasset. Today marks the anniversary of the 9/11 tragedy as I am sure all know. Please make sure to remember those who lost their lives that day, the families and friends of those who died as they continue to deal with their losses and to honor also the men and women who worked on that horrible day as well as in the days after doing all they could to find, rescue and in many cases, help the families with the tragedy. Thoughts, prayers and faith are being sent to all who were affected on this day.

SCHOOL DAYS

School and fall are in the air and here and from the news "Around Town," most are dealing with everything really well. I think that the hardest part for most students and families seems to be the transition from summer and adjusting to the schedules, etc. Keep up the great work to all students and in a few weeks, it will be just fine!

HONORS GRAD

Congratulations are in order for Kyle DeSisto, a 2009 honors graduate of Boston College High School who has been named an AP Scholar based on his superior performance on the College Board Advanced Placement exams. Kyle is the son of Todd and Laura DeSisto, and is a freshman at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine. Nice news to hear Kyle! Your family and friends are very proud of all you do.

ACCEPTED

Cari Golden Teal, daughter of Doris Golden of Cohasset and a member of the Class of 1980 at Cohasset High School, was accepted into the Tennessee School of Anesthesia in Nashville.

After completing the three-year program, Cari will return to Boston with her husband, Bruce, and their three children, Robert 17, Caroline 16, and Rebecca 14, to do her residency.

Cari graduated from Northeastern's five-year nursing program in 1985 and continued on to Boston University and received her MBA in business specializing in finance and operations. She worked at

SCHOLAR AWARD

Cohasset's Drew Nahill, recipient of the 2009 Scholar Award. received a congratulatory citation from Governor Duval Patrick at the State House in Boston. The Scholar Leader Award is given annually to an eighth grade boy and girl who the junior high teachers believe has demonstrated high academic achievement and peer leadership qualities.

DEMOCRAT PARTY

A note to pass on about the Cohasset Democrat Celebration with special guests Lt. Gov. Tim Murray and state Rep. Garrett Bradley. The Cohasset Town Democratic Committee sponsors this event. Come celebrate Obama's first year in office; meet and mingle with fellow Democrats and Independents; enjoy live jazz, delicious hors d'oeuvres, and fine wine and beer; and pave the way to many great years. The event is being held on Saturday, Sept. 12th from 7-to-9 pm at Helene Lieb and Ed Lappen's home. If you would like more information please contact Teresa Polhemus at 781-923-1413 or by email at tpolhemus@aol.com or Kevin McCarthy at kemccar68@comcast.net.

OUR WORLD

This fall, many programs are beginning for the school year in all communities and the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum kicks off Falltime Fun next week. The Museum is open on Tuesdays-Fridays from 10 am-5 pm and also offers a variety of classes, workshops and parties for all ages. Whether you are looking for Toddler and Preschool programs for drop-off or, looking for an afternoon program in theater, Get Green With Miss Jean or art, science, for ages 2 and up through Adult then go to www.ourworldcgdm.org for the most updated schedule of events.

Veterans visiting hours starting up

VETERANS
JOE MCELROY

Hopefully, everyone had a wonderful summer respite. I have reinstituted visiting hours at the Paul Pratt Library and asked the Mariner to publish them. However, feel free to call me and we can meet almost anytime/anywhere that is mutually convenient by calling 781-383-0505.

We will host a forum for veterans, dependents, and surviving spouses at St. Anthony's Parish Hall from 10 a.m. to noon, 10 Summer St. on Saturday, Oct. 24. All Cohasset residents are welcome. Publicity and a letter to veterans will precede the forum. Save the date.

Periodically, I will ask the Mariner to publish information that I feel is important to know. I do not want to commit to a regular weekly or bi-weekly articles just to occupy valuable print space and your time. Of course, I can be contacted at anytime to address your questions, concerns or need for assistance for yourself, a family member or friend. Do not hesitate to seek helpful advice for a family member or friend who lives outside our community. We have a nationwide assistance network.

When I write letters to members of the Cohasset veterans' community; I use census information maintained by the Massachusetts Secretary of State. Unfortunately, the database only includes veterans. It does not include surviving spouses. Surviving spouses may have entitlements of which they are unaware. I recommend that surviving spouses call me and I will establish a database and assure they receive any communications that veterans receive.

There are literally hundreds of useful information elements that I could share with you and I certainly depend on others for detailed expertise (Federal/State/local levels). Today, I will limit myself to noting that:

a. There is no time limit for filing for Federal entitlements, which fall into the major categories of: a. service-connected disability compensation and pension, b. education, c. health care, and d. death and survivor benefits. I continue to file for World War II, Korean and Vietnam War veterans.

b. Massachusetts offers comprehensive assistance for a wide range of benefits; particularly, for those who are in need of outreach and counseling, women and returning veterans, temporary shelter, employment training and work opportunities as well as bridging financial crises.

c. Cohasset is one of the most supportive communities in the Commonwealth in helping veterans.

All communications are treated in accordance with strict privacy/confidentiality rules.

Yours in comradeship, Joseph R. McElroy, Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services

Veterans' agent visiting hours

The Cohasset veterans' agent will be available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road in Room 2B on the following dates to offer assistance to veterans, surviving spouses.

Going green is kid's play

Local woman to teach class on sustainability

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Renewal, in several different forms, is the operative word for Jean Di Giacomandrea's latest venture.

First, in a new class offered at the Our World Children's Museum — "Get Green with Miss Jean" — she plans to teach children how to reduce, recycle, reuse, and renew. As part of her "Green Team" kids will learn the basics of living a sustainable life.

Second, on a personal level, Di Giacomandrea said after losing her job in the spring she is finding her passion and embarking on a renewed sense of purpose in life.

Di Giacomandrea, a Scituate resident, has developed a class to teach children in an age-appropriate fashion how their actions affect the world around them.

She'll teach them about where the garbage goes, how little things like turning the lights off when you leave a room make a difference, and the three eco-conscious R's — reduce, reuse, recycle.

An active part of the Cohasset Dramatic Club for over a decade, she said she is coming armed with a sense of imagination, a flair for the dramatic and passion for children.

The class will involve an array of different activities: hands on projects, arts and crafts, song, stories and games.

"I want to make their learning more fun," said Di Giacomandrea. "It's amazing how much they can learn and retain at such a young age."

Beside her, helping her with her message, will be her puppet, Jewel Renewal, a smiling child-size little girl. During the summer she learned how much young children love to interact and engage with puppets, she said, and wanted to incorporate one into her lessons.

The class will run for six weeks, an hour and a half each class. The class is offered for ages 2 to 6 and ages 6 to 9.

Jean Di Giacomandrea, along with her puppet friend, Jewel Renewal, will teach kids the basics of living an environmentally conscious life.

"I just want to have fun, make children happy, teach them something and hopefully make a difference."

— Jean Di Giacomandrea

While she said she wouldn't describe herself as an environmentalist, Di Giacomandrea is doing what she can to lessen her carbon footprint.

"I find myself practicing what I preach," she said. "And it's so important to get the kids to understand when they're young so they'll develop good habits."

After attending her class, she hopes the lessons taught will reverberate throughout the child's household and for many years.

"I want them to know how they can do their part in making sure the Earth — and everything they love about it — is clean and safe when they are my age," Di Giacomandrea said.

Like what she plans to teach, Di Giacomandrea is in a personal renewal process. After losing her job in May, Di Giacomandrea re-evaluated what she wanted to do in life. She spent 32 years in the printing industry doing the 9-to-5. In the aftermath of being laid off she took advantage of everything the government offered — seminars, workshops, online learning, career services. Through the process, she realized maybe what she had been doing wasn't what she wanted or should be doing with her life.

She decided perhaps this was her time to harness her experience, passion and untouched resources to begin a new chapter in her life.

"I'll be 50 in October and this is a whole new beginning for me," she said. "I'm very excited, very proud of myself (for not playing the victim of the economy)."

Di Giacomandrea began to let her imagination flow and out of it came "Get Green with Miss Jean" and already has ideas to grow the business, if the response to the initial classes are positive.

"I just want to have fun, make children happy, teach them something and hopefully make a difference," Di Giacomandrea said.

Although she has done the 9-to-5 for the last three decades she found time to work closely with local youth. She has been a fixture of the Cohasset Dramatic Club for the past 14 years taking part in all aspects of the productions, including many children's productions. Di Giacomandrea has also been involved in the Donna Green Magical Moon Foundation that helps kids with cancer and their families.

This summer, she volunteered at Our World and helped the kids put on an end-of-summer show.

"I got a great response from the kids. They make you laugh and you just feed off their energy," Di Giacomandrea said. The experience ignited her passion to work with kids and spurred on her Get Green with Miss Jean class.

"Basically, I'm reinventing myself and I'm really excited about it," she said.

For more information, contact Jean Di Giacomandrea at getgreenwithmissjean@comcast.net , or visit the website, www.getgreenwithmissjean.com.

MDA telethon party a huge success

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Jay Tolman was a little "blurry-eyed" Tuesday morning following the 33rd annual 24-hour Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Association Labor Day weekend telethon party, but nonetheless he was a happy man.

"It was an amazing weekend filled with so many caring, loving people," said Tolman, a Cohasset resident. "Our telethon team worked hard this year to prepare for what we knew was going to be a difficult year given the current economy."

But despite this challenge, individuals and families from Hingham, surrounding communities, and beyond showed their whole-hearted support for the MDA cause. "Kids as well as adults were outside around the Community Center asking for support and donations to fight MD. They made the difference this year, with one team raising more than $2,800 in 24 hours," Tolman said. "Elizabeth Hennesey, now 16, who has been raising money for our event since she was five, raised close to $500. Even my father, who is 88, collected more than $100 in donations."

With money still coming in on Tuesday, the amount of money collected this year — more than $16,500 — tops last year's total.

The energetic Irish Step Dancers, the South Shore Joey clowns, Ponies for Parties, and the Infractions, a local band, were among those who donated their time to help make the event a success.

"I also talked with a number of friends who called in to pledge their support, such as Rick Miller from Las Vegas, who I went to college with, and Joan and Richard Berberian, who are huge supporters of our efforts, and also with former Hingham residents," Tolman said. "The money raised will be donated to the MDA in memory of the Berberians' son, Richard, Jr., who had muscular dystrophy."

Tolman and his family noticed many new faces this year among the many familiar ones. "The Massachusetts 'goodwill ambassador' for the MDA, Emma Russell, and her family stopped by, as well as the Smith family of Cohasset," Tolman said. "These people are why we continue the fight against muscle disease."

Besides good food and many special activities, such as a hula-hoop contest, 'scavenger' hunt, dancing, cookout, great music, and raffles, partygoers could also watch old Jerry Lewis movies and also the Jerry Lewis telethon throughout the event.

The Tolmans' daughter, Chloe, tried her hand at tarot reading to help raise money for the MDA. "I advised her that good readings should cost $2, and really good readings, $3!" Tolman quipped.

Chloe, who has been attending the party with her family since she was a young child, said she enjoys the event because it provides an opportunity to have a good time with her friends "while helping other people."

Longtime volunteer Nancy White of Weymouth, a former Hingham resident, is as enthusiastic about the event today as she was when she first became involved in 1989. Her chocolate chip cookies and taco salad always make a big hit.

White also organized the raffles this year. "Hingham businesses have been wonderful, and we appreciate their support," she said. "We couldn't do it without them."

White looks forward to the event every year. "The whole family gets involved," she said with a smile.

Tolman expressed gratitude for all the loyal volunteers, people who participated and donated, and the whole Tolman family — including his wife, Jodi, his sister Ellen, two of his children Chloe and Jack, who were able to attend, and his father, John, who traveled from Florida to help out. "I couldn't do it without their support and help," he said.

Tolman was all smiles throughout and following the event. "It's wonderful to see people helping people during these difficult times," he said. "The human spirit was alive and well this weekend in Hingham."

Event organizer, Jay Tolman of Cohasset and his daughter Chloe update the numbers on the amount of money raised on the national level of the MDA Telethon.

SANDY BEACH ASSOCIATION

THANK YOU FOR A TERRIFIC SUMMER AT THE BEACH!!!!

The Sandy Beach Association would like to thank all Cohasset residents and local businesses who have contributed to this year's annual fundraising drive. This once-a-year fundraiser is our sole appeal for funds used to clean the beach, employ the lifeguards and beach maintenance workers and maintain the bath house facility. This year was particularly challenging with below-average temperatures, above-average rainfall, four beach clean-ups and several closings. We couldn't have operated without the support of the following people and organizations.

The Office

Big Brother Bob Emery, remember him?

If you admit to seeing his TV show and being one of the "small fry" then you are in the company of many local "baby-boomers" who grew up in the 1950s here in Massachusetts.

We got to thinking about the grandfatherly, Bob Emery because on his TV show there was always a picture of President Eisenhower. Mr. Emery would toast the President with a glass of milk.

He also played the ukulele and sang: "The Grass is Always Greener in the other Fella's Yard."

The song finished with the lyrics: "But if we all could wear green glasses now, it wouldn't be so hard, to see how green that grass is in your own backyard!"

Can all this presidential and political scrutiny be a good thing? It depends. If it results in a more involved, informed electorate – then perhaps so.

There were plenty of Americans who may not have liked Eisenhower or his policies.

But generally, Americans respected the Office of the President of the United States. No one objected to Emery showing respect for Eisenhower with his toast.

We are not sure when Americans lost respect for the Office of the President.

There is plenty of blame to go around: Nixon and Watergate; Clinton and Lewinsky…

We are also not sure why President Obama's talk to school-children caused such a stir across the nation and why some people would object. We do understand that the speech fell on the first day of school in some towns and close to the first day in others making the timing and possible rescheduling of activities inconvenient.

However, we do not think that Massachusetts, of all places, where in public schools in both Cohasset and Hingham – the speech was not shown — is part of a "right-wing" conspiracy or has become a conservative stronghold.

Last time we checked, there was not a single Republican member of Congress from Massachusetts.

The balance is no better at the State House where Republicans are as rare as hen's teeth.

As journalists for many years, we can personally attest to some "discrimination" in the local newsroom towards journalists with conservative views.

Times have changed since the Big Brother Bob Emery days.

In October 1962 President Kennedy gave his televised address announcing the discovery of Soviet missiles in Cuba – the next morning our freshman homeroom teacher at Scituate High opened the Bible and we all prayed. Today, she would have been arrested.

Can all this presidential and political scrutiny be a good thing?

It depends. If it results in a more involved, informed electorate – then perhaps so.

Therefore, as Mr. Emery, said we need to see how green that grass is in our own backyard.

'School administration let us down'

COMMENTARY

HOWIE ALTHOLZ

No matter where one stands politically, we should all agree that this sort of censorship is counter to what America stands for, disrespectful to the man we just elected to solve some very serious problems, and that the manner in which it was handled a very bad lesson for our children.

While I didn't see it live, I just finished reading the text of Obama's back to school speech to students. I found it pretty awesome. The basic messages were hard work, perseverance, respect, personal responsibility and commitment, etc. It reflected on his own inspirational and rather compelling story of struggle, overcoming obstacles and achieving success... urged kids to think for themselves, reach for their dreams and work for the betterment of their communities and country.

It was an historic speech by a man with an amazing story himself.

Unfortunately you may be surprised to learn that Cohasset schools DID NOT carry it for our students. We apparently were among a number of schools that allowed an aggressive fringe message to frighten some bureaucrats that the President of the United States was too "controversial" to let our kids listen to. The man who was just elected President by a substantial majority of Americans, the leader of the free world as they say, Commander-In-Chief of the world's most powerful army, and the official spokesperson for the United States of America.

It is worth noting that many Presidents have done this in the past, including Bush1 and Reagan without a word. Not to mention the stream of local politicians, etc. who regularly have access to our schools. So I guess now, for example we couldn't have the Governor or State reps or Senators talk to our students... on any subject? Even a message of hard work and responsibility? Maybe we could just exclude anyone who has ever taken a position on any issue.

Even if there were legitimate concerns (NOT one) why not show it and then discuss it? That's the way you teach people to think. High-test scores are no doubt a good thing, but teaching kids the value and responsibility of citizenship, and to think critically doesn't come from hiding your head in the sand.

It's worth noting that every report of schools, which aired it, found the kids very engaged and energized.

Whether its claims of "socialist agenda," Muslim agenda, death panels in the health-care bill, or so called "birthers," who promote the idea that President Obama is not a citizen, the problem is not that there are whacky ideas out there... the problem is good people who don't speak up or stand up, and allow inflammatory rhetoric to intimidate them. The school administration let us all down in a major way, especially the children. They curled up in the corner on this one and hoped no one would notice.

(Supt.) Denise Walsh claims that they already had "other plans for that day" (as if this speech wasn't long in the planning) and that since she hadn't heard anything (on the day of the speech) most parents were probably happy about her approach (whatever that was). (Principal) Joel Antolini echoed the administration's, "see evil hear no evil" position. BUT, how would anyone know what was going on... or not. There was no public discussion or process that would have sought input or alerted anyone what they were planning. The school provided absolutely no information on what they were doing.

In fact the school website misleadingly made it appear that they were somehow involved and participating... I have heard from parents who were so misled by the website that they actually thanked the school for participating. The site made reference to the fact that the speech was happening, and had a link available... but if you looked deeper for any detail about what Cohasset Schools were actually doing in school... it wasn't there.

If you followed the "news" on this, you know that even most of the right-wing politicians and commentators who fanned this supposed "controversy." ultimately backed off, admitted they overreacted and encouraged kids to tune in. But in Cohasset, no news is good news was the order of the day.

No matter where one stands politically, we should all agree that this sort of censorship is counter to what America stands for, disrespectful to the man we just elected to solve some very serious problems, and that the manner in which it was handled a very bad lesson for our children.

Howie Altholz lives at 4 Cedar Ledge.

Find out about sewer connections on Sept. 26

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

How Do I Connect to the New Sewer? We very often get questions from residents of the Little Harbor area asking questions about how and when they can connect to the new sewer system. We typically refer these residents to the Sewer Commission, who has jurisdiction over such matters. But, if you haven't already heard, the Sewer Commission has planned a public informational meeting for all residents who will be connecting to the new sewer expansion project. The meeting is planned for 10 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 26th at Town Hall. They will be reviewing the connection process in detail and will entertain your questions regarding the process. The grinder pump supplier, F R Mahoney will also be available for your questions about the pumps. We are told that licensed drain layers have been invited to attend so you can meet them. (A licensed drain layer is a person who has been licensed by the Town to connect buildings to the sewer system.) If your home is on a road where the new sewer system has been installed, this is your chance find what is involved in making your connection, what the equipment looks like and who can do the work for you.

National Grid Gas Work — All summer National Grid has been replacing their gas mains in selected streets. They did work in the Atlantic end of Jerusalem Road and most recently the North Main Street end of Jerusalem. As of this Monday morning, they have moved their construction equipment to Atlantic Avenue. National Grid will be replacing the gas mains from Whitehead Road to Cunningham Bridge, about a distance of 3,000 feet. The construction on Atlantic Avenue will take a minimum of three weeks and possibly more depending on the weather and whether they strike ledge under the road. We expect that ledge may not be too much of a problem because they are generally digging in close proximity to the old mains.

If your home is on a road where the new sewer system has been installed, this is your chance find what is involved in making your connection...

The photo shows a section of Atlantic Avenue looking toward Cunningham Bridge. National Grid's contractor has used a cutter to remove the asphalt from a thin strip along this portion of Atlantic in preparation for their gas main replacement. By removing the asphalt in a cleanly cut manner, they can dig in the area without affecting the adjacent roadway paving.

We've mentioned before, but would like to reiterate that this is really a good move for our Town. It avoids the inevitable digging of out newly repaved roads to repair old gas infrastructure. So, even though it delays paving, it is a better deal for the Town.

Paving Preparation — We have occasionally been asked why we don't final pave right away when construction is completed, especially if the base coat has already been placed. The answer is not immediately obvious. We'd like to take a minute to explain the things that need to be done before the final paving is done. First of all, the road must be clean. New asphalt won't adhere to a road covered with dirt, sand or leaves and similar materials. So the road must be swept before paving. In fact, it usually requires two sweepings. The first removes the vast majority of debris and a second sweeping cleans the road immediately before paving.

Between the first and second sweeping, the edge of road needs to be cleaned by a construction crew. Places where overgrowth at the edge of the road has encroached over the road must be cleaned. A sweeper won't touch this. Sometimes we have placed temporary driveway shims to make it easier for residents to access their driveways after the base-paving coat. These temporary shims must be removed before final paving. Also, low hanging branches and plants that would interfere with the paving machine must also be cut back from the road.

Paving the Common — Yes, paving the Common is still very much on our horizon. Last week we spoke with several contractors about doing the necessary repairs to some of the in-the-road structures that were damaged when they were raised in anticipation of paving. Since, these repairs for the most part require digging to below the frost line to the valve below, there is concern that the backfill material might sink causing a depression in the new paving. We finally decided to require the contractor who does this work to use flowable fill.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Slit Cut In Atlantic Avenue.

Flowable fill is a very interesting material. It is actually a concrete-type product. But, it is made using a formula that is very different from "normal" construction concrete. It is made using cement and other materials, including slag or fly ash. Its main advantage is that it is very dimensionally stable, doesn't shrink and can be easily excavated. Thus, we are able to escape the hazard of sinking areas in the new paving. Its main disadvantage is that it is more expensive than other backfill materials and needs an extra day to set up in comparison with regular fill materials. But, it does produce a superior road surface without the need for a settling time before paving.

The devices that are damaged are mostly risers for the water service at each home. Let us explain what these devices are and what their function is. Water mains buried at a depth below the frost line in the road deliver the water to your neighborhood. A smaller line taps into the water main to provide water service for each customer. Each of these "service" lines has a valve in the road, or at the edge of road, that lets the Water Department turn your water service on or off. (This is entirely different from and in addition to the valve at each building, usually in the basement, that lets the building owner turn his water service on or off.)

Since these service valves are usually four feet or more below the ground we need a way to open or close the service valves from above ground. That's where the risers come in to play. A riser is a hollow cast iron tubular structure in two main parts, a top and bottom. The bottom is mounted vertically over the service valve. The top half slips over the bottom half and comes up to ground level. The top can be slid up and down over the bottom to adjust as the road height is changed up or down with the paving operation. If these two riser halve cannot be slid, when they are forced the cast iron will break.

If the risers were set too high the road grader might strike them breaking them. In any event, we should be starting this replacement this week, enabling us to clear the Common area for final paving thereafter.

Agatha Christie: Queen of Crime

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

She was found "intellectually wayward" because she could not seem to concentrate on rules of spelling and grammar...

Sept. 15, 1890 – Jan. 12, 1976

Agatha's mother believed that children should not be taught to read until the age of eight in order to allow both the eyes and the brain to mature. Agatha, however, lived among a family of adults, older siblings, parents, and grandparents, all avid readers and storytellers. By the age of 10, she had already devoured Robinson Crusoe and some of her mother's favorite childhood books, including a series of "thrillers" published in the United States. Chapter One of "The Deserted Hotel" begins: "Sir, I have something to tell you! My heavens! Is there a woman – an Englishwoman – in this accursed place tonight?"

As a child, her only formal schooling was a brief period during her early teens, spent at Miss Guyer's Girls' School. She was found "intellectually wayward" because she could not seem to concentrate on rules of spelling and grammar or follow an argument through logical steps to the end. At home, however, were well-used encyclopedias, atlases, and dictionaries, and regular arithmetic lessons with her father. She mastered the basic principles of physics and chemistry well enough to qualify her during World War I as a pharmacist. Along the way, perhaps, she was also honing her knowledge of poisons.

Although her family was financially comfortable, a London season of dances and parties for Agatha was not affordable. Instead, in 1910 she and her mother Clara sailed to Egypt, an inexpensive retreat where English troops were stationed and tourists stayed in winter. It was still years before Howard Carter would open Tutankhamun's tomb, insuring Egypt's appeal as an exotic destination. Clara tried to persuade Agatha to visit archaeological findings in the Cairo Museum. No interest. Nor did she wish to sail on the Nile to Karnak or Luxor.

She later described that visit as "a time of gaiety and freedom." Tall and thin, with reddish blonde hair long enough to sit on, Agatha was shy, offering little to party conversation. One captain who danced with her, afterward remarked to Clara: "Here's your daughter. She has learnt to dance, in fact she dances beautifully. You had better try and teach her to talk now." Later, in "Unfinished Portrait," Agatha made a joke of this comment.

As a teenager Agatha was filled with musical dreams and ambitions. Playing piano and singing were her passions. For a time she hoped that extensive practice might lead to a career as a professional concert pianist even though playing in public she often felt "overwhelmed by inefficiency." One family friend, connected with the New York Metropolitan Opera House, said: "Your voice is not strong enough for opera, but you will make a good concert singer." Agatha later wrote in her autobiography: "If the thing you want beyond anything cannot be, it is much better to recognize it and go forward instead of dwelling on one's regrets and hopes."

One day, in bed recovering from influenza, her mother suggested Agatha write a story to relieve her boredom. She typed a 6,000-word copy in purple ink on her sister's old typewriter and signed it "Mac Miller Esq." Published in 1926, the story, "The House of Dreams" revealed skills that would characterize all her writing: ingenious plotting, an appeal to readers' fantasies, and a sly sense of humor.

In 1971- 93 books, more than 100 short stories, and 17 plays later —Agatha Christie was appointed a dame of the British Empire. Her detective novels featuring "Hercule Poirot" and "Miss Marple" also earned her the title of Queen of Crime. The Guinness Book of World Records lists her as the best-selling writer of books of all time. Only the Bible has outsold her. According to UNESCO, she is the most translated (103 languages) individual author in the world, surpassing even Shakespeare. Her stage play, "The Mousetrap," opened in London in 1962, and, still running, reached 23,000 performances in 2009.

HEALTH NOTES

Our health and healthcare reform

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

There's been so much rhetoric and so many stupid pronouncements about health care reform in the media, that it's hard to identify some facts that we all perceive and are at the base of our health care difficulties.

The Problem is Simple: If you don't feel good and you want to do something about it, you need to see someone who has enough knowledge to fix the problem. And if tests are needed, you only need to have those tests done and the appropriate medication given.

But health is a personal problem. And most people feel they need to see the best authority that has the most perfect cure. Well, most medicine consists of a list of common problems with common and generally successful remedies, which have been out there a long time.

Having said that, it's true that every day we're faced by new threats to our health, either by environmental conditions such as excessive dust, rain, or man made things such as pollution, many of which cause contaminants to build up in our systems resulting in long-term problems.

So, we are the vehicles for carrying and delivering to medical authorities the raw material upon which they expend their labors, use their knowledge and observe the results.

It's the solution that's tough and some of the questions about it. What do we have? Describe the system. How well does it work? Why do other modern countries spend less? What are the glaring problems and inequities? What's the best thing that can be done about fixing it? Here at Health Notes we don't propose to answer these questions. However we will try to summarize the important elements of the Health Care Bill so that you may be able to decide what's being talked about.

- Purpose: To provide affordable, quality health care for all Americans and reduce the growth in health care spending. Further: Offer health insurance to all individuals; Provide a method for exchange of coverage; Require employers to provide coverage
- Core Provisions: Protect current insurance from change; Prohibit preexisting condition exclusions; Prohibit health insurance coverage fraud; Provide guaranteed coverage for all.
- Other Provisions: Limit individual annual out-of-pocket expenses to $5,000 and $10,000 for a family. Special provisions for low incomes.

But health is a personal problem. And most people feel they need to see the best authority that has the most perfect cure.

Premiums can change with age, area location and family status.

Health Choices Administration creates a new government agency to provide for risk-pooling, affordability premium credit and cost-sharing credit for low-income individuals. It requires employers to offer health benefits coverage to employees and make specified contributions toward such coverage. Small business would be exempt

Health Insurance Exchange is a clearinghouse for different health insurance options to provide health insurance coverage choices, including a public health insurance option. Small business would be exempt.

Amendments to the IRS Code propose to tax individuals without health benefits coverage and tax an employer who fails to satisfy health coverage participation requirements for an employee. Also to place a surtax on individual modified adjusted gross income exceeding $350,000.

Amendments to the Social Security Code propose to reduce payments to hospitals to account for excess readmissions; limit cost-sharing for Medicare Advantage beneficiaries; reduce the coverage gap under Medicare Voluntary Prescription Drug Benefit Program and provide increased payment for primary health care services.

The above summary lists the core elements of a very complex bill addressing points, which are sensitive to most Americans, however they point to the major problems and inequities in our expensive health care system. The bill will be debated at length by Congress, and hopefully solutions will be found. Otherwise we will continue with an unfair incomplete system that nobody can really afford.

Richard Nye remembered as great friend

John Oatley of Veolia, right, and Jack Buckley of CSCR honor the memory of Richard Nye.

Mr. Nye was fondly remembered as a great friend to the students of Cohasset, even though he toiled anonymously to many in town.

CSCR cookout caps off the season

This summer's cookout had special meaning for the group and for all who gathered on the beautiful grassy knoll and Adams flagpole that grace Mariners' Park. Senator Ted Kennedy was remembered as the flag was lowered to half-mast, but perhaps more meaningful to many assembled, Veolia employee and Cohasset wastewater treatment plant operator Mr. Richard Nye was also remembered.

During the flag ceremony, Veolia colleague John Oatley posthumously recognized Mr. Nye who passed away suddenly and unexpectedly on Aug. 24. Hidden away at the edge of the marsh on Elm Street on the bank of James Brook, Mr. Nye was fondly remembered as a great friend to the students of Cohasset, even though he toiled anonymously to many in town. In fact, it was Mr. Nye's enthusiasm and interest to support student monitoring of Cohasset Harbor as part of the NPDES permit process that led directly to Veolia Water's sponsorship of CSCR's Summer Institute program. It saddened many that Mr. Nye could not be personally thanked at the cookout gathering where students were awarded Veolia Water sponsored T-shirts. In Mr. Nye's honor, the Veolia Water banner hangs in the CSCR lab.

Further marking the significance of the Aug. 26 CSCR cookout, Rep. Garrett Bradley and Sen. Robert Hedlund bestowed honors to a select group of CSCR "graduates." Bradley and Hedlund thanked the students for their extraordinary commitment to the Summer Institute program and for their significant contributions to environmental research in Cohasset over the last four years.

Caroline Collins, Rhiana Fitts, Tara Goodwin, Ashley Howard, and Greta Schwachman took up the challenge this summer as interns with the Board of Health, monitoring bacteria counts at seven swimming beaches and sites in Cohasset. Once again, CSCR students split samples with Tara Tradd of Cohasset's Board of Health Dept., seeking to duplicate at the CSCR lab the bacteria counts returned by G and L, the professional Quincy-based lab used by the town in compliance with Mass public health laws.

CSCR's and CHS's collaborative Summer Institute Program "By the Numbers:"

- Number of student research and monitoring projects = 8
- Number of high school students who participated = 65 total; 53 Cohasset and 12 Scituate
- Number of hours (65 students x a conservative estimate of 4 hrs/wk = 260 hrs x 7 wks = 1,820 hrs of science work
- Number of hours of instruction required by the state of Mass for public schools per year = 990
- Estimated monetary value of the student work to the town of Cohasset = $91,000 (using an estimated junior engineer pay grade of $50/hr)
- Value of the program to the students? Priceless!

Thornton W. Burgess Society picks two local carvers

Two local carvers, Al Buckley of Cohasset and Bob Mosher of Hingham, will again be displaying their work at the Green Briar Nature Center, 6 Discovery Hill Road in East Sandwich on Sept. 12 and 13.

Each year the Thornton Burgess Society of Sandwich selects 15 top carvers to participate in their fall bird carvers show and sale. Over the past six years this has become the most prestigious bird and decoy carving show in New England.

Al Buckley has been carving since1978. Over the years he has won numerous ribbons including Best of Show at the New England Wildlife Exposition. This year he took a second in Miniature Pairs and a third in Miniature Shorebirds at the Ward World Championship Wildfowl Carving Competition

Bob Mosher has been carving since high school and has won numerous ribbons including several Best of Shows. Last winter he was selected to give the carving demonstration at the Mass. Audubon Visual Arts Center's prestigious display of Elmer Crowell carvings. This spring he took a first place ribbon in the Contemporary Antiques category at the Ward World Championships and this summer was selected as one of 12 Master Carvers to be a teacher in the Ward Foundation National Endowment for the Arts project "Carving Out Future Decoy Carvers".

The show is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sept 12 and 13. The Thornton Burgess Center is an ideal family venue with a jam kitchen, walking trails, interpreted nature trails and a spectacular wild flower garden on its 57-acre "Briar Patch" Conservation area

Six-week series on parenting

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is sponsoring a six-week lecture/discussion series on parenting based on Cohasset resident John Seel's book, "Parenting Without Perfection: Being a Kingdom Influence in a Toxic World" (NavPress.) The series begins on Wednesday, Sept.16 from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Children are God's gift to parents, to teach them to love like Jesus. This is the core premise behind "Parenting Without Perfection."

Pictures may be worth a thousand words, but they don't tell the whole truth. They may depict smiling faces of family members in a Christmas portrait, but they reveal only what we want to divulge and little else. Hidden behind the smiles lie the spiritual and emotional health of those portrayed.

At times we've all sent our own Kodak images of the perfect family enjoying an exotic vacation. But we know better. We can recount the history of the lives and tears behind the smiles. We see the real picture; we know the truth about our marriages and our children. We have felt the acute pain of divorce, the gut-wrenching fear of custody disputes, the heartrending loss of a prodigal child. We know the reality of raising a family – yes, a Christian family – in today's world.

But we are not alone, for behind closed doors no "perfect" families exist. John Seel's "Parenting Without Perfection" seeks to open these doors and expose the Christmas images. It addresses the rest of us: the wounded parents who have stopped sending the holiday portraits because the family picture can no longer be taken.

This series is ideal for you if you are the parent of a teen or pre-teen; if you are frustrated with quick-fix parenting advice; if you are looking for ideas that are honest, realistic, and biblically sound. It gives moms and dads a framework for parenting that is biblical and down-to-earth without requiring perfection.

Dr. Seel includes a complete look at the influences of a toxic youth culture as well as biblical principles. Through a list of ten priorities, he presents a realistic definition and context for Christian parenting. "Parenting Without Perfection" offers a unique perspective on parents' roles in their children's lives, putting the priority on influencing children's beliefs rather than controlling their behavior. Seel writes from his own heartaches and struggles as the father of a blended family.

Seel, an educator and cultural renewal entrepreneur, is president of TRI Core Entertainment, a Vancouver-based company that provides extreme computing solutions to the entertainment industry. He also serves as a Senior Fellow for both Cardus and The Clapham Institute. He has authored three books and numerous articles. He and his wife, Kathryn, have three grown children and two grandchildren. They live in Cohasset and attend St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Painting the town pink

Newspapers to be printed on pink newsprint for Breast Cancer Awareness Month

GateHouse Media New England (GHMNE) has teamed up with the American Cancer Society and We Got Soccer to "Paint the Town Pink" to help raise awareness of the importance of breast cancer prevention, detection and treatment during Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

During the week of Sept. 28, GHMNE will print 113 of its newspapers on pink newsprint and will turn all of the Web sites in its wickedlocal.com network pink. The pink newspapers will hit the streets prior to the American Cancer Society's premier event to raise awareness and dollars to fight breast cancer, the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer Walk Oct. 4 in Boston.

GateHouse Media New England's support will commence the "Paint the Town Pink" program with the pink newspapers during the week of Sept. 28 to kick off Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The pink newspapers will carry news content focusing on local stories and people in the communities affected by the disease. The news coverage will continue with local stories and profiles throughout the month of October.

"We can't think of a better way to bring attention to such an important cause," said Rick Daniels, GHMNE president. "We are so proud to be supporting this issue in such a dramatic way. The support of our presenting sponsor We Got Soccer helped make this possible."

GateHouse Media New England will donate 10 cents from every pink newspaper sold in stores to the American Cancer Society, as well as $5 from any credit card subscription during the month of October. In addition, local businesses can help "Paint the Town Pink" by purchasing a pink ribbon in their ad for $25, and GHMNE will donate that to the American Cancer Society. Advertising packages can also be purchased in print and online, and 10 percent of the ad cost will be donated to the American Cancer Society.

To participate in the Making Strides Against Breast Cancer Walk, go to cancer.org/stridesonline.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS
To Be Held On September 30, 2009

A special meeting of shareholders (the "Special Meeting") of Pilgrim Bank (the "Bank"), will be held at the Bank's branch office located at 800 Chief Justice Cushing Way, Cohasset, Massachusetts, on Wednesday, September 30, 2009. The Special Meeting will be held at 6:00 p.m., Massachusetts time. Polls will remain open for voting at the Special Meeting from 6:05 p.m., Massachusetts time until 8:00 p.m., Massachusetts time on Wednesday, September 30, 2009.

The Special Meeting is for the purpose of considering and acting upon:

1. The approval of a Plan of Reorganization from a Mutual Cooperative Bank to a Mutual Holding Company (the "Plan"), and all actions necessary or incident thereto, whereby the Bank will reorganize into a mutual holding company structure by establishing: (i) a Massachusetts-chartered stock cooperative bank (the "Stock Bank") that will succeed to all of the rights and obligations of the Bank; (ii) a mid-tier Maryland stock holding company (the "Holding Company") that will own 100% of the common stock of the Stock Bank; and (iii) a Massachusetts-chartered mutual holding company (the "MHC") that will own 100% of the common stock of the Holding Company.
2. The approval of the proposed corporators of the MHC.
3. Such other matters as may properly come before the Special Meeting or any adjournments thereof.

Any action may be taken on the foregoing proposals at the Special Meeting on the date specified above or on any date or dates to which, by original or later adjournment, the Special Meeting may be adjourned. The shareholders who will be entitled to vote at the Special Meeting will be those depositors of the Bank as of July 2, 2009 (the "Voting Record Date") who have also attained the age of 18 years.

The Board of Directors of Pilgrim Bank urges its shareholders to attend the Special Meeting.

According to McGowan, fall is one of her busiest time of year.

"Once the kids go back to school, everyone is back on a schedule and systems are essential to keep the family and home running like a well-oiled machine," McGowan said, adding most are conditioned "to get back to business" in the autumn.

"Summer is over, and we need to take back our house and get it in order after a few months of lapsed chores, dinners on the fly et cetera," said McGowan.

Describing her style as friendly, but firm, she uses a unique style of charm, humor and logic to wrestle a house from its possessions and return it safely (and usually happily) back to its owner.

Recognizing some, if not all, clients are a bit embarrassed about their clutter and having to ask for help, McGowan stresses she is not judgmental.

"Everyone is different, for some people organization is not their strength. I'm just there to help," McGowan said. The same attitude, she said, carries through to what she might be helping organize, whether its financial records or prescription medicines. "I'm very discreet."

The de-cluttering process always starts the same — "throw away, give away, put away." With little ceremony the team jumps in with two feet with McGowan working alongside the homeowner to sift through the clutter.

The initial purge gets rid of all the broken, stained or ripped items, things that can't be donated. Next, items are picked through — clothes in good condition that don't fit, or were in style in 1995, can be donated. The wedding present that just wasn't your style can find a new home.

When going through people's possessions, often there is an item or two that elicits a hesitation to throw away based on the fact they paid a lot of money for the item.

She tells them, "you may have paid a lot of money for it, but it is of no value to you."

McGowan usually encourages the client to pass the item on to someone who will value it.

The Clutter Coach has become well known at local charities. She makes regular trips to Wellspring, Cradles to Crayons and Goodwill on Route 3A. If local groups are having an estate sale or an auction, she donates appropriate items to those causes. She carts excess furniture to South Shore Friends of the Homeless and posts good, useable items on freecycle.org.

The last step, the put away, is where the organization comes in.

She's a big believer in clear plastic containers, labeling (everything!), and putting systems in place that are easy to follow.

McGowan considers her business very "full-service" meaning she not only organizes, but also she'll do minor repairs, hang artwork, add in need hardware like hooks.

"I'm an organizer who happens to know how to use tools," McGowan said.

In the back of her minivan — her traveling office — she keeps a variety

"Once we see what we have left, we see a little more clearly," said McGowan. Sometimes putting away is as simple as putting the stapler on the desk where you typically staple or it can be more involved as devising a filing system.

One of the keys is finding a place for everything — "a place for everything and everything in its place" as the old adage goes. The process can involve putting up hooks for the kids' pajamas to hanging the artwork purchased on the client's honeymoon to filling the plastic containers in an organized fashion.

The process of de-cluttering a home makes some of her client's realize how much they really have — and often that has reverberating effect, she said.

"Once they've been through their stuff they know what they have," McGowan said. Sometimes its 35 pairs of black pants and sometimes its thousands of Christmas ornaments, but nothing for Halloween.

"I always tell clients less is more and the best things in life aren't things."

In addition to simply de-cluttering, McGowan offers simple design advice and often helps clients prepare their home for sale. Her first job as the Clutter Coach was doing a pre-sell staging at a home in Cohasset.

"We worked really hard — for days — but in the end the house looked so pristine, so spotless, the house sold within a week," McGowan said.

The feeling she and her client get when they have finished a job is the most gratifying part, she said.

"There's so much more calm and control when the house is not running them, they're running the house," said McGowan.

True to her business name, she "coaches" to the very end. McGowan never departs without leaving the homeowner with a few simple organizational tips to keep their newly organized house on track.

The Clutter Coach, Molly McGownan, with her tool bag slung over her shoulder, leaves a client's house.

"Everyone is different, for some people organization is not their strength. I'm just there to help."

Scituate gets edge in season premiere

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys soccer team did quite a bit of what it wanted to do in the season opener at Scituate on Tuesday night.

In the end, the Skippers came up just short in a 2-1 loss.

First, the positives.

Soccer

In fact, without Wise's stellar play, the game could have become a Scituate rout.

"Will kept them in the game," Sailor coach Jamie Forde said. "He faced about 18 or 20 shots. We were penetrating on offense. He made the stops."

Wise made the best save of the day when he laid out to his left to stop a blast by Brian Palmer with 15:55 left in the first half.

The Sailors finally broke through inside the two-minute mark when Dave Mariano fired a perfect cross from the end line, on the ground right to Peter Martin, who had no trouble firing it in for a 1-0 lead.

"That was a beautiful play," Forde said. "I told the guys that when they get the ball on the end line they had to lay it down. Will Wise is too good in the air. He'll make that stop. Dave kept it down and Peter got it in. It was a great goal. There wasn't anything Will could have done about it."

That shot belonged to Max Pettinelli, who blasted and bent one from 22 yards out, behind a screen early in the second half.

"That was a great shot," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "Pettinelli hit a knuckle curve that veered away from Will. There was nothing he could do about it."

Trailing 2-0 with 24:36 remaining, Cohasset made it a game again when freshman Nick Tangherlini scored his first varsity goal, taking the shot after Scituate goalie Pat Falaro deflected a hard shot from Jonah Adkins, who was crashing the net along with Tangherlini.

"Those two hammered right up the middle and kept going," Willis said. "Their feet never stopped going. We needed that goal. From then on we kept putting pressure on. We just couldn't finish."

That was partly due to the game plan.

"We know they're a larger, stronger team," Willis said. "Our goal was to pleay patient, contain the outside and take shots when we got them. They (Scituate) controlled the ball in the front of the Senior netminder expected to lead squad

The biggest question for the Cohasset boys soccer team is going to be whether or not they can score goals.

The team knows it won't give up many.

With senior captain and EMass all-star Will Wise filling the net, opposing teams don't look to score much.

That leaves the question of can Cohasset find the offense to win games.

"Our success starts with Will Wise," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "He's an EMass all-star, a captain and a leader. He's a big strong athletic goalie. He's tough to score on."

"Travers is a steady kid," Willis said. "He's not overly fast, but he's always in the right spot. He's a steadying influence on the defense.

Soccer

Along with Wise, seniors Andrew Littauer and Tyler Durant are the captains.

"Andrew is a relentless player," Willis said. "Tyler is an outside guy. He plays with Jamie Timothy, a sophomore. Both of them are also relentless. They run up and down the field the whole time. They don't give anybody anything."

"There's that triangle in the middle," Willis said. "All three have different styles, but they work well together."

On the front line, juniors Drew

Countdown to kickoff

Season begins at Quincy tonight

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Skipper football fans can smile again.

The long wait is over.

Football starts tonight when Cohasset travels to Quincy's Veteran Memorial Stadium to face Quincy at 7 p.m.

Cohasset will be ready, according to coach Pete Afanasiw.

"They're ready as they'll ever be," Afanasiw said Wednesday night. "Everybody is healthy and working hard. They're tired of hitting each other. They're ready to hit someone else."

Cohasset has been practicing since Aug. 24.

When the hitting starts, the Skippers will have their work cut out for them.

"We beat them in overtime last year," Afanasiw said. "They were a .500 team in the Patriot League last year. I know their quarterback (Lance Peterson, a third-year starter) is back. He has a good arm. He moves well and has a good presence on the field. They also have a receiver (senior, Ngozi Aguguo) in the vicinity of 6-4. He runs real well and has good hands. They have a handful of people back. It looks to be a good game."

Football

Afanasiw said this season is a big one, especially for the seniors.

"For the seniors, I think I've had just about all of them in class," Afanasiw said. "When they were freshemn thet were saying that they couldn't wait until they were seniors. I told them that it's here. I think a lot of coaches are hopping on that theme. We have 14 or 15 seniors. They've been through the ringer. The wait (for the game) is tough. The nerves are out there, the adrenaline is there. We just have to go out and execute."

Cohasset had a light workout yesterday, working with game-planning and a walk through.

After a good season last year, expectations are high this season.

The key for a win in the opener is shutting down Peterson and Aguguo.

Afanasiw said if everyone on his side does their jobs, that part will come.

"We're trying to put the spotlight on the entire defense," he said. "If we're going to be successful, we need the best possible defense. All week we've prepped on formation, read off set alignments and executed in an appropriate manner. We know that we're not going to stop everyone

"They're very opposite players," Willis said of his forwards. "Drew is a tall kid with a great touch. Anders just never stops going. He's relentless up front. He drives people crazy."

On the bench, Willis has a few weapons.

"Conor Queenan and John McGoldrick are the first two off the bench," Willis said. "John is hurt right now. We're hoping to get him back soon."

Nick Tangherlini and Nick Brown are also quick off the bench.

Both are freshmen, but have shown enough hat Willis coul-n't leave them on the farm.

"They came in and lit up camp," he said. "I couldn't leave them down. Nick Brown is the smallest guy on the team, but he's very polished. He has a head for the game."

Tangherlini's presence paid off quickly. He scored Cohasset's goal in the opener, a 2-1 loss at Scituate.

As for scoring, Willis said he's hoping for added production from a few spots.

"We're looking for Anders to step up and score," he said. "And we've got Drew, Jonah and Tyler Durant looking to score. I'm optimistic about what we have. We're young, but I think we'll do well."

Cohasset was 3-10-6 last season.

A repeat performance with an extra sprinkle of offense could be the difference between three wins and a tournament appearance when you consider the six ties.

"Last year we defended very well but we were last in goals scored in the league," Willis said. "We need to find our offense."

net. Still, we had some goal-scoring opportunities. We did what we wanted to do. The big difference was we had a defensive lapse at the end of the first half. That cost us a goal."

After scoring to cut the lead to 2-1, the play turned in Cohasset's favor and it was Scituate's turn to hang on.

"With a 2-0 lead, the kids didn't let the pressure get to them," Forde said. "Our guys held strong."

With the next game on Friday, Forde said it was just going to be a case of getting his players to focus for a full 80 minutes.

"It's all about mental toughness, composure and discipline," he said. "In the first half tonight it almost felt like the field was tipped. The ball was moving that way. In the second half it felt like everyone was trying to make that miraculous play. I think it was good to have that experience,and a little frustration. Either way it was a win. It was the first day of school. We got a win. We'll take it."

It was a great up and down, momentum filled game. The kids never got down. I'm happy. We were competitive. The kids never gave up."

Cohasset coach Jim Willis

Overall, Willis was pleased with the effort.

"It was a great up and down, momentum filled game," he said. "The kids never got down. I'm happy. We were competitive. The kids never gave up."

Cohasset hosted Harwich yesterday and will be at Norwell on Monday.

on every play. The key is you have 11 one-on-one battles. Whoever maximizes those battles wins. That's the kind of mentality we have to have. We know we can't win every one of those battles, but we want to try to shut down as many options as we can."

Quincy tries to run a balanced offense under center and tries to mix the run and the pass and is expected to run a 3-4 defense.

Cavanaro was solid last season, but Afanasiw hopes he can improve on his touchdown-to-interception ratio.

He'll have senior captain Brendan Doonan to throw to and a fast, experienced back in Dana Valentine. Thomas Flibotte will get a few carries and do some blocking for Valentine.

If there are any questions about tonight, it will be on the line, where there will be a few less tested players.

"They're bigger sizewise," Afanasiw said about Quincy. "I think we have a little more athleticism. We may be a little quicker."

The biggest thing Afanasiw will look at is his own guys.

"The big thing coaches and players ask is are we playing to our capabilities," he said. "We want everyone to progress and get better. We want to be improving all the time, every practice, every quarter, every game."

"We want everyone to progress and get better. We want to be improving all the time, every practice, every quarter, every game."

Coach Pete Afanasiw

With rain in the forecast, Afanasiw doesn't mind playing on the road, at least at Quincy's Veteran's Memorial Stadium.

"It's a beautiful stadium," he said. "They recently put in new turf. If it rains the turf will benefit most of us. It's safer than playing in the mud. As a stadium, it's as close to a true stadium as you'll see, with a horseshoe. It's a phenomenal spot to play a game."

Life returns to CHS

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

The time was 7:30 a.m. Eastern Standard Time on Sept. 2nd, 2009. The 2009-2010 school year had officially begun.

When parents start getting overly hyperactive and giddy while their kids become bummed out and less happy it is a very rare occurrence. So strange it usually only happens once a year. And 99.47 percent of the time it happens at the very end of summer and the very beginning of school. With this event happening all over Cohasset, it became clear that school was near.

The time was 7:30 a.m. Eastern Standard Time on Sept. 2nd, 2009. The 2009-2010 school year had officially begun. While some found this a depressing time, many, myself included, found it to be a happy time where people were able to reconnect with those they did not see over the wonderful summer.

Tenth, 11th, and 12th graders all packed into the CHS auditorium to hear the infamous "welcome back to school" speech courtesy of Mr. Antolini and Dr. Gill. At this time the freshmen did…umm…I'm actually not sure what they did…and I don't care…because they're freshmen…JOKES. They actually went straight to their homeroom on the first day of school and were introduced to Cohasset High School by members of the National Honor Society on Tuesday (see I care…sorta).

Coinciding with the start of the school year is of course the start of sports. While the teams have been practicing hard since late August to ensure a good season for CHS athletics, the spectator fun began on Tuesday with the first games of the year. Note: most of the games in the early year will be away because the turf field is not quite finished yet. This of course means that the first Cohasset football game this year is actually not home, but in Quincy instead, contrary to what the super cool and awesome, money-saving Cohasset Football gold card which you should totally buy says (this endorsement was made in exchange for free gold card…which you should totally buy).

The student council will hold their first meeting on Sept. 11th to discuss all the awesomeness that they will be sure to bring about over the course of the year. Also on Sept. 11th, all the class presidents will be excused from class to represent all the grades of Cohasset High School at the 9/11 memorial.

Well I guess that wraps it up. Now that life is back in CHS, I am back writing for the Mariner, which I gladly do. I wish all my fellow students good luck in the 2009-2010 academic year and hope they all prosper academically and socially…except the freshmen (jokes). Finally, I encourage all Cohasset residents, parents included, to go out and be Cohasset High School superfans. Cheer loud and be proud.

Glad to be back.

Sean MacCarthy did not wake up before 7:30 all summer and says adjusting is hard.

Engineering: If you like building with Legos then you will love this class. Students use LEGO materials to build simple and complex machines as they learn about structures, forces, gear math, simple machines and motorized projects. Using teamwork and a series of challenges, groups will work together to create motorized systems and advanced challenges. Come Join Us and Build Something Cool That Moves!

Digital Movie Making: Are you the next Steven Spielberg? We will create our very own Indiana Jones movie using special digital movie making cameras and software. As directors and producers we will work in teams to create our own story and script, build various Indiana Jones Lego scenes and film our own movie. We will use graphic editing techniques and stop motion animation, add background noise and music, and show our movie at a private screening on the last day of class to share with family and friends. All students will get a copy of their movie on a CD-ROM upon completion of class.

Smallest church members taking part

Godly Play program at St. Stephen's

Cathy Forest leads the prayers during "Feast."

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, perched high on the ledge of Cohasset village, has a strong commitment to its smallest members: the children. Prioritizing the religious education and faith journey of the children resulted in a decision 13 years ago to institute the Godly Play program.

Godly Play was developed by Episcopal priest, author, and teacher Jerome Berryman. Based on the Montessori Method of experiential learning, Godly Play uses a careful telling of scripture stories and engaging sensory materials to encourage children to seek and find their own answers to their faith questions. This unique approach to religious education invites children to wonder about themselves, God and the world in a way that is playful and also meaningful to them.

Godly Play is structured around a deepening spiral curriculum using the language of God and God's people: sacred stories, parables, liturgical lessons and silence. Reverend Margot Critchfield explains, "The Godly Play program provides children with the tools for discovery and creativity to prepare them for life as Christian adolescents and adults. Through the powerful language and wondering about the stories, the circle of children hears the deepest invitation of all: Come play with God."

The program at St. Stephen's includes three classes: ages 3-5, 6-8, 9-10 and middle school which meet every Sunday of the academic year from 9:45 to 10:45 a.m., after which the children join the church service to participate with their families in communion. Adult volunteers include eight accredited Godly Play storytellers with a combined 50 years of experience, including Nancy St. John who is a Godly Play trainer. Nancy explains that the philosophy of the program is that "children already have a spiritual life. At St. Stephen's, our goal is to honor the spirituality of each child, to give them a safe place to explore their spirituality and a language to express it."

The Godly Play program at St. Stephen's will begin on Sunday Sept. 13th with an intergenerational service at 10 a.m. including a backpack blessing for the children. Godly Play classes begin on Sept. 20. In addition to the program, St. Stephen's offers a variety of other faith services for children including a nursery during the 10 a.m. church service, a youth choir, monthly Children's Chapel, the annual Epiphany Pageant in early January and intergenerational activities such as the Parish Picnic on Sept. 20 and the Blessing of the Animals on Oct. 4.

For more information, visit the St. Stephen's table at Cohasset Day on Sept. 12 located on Elm Street. Bring the family that day to listen to a Sacred Story told at 2 p.m. and again at 3 p.m. on the grass by the War Memorial next to the church. Reverend Margot Critchfield invites families to experience a complete Godly Play class by coming to St. Stephen's on Sunday mornings where families are welcome to participate in all of the church's faith services.

Wallace St. John shares the story of Abraham and Sarah's journey using the desert box.

Jason Conforti works with the parable "The Great Pearl" during the response portion of the class.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
HOROSCOPE FOR WEEK OF
SEPT. 21, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An offer to help with a stalled project should reassure you that you have a workable plan in spite of the problems in getting it up and running. The week's end brings more positive news.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A past problem about a workplace situation re-emerges early in the week. Talking things out helps ease tensions by midweek, but some hurt feelings could linger a few more days.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Optimistic aspects dominate your efforts. However, expect to confront some criticism, some of which might be valid, so keep an open mind. But overall, it's your views that will count.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Social interaction with new people, especially on the job, could be a bit strained in the early part of the week. But the awkwardness passes as you get to know each other better.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Expect news about a follow-up to a workplace change that could make a difference in your career path. Meanwhile, new friends widen the circle for all you Social Lions who love to party.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Enjoy your well-earned plaudits for a job well done. But be aware that some people might not share your colleagues' admiration, and you might have to work harder to win them over.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good week to recheck your probably already overlong "to do" list and decide what to keep and what to discard. Lose the clutter and focus your energy on what's really important.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to take a new perspective on what you've been offered. Expanding your view could help to uncover any plusses or minuses that weren't apparent at first.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Applying the usual methods to this week's unique challenges might not work too well. Instead, use your creativity to find a way to resolve any impasse that develops.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) So what if fate throws some obstacles in your path this week? Just keep in mind that the sure-footed and resolute Goat can get past any barrier by focusing on the goals up ahead.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This week calls for better communication with people in both your private life and the workplace. Start by asking questions, and then pay close attention to the answers.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Potentially beneficial workplace changes could be closer than you realize. Make sure you know what's going on so that you're not left high and dry when the good things happen.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You're not timid about pushing to have your aims realized once you've set your mind to accomplishing your goals.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

FitzGerald to serve two Unitarian Universalist Congregations

This remarkable partnership evolved through conversations that began this past spring between Mr. FitzGerald, Revs. Stower and Carlsson-Bull, and the co-chairs of the religious education committees of the respective congregations.

Jim FitzGerald is continuing at First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset as Director of Religious Education, but with a new twist. He will also join the staff of First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Scituate as Director of Religious Education. Mr. FitzGerald and the two congregations have forged an innovative partnership that began officially Aug. 1. He will divide his time equally between Scituate and Cohasset for this part-time position.

This remarkable partnership evolved through conversations that began this past spring between Mr. FitzGerald, Revs. Stower and Carlsson-Bull, and the co-chairs of the religious education committees of the respective congregations. How Mr. FitzGerald will spend the balance of his workweek renders the arrangement even more innovative. This August, he was named executive director of Call To Action, a national 25,000-member Catholic non-profit that works for peace and social justice, both within the Catholic Church and society at large. While Call To Action is based in Chicago, he and his partner, Jaimy, will continue to reside in Boston and are anticipating the birth in October of their first child.

Mr. FitzGerald brings to his current professional commitments 10 years as a community educator for Planned Parenthood. It was Planned Parenthood's connection with area Unitarian Universalist congregations that ignited his interest in Unitarian Universalist congregations. Academically, Mr. Fitzgerald holds a Master's degree in Educational Psychology from The College of Saint Rose in Albany, N.Y. and a Master's degree in Theology and Ethics from Hartford Seminary in Connecticut. During his graduate school years, he linked his theological studies with his work as a sexuality educator and partnered with Unitarian Universalist congregations on topics related to sexuality and spirituality. While grounded in the Catholic tradition, Mr. FitzGerald believes that people must be encouraged in their personal spiritual path and that the table of religious discourse is large enough for all.

The Unitarian Universalist congregations in Scituate and Cohasset will share common pre-K through high school curricula, while offering them at the sites of the respective churches. One curriculum, geared to adolescents, will be offered jointly—the highly praised OWL (Our Whole Lives) program, which enlists OWL-certified lay leaders to teach healthy relationships and healthy sexuality.

"I'm very excited to be part of this collaborative arrangement," remarked Mr. FitzGerald. "Both congregations will effectively share resources, families and youth will connect across congregational boundaries, and a wider Unitarian Universalist faith community will be born. What a wonderful model of church!" Religious education classes begin in Scituate, Sept. 27 and in Cohasset on Sept. 20 with registration beginning Sept. 13 at both churches. To learn more contact Mr. FitzGerald directly at 781-545-3324 in Scituate or 781-383-1100 in Cohasset.

A radio revolutionary

Braintree native earns spot in Hall of Fame

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Don Latulippe earns a place in the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame.

Don Latulippe was just 7 years old when he earned his first recognition on local radio by entering a singing contest on the Laco Shampoo Hour.

"My first appearance on a commercial radio station came on April 10, 1937, on WHDH when I sang 'Pennies from Heaven' and won first prize – a whole box of different Laco shampoo products which didn't interest me, but which my mother enjoyed very much," recalled Latulippe by telephone from his home in Randolph last week.

"It was about 10 years after that when I really got my start in radio. I grew up in East Braintree and when I was a teenager I read in the paper that WJDA was going to broadcast Midnight Mass on Christmas Eve from St. John's Church in Quincy. This sounded like an ambitious project so I decided to see if I could be of help in some way. They ended up having difficulty with the wiring. I pitched in and they let me try and fix the radio wire. Ultimately, it couldn't be fixed but I brought in 78s of 'The Messiah,' which they played in place of the Mass. WJDA founder and owner James D. Asher was so pleased with the help that he hired me at age 17 for an after-school job as a board operator and music librarian."

Fast forward to today and Latulippe's long and still active career in local radio and television has earned him a place in the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame. At a Sept. 16 luncheon at the Dedham Hilton, hosted by WBZ 1030's Jordan Rich, Latulippe will be one of 20 of Massachusetts' best-known and most respected radio and television broadcasters inducted into the Hall of Fame, housed at Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

"I must say I was very much surprised when I learned of my induction. I truly don't feel that I am equal to the others being inducted alongside me. I'm astonished, but also very pleased to be in such terrific company."

This year's event honorees, along with Latulippe, include TV pioneer, host, interviewer and innovator Bill Hahn; the nation's first nightly news cultural reporter and women's movement trailblazer Sonya Hamlin; one of the most respected and distinguished television news journalists in New England, John Henning; legendary rock radio DJ and activist Charles Laquidara; 48-year WBZ personality Dave Maynard; radio manager and multi-station CEO Allan Roberts; host, newswoman and executive editor of WGBH TV's Greater Boston, Emily Rooney; esteemed radio voice of the New England Patriots and morning sports anchor on WBZ radio Gil Santos; renowned broadcast consultant and radio station owner Al Tanger; and revered classical, jazz and elevator music host Len Zola.

Posthumous honorees include legendary sportscasters Don Gillis and Curt Gowdy; TV personality Connie Jameson; WBZ-TV's first news anchor, respected newsman Arch MacDonald; the hilarious Major Mudd Show host Ed McDonnell; radio personality and Boston Herald-Traveler columnist Marjorie Mills; one of the great personalities of Boston radio for more than 50 years, Norm Nathan; and former General Manager and Executive Vice President of radio station WHDH-AM William McGrath. In addition, a Special Recognition Award will be given to Al Sprague in honor of his long service as President of the Massachusetts Broadcasters Association.

Latulippe, a 1949 graduate of Braintree High School, has earned his latest honor in a career that began in Quincy with WJDA and soon took him to Boston radio as the morning man on WEZE, then operating out of a first-floor window of Boston's Statler Office Building with a format called "The Wonderful World of Music." In 1978, Latulippe moved to WROR-FM as Public Affairs Director and later News Director. During this period, he also served as booth announcer for WGBH-TV and WNAC-TV. He "retired" from WRKO in 1995, but also immediately went to work for WPLM in Plymouth and is now part-time with WEZE at its current home at Marina Bay in Quincy.

Latulippe may have spent most of his career in radio, but some of the people who inspired him most made their names in television.

"I'm delighted that I'm being inducted along with Bill Hahn who is a great guy. Bill was my boss at WROR and he introduced to me to Louise Morgan. Louise was the first woman on Boston television and was known as 'Boston's First Lady of TV.' I idolized Louise Morgan. She was a total professional. We became friends late in her life after she moved to Florida. I used to visit her several times a year in Sarasota and, when she passed away in 1995, she left me the archives of her long career in Boston television."

In addition to preserving Morgan's archives, Latulippe is also working to ensure that more recent Boston television personalities will also never be forgotten through "Preview," a local cable arts television series produced in Walpole by another veteran of Boston television, Guy Giampapa, and seen in 38 Cape Cod and South Shore communities. With Giampapa and Latulippe as co-hosts, the show welcomes many local "celebrities" from the Boston media, past and present.

"We've interviewed people like Jess Cain, Bruce Schwoegler, Joyce Kulhawik and so many more. I'm making sure that these programs are preserved on DVD and then sent to Arthur Singer, President of the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame, for the archives. The work they have done in this market has value and should always be remembered."

The Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame induction ceremony and luncheon will take place at the Dedham Hilton Hotel, 25 Allied Drive, Dedham, on Sept. 16, beginning at noon. Tickets may be purchased by calling 617-969-5678 or 617-763-0109. Tickets may also be purchased on line at the MBHOF new website: www.massbroadcastershof.org.

Where metal meets rock, reggae and alternative

Web Jams 2 winners TooBoKou mix it up and make it original

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

TooBoKou

It's the number one question they are asked by just about everyone they meet: "What does TooBoKou mean?"

All that singer/songwriter Glenn Houghton will say for the record is that it's a reference to the 1987 Stanley Kubrick film "Full Metal Jacket." It's strange allusion considering it relates to a movie released when these guys were about 4 years old.

"It's not really something you can print, we'll just leave it at that," Houghton says with a laugh.

Houghton and his fellow band mates have a lot to smile about lately. Wicked Local Web Jams 2 winners TooBoKou, or "TBK" as they've come to be known, has a loyal and growing following catching their shows all over Southeastern Massachusetts, Boston and Rhode Island.

After releasing a three-track demo last year, the band has written enough original music to record a full-length album and play an hour and a half set with no covers.

That's not to say TBK doesn't do any covers during their shows at local venues like the Guru Room in Plymouth; but the group has been so prolific in making its own music since forming in 2007 it thrives on being truly original.

"We throw in a cover, now and then, but our shows are 90 percent originals," says drummer Jeff Ezrin.

Houghton writes the lyrics for the songs and the band collaborates on the composition, notes Ezrin. The chemistry within the band is tight, Ezrin says, because they've all known each other for so long.

Four-fifths of the band comes from Plymouth. Ezrin, bass player Dave Ryan, guitarist and back up vocalist Roy Maher and guitarist Greg Finn all graduated from Plymouth South High School in 2001. Houghton, the odd man out, hails from Wareham.

Houghton and Ryan, who played together previously in the band FatCan, put TBK together a couple of years ago.

"I bumped into Dave at the grocery store on Mother's Day," Ezrin recalls "and he said they needed a drummer."

As far back as he can remember, Ezrin says he was always tapping along with the beat in songs. In his basement he discovered an old drum that once belonged to his uncle and beat on that until he could convince his parents to get him his first drum set at 13.

For Houghton, song writing began even earlier.

"I had this friend when I was nine who had turntables. And we would do rap songs about neighborhood kids," Houghton recalls.

After taking up the guitar at 12, Houghton said he took lessons for a while, but uninspired by his teacher, turned to a friend who played guitar and asked him to show him some chords. Houghton took it from there, teaching himself the rest of the way.

When it comes to pinpointing TBK's sound, it's tough. On their Web site (www.tbkmusic.com) they describe their sound as a mix of rock, metal, alternative and reggae. Nailing Houghton down about who inspires his music is even tougher (on the web site, Houghton lists his father as his inspiration).

"I'm influenced by any music I can feel," he says. "Rock, reggae, hip hop, and more."

If you ask him to name names he starts with "Bob Marley and Guns N' Roses," and then cuts himself off. "There are just too many."

As great as the creative process is in song writing, nothing compares to performing the song in front of a crowd, Houghton says. "There's a lot of satisfaction in playing them live."

"To look out on the crowd and see the whole room bouncing to the beat and singing along to the words…I don't even know the words to some of them, you know I'm just the drummer," Ezrin jokes.

Getting ready for those performances – TBK does shows every other week or so – is hard work, Ezrin says. The band rehearses twice a week at Bandstand Live in Taunton and is looking to get back into a studio to record soon.

But all of that adds up, money wise. That's one of the big challenges any band faces when trying to make a name for itself. TBK members still need their "day jobs" but ultimately want the band to be their full-time gig.

"We need to get into the studio and get new merchandise," Houghton says, adding "we want to get a van so we can start touring out of state and into New York and Pennsylvania."

For now, the band works hard to promote itself, particularly on the Web.

"It's like any unknown product coming into the market," Houghton comments. "You have to find a way to make it interesting to everyone."

Social networking tools like MySpace and Facebook are working well. YouTube would work better if there were more live videos of TBK, Houghton notes. And since you can download their songs for free from their site, iTunes isn't something the band's getting into…yet.

To hear TooBoKou's music - including the band's Web Jams 2 winning song "Pill" - and find out where you can check them out live visit www.tbkmusic.com. As Wicked Local Web Jams 2 winners, TBK will play a show at the Liberty Tavern in Rockland. Check out www.wickedlocalwebjams.com for time and date.

If your band is ready to rock online, we have a couple spots left for our Wicked Local Web Jams 3 bracket, which will launch in late September. E-mail your band bio, photos and an MP3 file of the song you'd like to enter to Alice Coyle at acoyle@cnc.com. For more information visit www.wickedlocalwebjams.com or call 508-967-3505.

Sleek line of cars takes center stage

Fashion also in focus at Cohasset Day

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Ladies and gentlemen, start your engines and get ready for some fun! The second annual Cohasset Day (www.cohassetday.com) is tomorrow (Saturday Sept. 12th). All senses will be catered to at this event which includes music for the ears, food to please the palate; and gorgeous fashions and classic cars for the eyes to revel in.

The theme of the second annual Car Concours is "Antique, Classic and Exotic Touring, Racing and Sports Automobiles." More than 20 cars, in "show" condition will be part of the Classic Car Parade which will begin at 2:30 p.m. beginning at Brook Street and South Main (in front of Dependable Cleaners) and go up North Main Street and loop back around the Common and South Main, ending at the Citgo station where they will remain for public viewing.

"This is all about excellence in motorcar design, beautiful craftsmanship and a high quality event — all to match the quality of the people and the beauty of our Town," says Pete Brown, Cohasset Day Chairman and Coordinator of the Car Concours.

Prior to the kick off of Cohasset Day, the show car owners will be meeting for judged events including: Championship Class (a rigorous 100 point judging system for best of show, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th places); a special Cohasset Class Award (a less rigorous 20 point judging system for 1st, 2nd 3rd & 4th place); and the Peoples Choice awards. For the People's Choice Awards categories, the public is asked to cast their ballots, on Cohasset Day, for Best of Show, Hottest Car and Kid's Favorite.

This year's returning Cohasset cars include: Dick Avery with his 1962 356 C Porsche which took Best of Show last year. Rob Willms' 1990 C-4 racing Porsche which placed third last year; Woody Chittick's silver 1971 280SL Mercedes convertible; Al Moore's white 1967 Austin Healy MK III convertible (the last year they were made for the US market); Jim Hazen's 1954 Aston Martin DB 2/4; Marty Hale with two Jaguars: a British racing green 1962 XKE Race Coupe and a 1967 E type coupe; Mark Toomey's silver 1969 Mercedes SL roadster convertible; Tom Hamilton's black 1986 944-Turbo Porsche; Dick Karoff with a Dodge Dart convertible;

In addition to Cohasset car owners, there will be a red 1992, 348 TS Ferrari and a Rolls Royce Corniche Convertible and several other gorgeous cars from Hingham, Scituate and Medfield and Boston. All cars will tour together on a four mile route through Cohasset from 2-2:30 pm along Atlantic Avenue, Border Street and Gannett Road in North Scituate before arriving on South Main Street in the Village.

Fashions

Classic is the buzzword for the car parade, and most likely, some classic favorites will be found among the new and gorgeous fall fashions featured at the Fashion Show. The show, which promises to be a highlight of the day, will be held from 2- 2:30 p.m. on the stage which will be set up in front of the former Cohasset Hardware store at the Corner of Elm and South Main streets.

The show will give Cohasset Day goers a taste of all three local clothing boutiques which include Ports & Co., and newcomers to Cohasset Day, Pink Tulip, owned by Scituate resident, Christine Habegger and Wendy's Closet, owned by Cohasset's Wendy Mazer. Each of these stores carries unique and beautiful clothes. The show will be 30 minutes of fashion for ages 20 to 70 +…everything from tees to items appropriate for the most formal occasion.

"This is all about excellence in motorcar design, beautiful craftsmanship and a high quality event — all to match the quality of the people and the beauty of our Town."

— Pete Brown, Cohasset Day

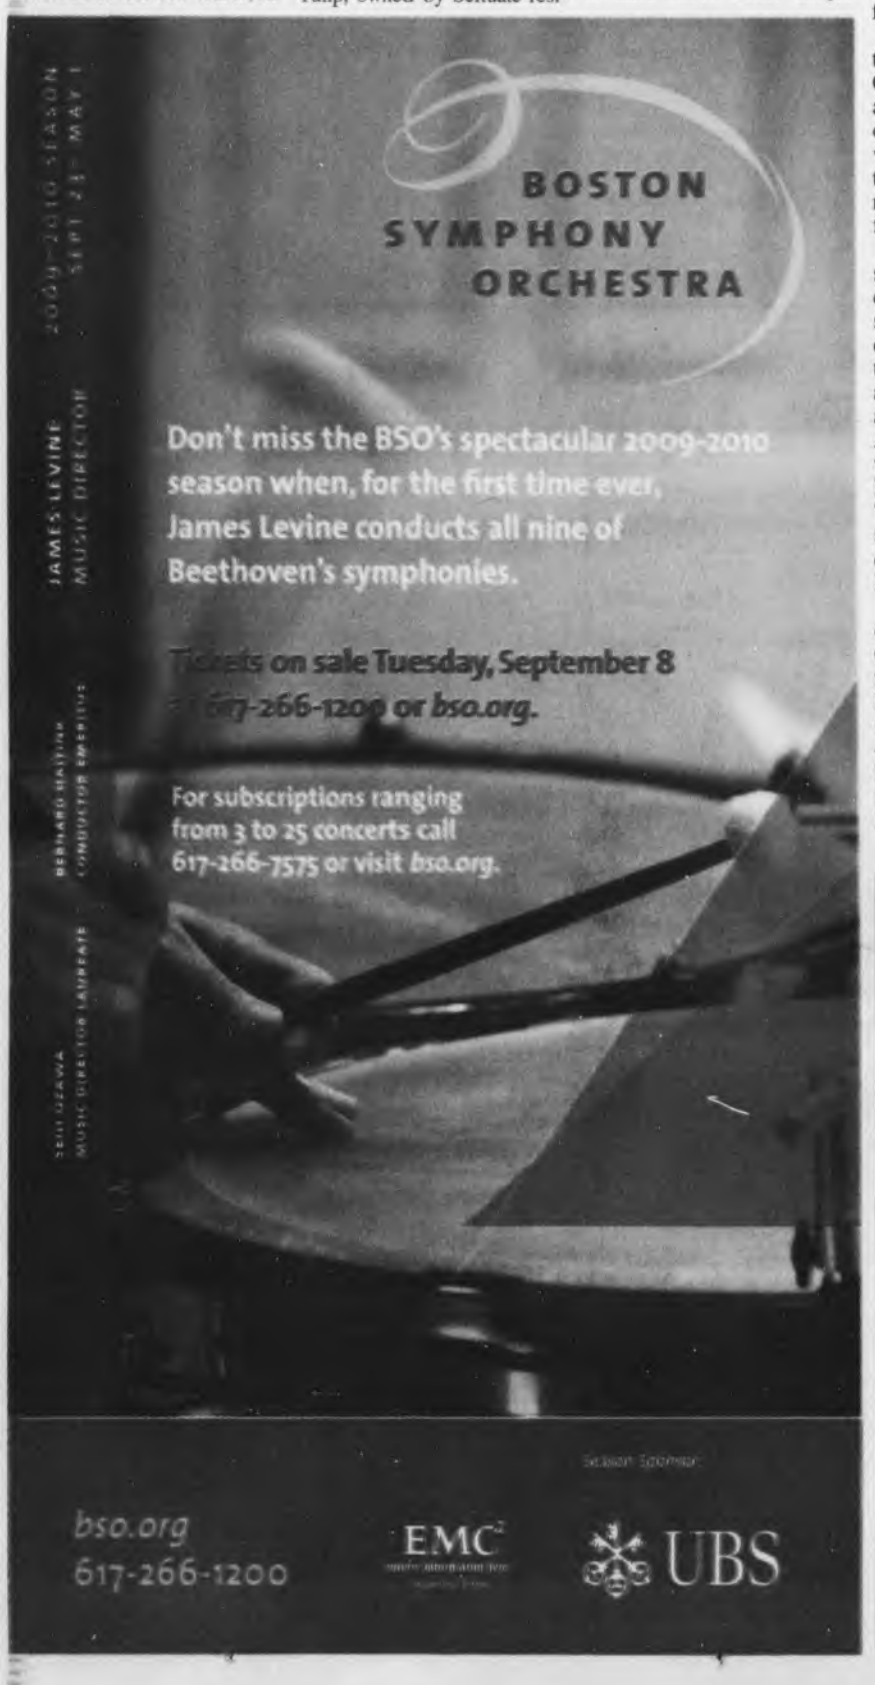
"People aren't shopping just to shop," anymore says Ports & Co. owner, Lisa Lynch who is also Cohasset Day Coordinator of the Fashion Show. "They are very careful what they buy and they're buying for a specific reason; a wedding, a reunion; a fundraiser."

Lynch calls this "purposeful" shopping in which people buy clothes to fit a need rather than simply for fun. She especially enjoys showing customers how to be "fashion forward" yet still age-appropriate and comfortable in what they're wearing. All three stores will show what's going on in fashion as local friends and neighbors play "model for a day" and strut their stuff showing off the latest in dresses, tunics and other fabulous fall clothing.

"During the summer everyone is doing their own thing. Cohasset Day is a nice way to reconnect and see faces I haven't seen in a while. I consider September as my new year — it's a beginning, and what better way to begin than with a town-wide celebration," says Lynch.

Cohasset Day 2009 Village Scene

The stage is set for a fantastic day in this small seaside town….and no local stage would be complete without the presence and voice of Cohasset's own Rich Ofsthun. Rich, whom most will recognize from the PSO telethon which he has co hosted with Lucia Flibotte for the past five years, also hosts "Free Lunch", an occasional series on lunch spots around town which can be found on wickedlocal.com. He also serves as Commodore of the Cohasset Sailing Club. He and his wife Kathy have three sons and the family has lived in Cohasset for 16 years.



"This is a town that has it all. You get back more than you put in. It should be celebrated!" says Ofsthun.

Cohasset Day is from 12:30 – 6 p.m. and there will be something for everyone from age 1 to 100. The downtown will be closed to vehicular traffic and all will be encouraged to stroll through the stores and browse and shop the sidewalk tables that will be lining the streets. In addition, everyone is encouraged to head over to the South Shore Art Center, the Historic Society and our beautiful Common for tug of war, dunk tank, rowboats on the duck pond and Touch a Truck in the Town Hall parking lot. There will be a parade procession down Main Street featuring the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Decorated Bike Parade, Decorated Dog Parade, music from the Rusty Skippers and local sports teams and groups. There will also be a special Saturday edition of the Farmer's Market.

The only event within an event that has a fee is the Fine Food Galore event featuring more than 22 local eateries. Today is the last day to buy Fine Food Galore tickets at the advance price of $20 for families and $10 for individuals. Tickets are available at Darilynn's and French Memories in the Village or Stop & Shop (Cohasset). Tickets will be available tomorrow with an event day price of $25 for families and $15 for individuals.

Cohasset Day is a joint initiative of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the Cohasset Economic Development Committee. Donations will be made to the Council on Elder Affairs, the Cohasset Food Pantry and the American Legion.

For the full schedule of the day's activities visit www.cohassetday.com. Gather your family and friends….See you there!

Parents speak out on President's speech

Upset schools did not air address

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"...this was a judgment call made with all the information available at the time."
— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

Nationally, the controversy over President Barack Obama's back-to-school speech died down after it aired last Tuesday (Sept. 8), but in Cohasset it heated up at Wednesday's School Committee meeting.

At least five residents came out to speak strongly and passionately about the Cohasset Public Schools' decision to not show the President's speech to students.

The School Committee devoted over an hour of its meeting to the issue from how the decision was made to allowing members of the public to air their feelings to what might be done in the future for this or similar issues.

Several members of the public said the schools' decision not to show the speech perpetuated and legitimized the controversy surrounding the speech and catered to a small segment of the population. Others said this was a missed opportunity to have the students participate in a shared experience of history. Some requested an apology from the school and to have the video shown school-wide.

Before members of the public spoke, School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy asked the Superintendent to explain how the decision was made.

Superintendent Denise Walsh said she made the final decision to not air the speech in the school system. Unlike many other issues, she said, she received little communication or direction about the showing of the speech and did not find out about it until the Thursday before Labor Day. With no school scheduled for Friday or Monday, Walsh said she was not given the opportunity to talk with teachers and alert them.

"Knowing some parents would think (the speech) was perfectly appropriate, I can't assume all parents would feel that way...(when it comes to) political discussions many parents want to have that discussion at home," Walsh said.

Walsh read the transcript of the speech when it was released on Monday (Labor Day), she felt the message was "positive" and one the children would benefit from. Yet, she was concerned teachers had no lesson plan, no time to anticipate children's questions and no time to give

Ready to play

First games on turf field next week

By Nancy White

"The town now has a new recreational asset that can be used by everyone."
— George McGoldrick, Cohasset Sports Partnership

Cohasset High sports are about to enter the fast lane. Next week, the long awaited synthetic turf field will officially be ready for the prime time. The turf field is set and the contractor is putting the final touches on the new track.

Around the playing fields and in the halls of Cohasset Middle-High School the unveiling of the multi-sport Alumni Field is definite cause for excitement.

Anticipation of faster play, better quality of sport, more cushioning under foot and the assurance a game will be played no matter the weather prediction are just a few of the advantages the student athletes and coaches name for the turf field.

"Right now it's a big construction project, but to go on it and play is going to be a lot of fun. There's no doubt it is going to live up to expectations," said Tori Lehr, one of the senior captains of the girls' soccer team.

If all goes well, meaning a few more rain-less days so the work can be completed, the first official game on the turf field is set to be the girls' soccer team this coming Thursday, Sept. 24 against Hull. A dedication ceremony is planned under the lights as part of next Friday's football game with kick-off at 7p.m. The dedication will be held before the game begins.

The $950,000 turf field was made possible through a public-private partnership. At Special Town Meeting 2008, voters approved spending up to $500,000 on a synthetic turf field at the high school with the condition the other half of the cost come through community donations. In just over a year, the Cohasset Sports Partnership, a relatively new organization formed as an umbrella organization of booster clubs, was able to raise over $475,000 for the field.

George McGoldrick, president of the Sports Partnership, said the effort brought all different segments of the population together.

"It's been wonderful that in spite of an economic recession we were able to gather the kind of support we did for this public-private partnership. The town now has a new recreational asset that can be used by everyone," McGoldrick said.

Athletic Director Ron Ford said Cohasset High is the first in the South Shore League to have a synthetic turf field.

"There's a definite advantage (in the turf field) for scheduling, quality of play," Ford said. Most of the veteran athletes have had the opportunity to play on other schools' turf fields. Local high schools in Scituate, Quincy, Whitman-Hanson, Archbishop

All eyes on Minot Light

Cohasset and Scituate to send letters of interest

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The towns of Cohasset and Scituate plan to take one step — the first step — toward possibly becoming the next caretakers of Minot Light.

Interested parties from the two towns met for a summit meeting last Thursday night (Sept. 10) to discuss the future of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse and their role in that future.

Although the Cohasset and Scituate boards of selectmen will need to approve the action, the consensus was that the two towns would submit separate letters of interest to the federal government. In their letters, the towns would reference the other and detail they are in talks with the goal of working together on the project.

In early August, the United States General Services Administration announced the availability of Minot Light to a not-for-profit, government or local agency free of charge. It's an effort that's part of the National Historic Lighthouse Act of 2000, which began the process of taking historic lighthouses off the national ledger. If a non-profit agency is not found to take control of the light, the lighthouse will be sold at public auction.

The deadline to express interest in becoming the next owner of Minot Ledge Lighthouse is fast approaching. At the end of September, letters of interest are due at the federal General Services Administration office. Organizations that submit a letter of interest will receive a full application and a tour of Minot Light. The letter of interest is not binding.

Minot Light has special significance to both Cohasset and Scituate — the light was built in Cohasset and its lightkeepers lived in Cohasset, but the structure itself is located in Scituate waters. Minot Light is visible from both towns' coasts.

Town officials from both Scituate and Cohasset (Town Managers and Selectmen), the chairman of the Scituate Historical Commission, the director of the Scituate Historical Society and the president of the Cohasset Historical Society were all present. Cohasset resident Charlie Higginson was also in

"An orthopedic problem kept me inactive over the last 2 1/2 years. As a result, my metabolism was lowered and my weight saw a 15 pound gain, despite watching what I ate. When I could finally do my usual walking, using the home treadmill 3-4 times a week, it made no difference on the scale or around my waist. At age 61, now was the time to do something drastically different than I had done before. I committed myself to not just monitoring, but changing eating habits. I also knew I needed supervised weight training and an increase in my cardio workout. Get In Shape For Women has provided the setting, trainers and accountability to make the changes I was looking for. Over the past month I've gained stamina and strength, as well as lost inches and pounds. I look forward to building on those gains."

Process set forth to hire chief

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset is on the search for a new police chief.

At Monday night's Board of Selectmen meeting Town Manager Bill Griffin laid out a detailed hiring process to select the new chief of police.

Current police chief James Hussey is leaving the Cohasset force to return to the place where he started his law enforcement career — Boston Police Department. Hussey will officially leave his post at the end of September. He has headed up the Cohasset Police Department for the last five years.

Under the Town Manager Act, Town Manager Griffin is responsible for the appointment of the Police Chief. The Board of Selectmen has the power to "veto" the appointment within 15 days of its announcement.

While the Board of Selectmen largely supported the process Griffin set forth, at least one Selectman would like to see the Board involved before the appointment is made.

Over the coming weeks, the position will be advertised in both the Cohasset Mariner and the Boston Sunday Globe in coming weeks. Applications are due by Oct. 9.

In the job description, Griffin said he placed strong emphasis on "teambuilding and community outreach," what he called the "cornerstone" of Hussey's tenure.

A salary range of $100,000 to $120,000 was established for the position after Griffin surveyed the South Shore region of their police chief's salary.

"I wanted to be sure the salary was appropriate for the South Shore and our desire to get the best candidates," said Griffin.

After receiving the applications, Griffin plans to narrow the applicant field through a review of resumes to somewhere between five and 10 candidates. Drawing on his 33-year experience, he has found the best way is to rely on the help of a candidate evaluation team.

The proposed configuration of the evaluation team, which would personally interview the semi-finalist candidates, would be the Town Manager Bill Griffin, Finance Director Michael Buckley, and to-be-determined retired or veteran police chief from another community, a town manager/administrator from another community and a Cohasset citizen representative.

Griffin said he would remain some flexibility in the structure of the group, especially if more than one citizen representative comes forward and wants to be involved.

"They need to come to the table with an open mind," Griffin said.

Following the first round of interviews, Griffin hopes there is consensus among the evaluation team members on a core group of finalists to come back for a second, more detailed interview.

If one or two finalists clearly emerge following the second interview, there will be reference checks. When Griffin determines a preferred candidate, a background check will be done. Assuming everything is in order, Griffin will give official notice to the Board of Selectmen, at which time the 15-day veto period begins.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer was concerned with the Board of Selectmen's lack of involvement in the process.

"We don't get to the look at the candidates. I'd like to see us attend that second interview…this is one of the most critical of the positions left in town," Dormitzer said.

Griffin said by virtue of the open meeting law the Selectmen's presence at the second interviews would make them public. At the meeting, Griffin expressed concerns about a good potential candidate dropping out because he/she didn't want his/her current employer to know they were looking for work elsewhere.

Upon further thought and review, Griffin said once a candidate reaches the finalist stage most would have told their current employer. As a result when reached on Wednesday Griffin said the second round of interviews, likely the final 2 or 3 candidates, would be open to the Selectmen and the public.

Interim services

Given the time it will take to ultimately select the next police chief, Town Manager Bill Griffin intends to appoint an interim police chief. The timing of the vacancy is at a critical period in the fiscal year when the department finances must be carefully monitored and the fiscal 2011 budget must be prepared.

Griffin said he plans to appoint someone from outside the police department for two reasons.

"I would encourage current members of the department to apply and compete for the position of Police Chief," Griffin said, and in past experiences that can be viewed as "blessing that individual" as the future chief. "I believe making one of those candidates the interim Police Chief interferes with the goal to have a fair and impartial selection process."

From a practical point of view, Griffin said appointing a member of the police force as interim chief would strain the department in its manning requirements and put stress on the limited overtime budget.

"I do wish to stress that my position of hiring someone from outside to serve as interim police chief is not a reflection of a lack of confidence in one or more of our current employees to serve in that capacity," Griffin said, adding he is reviewing his options and will advise the board of his selection when it is made.

Briefs

Special Town Meeting Nov. 16

Mark your calendars: Special Town Meeting is scheduled for Monday, Nov. 16 at 7p.m. Selectmen approved the date at their meeting Monday night. The warrant will close on Friday, Sept. 25 at 1p.m. Citizen's petitions and other boards interested in placing a warrant article on the Special Town Meeting warrant are due by that date.

While still early in the process, Town Manager Bill Griffin said possible items include budgetary adjustments, consideration of a local hotel and meals tax, and creating an associate member position for the Planning Board.

Cohasset Day town-wide message

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said she had received several phone calls about the cost to the town for sending out a Connect-CTY message about the Cohasset Day postponement.

"I was happy to report to those residents that there is no cost per use for that (service)," Quigley said.

Police Beat

Agitated customer taken into protective custody

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police took a 35-year-old Scituate woman into protective custody after a disturbance at Curtis Liquors on Saturday (Sept. 12) just before noon.

Police said the woman became upset when the clerk, who suspected she was under the influence of alcohol, did not sell to her. She was further agitated when police officers arrived. She was placed into protective custody.

The woman was issued a no-trespass order for Curtis Liquors. She would be subject to arrest if she returns to the store.

MV crash

A 52-year-old Cohasset man driving a 2004 Nissan pickup truck was issued a citation after he allegedly ran a red light on upper King Street at Stop & Shop and broadsided a 1998 Nissan Pathfinder traveling south on Route 3A. The 24-year-old Scituate woman in the Pathfinder told police she had the green light. The Pathfinder was towed. There were no apparent injuries. The man in the pickup was cited for failure to stop on a state highway.

Baby deer

A baby deer had to be put down last week after it was caught in a wrought-iron fence.

Police received a call from a concerned resident on Surry Drive at 7:45 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 7) reporting a deer was stuck in her fence. The resident was able to free the deer but its leg was severely broken. Police said it apparently had tried to hop the fence when its leg got caught and twisted around. The animal was in distress. Police said Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy has provided them with guidance on handling these situations humanely.

Road rage

A Scituate woman checked out OK after allegedly making an obscene gesture with her hand to a Cohasset woman during an apparent road-rage incident on Monday (Sept. 7) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A).

Police stopped the Scituate woman by Starbucks and spoke to her. No crime was committed.

Lt. William Quigley said motorists should not engage in this type of activity. "Let them pass and if things get bad, call us," he said.

On probation

An 18-year-old Cohasset teen that is on probation and wears an ankle bracelet wandered outside his area of confinement (home area) last week on Grace Drive. The probation department called, faxed a warrant to Cohasset police who picked him up on the warrant. The incident took place last Monday (Sept. 7).

Flight

U.S. Customs in New Jersey alerted police that a man wanted on a Cohasset warrant would be arriving on an international flight. Cohasset notified the State Police. Police explained that warrants are entered into the NCIC (National Crime Information Center) database and if a traveler were stopped by Customs their name would come up.

Annoying calls

Police have notified Comcast security about a series of calls reported by a Cohasset woman last Monday (Sept. 7) during which a foreign-sounding man was claiming to be from Verizon. The 61-year-old woman reported she told the alleged telemarketer that she was not a Verizon subscriber but he continued to call back. Police said he called about seven times in an hour and spewed profanity at the woman. The caller ID did not show the number where he was calling from.

Drug incident

In keeping with the Memorandum of Understanding between the school department and police, school officials notified police that a 17-year-old had provided another 17-year-old with an Adderal pill off school grounds the night before. The incident was reported at about 11:30 a.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 9). Police said the parents of both teens were notified and detectives are investigating. Under the MOU, the schools notify police of any potential criminal activity.

ID theft

A 53-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police that a credit card company notified her that she had opened an account and she had not done so. Police said that the credit card company might have had an inkling that something was irregular and notified the woman. She notified the credit bureaus so no new accounts would be issued under her name and picked up an ID theft package from the police.

Civil dispute

A 60-year-old Cohasset woman who is having a dispute with the condo association where she previously lived in town called police from the complex when she thought someone might be living in her condo.

Police gained access to the condo, which was empty. The electricity was turned off and no one had been living there, police said. Police got the call at about 5:30 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 12).

Cyclists encouraged to use helmets

Cohasset Police encourage all bicyclists, skateboarders and scooter riders to use helmets while riding. Helmets are mandated for all children 16 and younger. According to the National Transportation Safety Board, bicycle helmet use can reduce the risk of head injury by 85 percent and brain injury by 88 percent. Children and adolescents between 11-14 are least likely to use a helmet, and are five times more likely to sustain injuries in a bicycle related crash than any other age group – an 11 percent compliance rate.

Cohasset Police have bike helmets that are available at no charge to residents and their families. For information, ask at the front window of police headquarters.

No child under 1 year of age may be carried on a bicycle. Children between 1 and 4 years old are required to be in a baby seat that protects the child's feet and hands.

As a compromise, Walsh consulted with the technology director and posted links to the video and the transcript on the Cohasset Schools homepage (www.cohassetk12.org).

"There is a lot of polarization in our society. Things are right or wrong, or black or white. (In this case) there are lot of circumstances and variables…this was a judgment call made with all the information available at the time," Walsh said.

Members of the School Committee spoke next, the majority said Obama gave a well-written speech and acknowledged the important message in Obama's words. Obama spoke from personal experiences, the importance of hard work and education as well as each child's individual capacity to contribute to society in a positive way.

"The speech was superb and motivational. Obama is living the American dream…but the timing of this was problematic," school committee member Paul Schubert said, adding the speech could be used in many different ways across the curriculum in the future. "A live speech is very difficult to coordinate."

Chairman MacCarthy said she has received e-mails and phone calls from both side of the issue, "some are angry it was not aired, others wanted to have the opt out…sometimes you're in a position where you're damned if you do and damned if you don't."

MacCarthy said she received an e-mail from the superintendent alerting her to the decision to not show the speech on Tuesday and "did not think twice about it…I have full faith (in the superintendent) to make these decisions."

Parents speak out

For the parents who came to the meeting to address the issue, most spoke of the historical significance of the event and the inference many could draw from its absence from the classroom.

"He is our first African American president addressing our children. In that context it has tremendous meeting to our nation," Jodi Tolman of Forest Circle said, drawing a parallel from her own childhood when she sat with her peers and watched astronauts land on the moon.

She was "troubled" by the fact the schools did not know about the speech until Thursday before Labor Day – "it was all over the news" – or that the school administration was not proactive in seizing the opportunity to show the speech.

"(The decision) legitimizes the controversy and de-legitimizes the president," said Tolman. In a larger context, Tolman said, an inference can be drawn from the schools' decision that "a black man is not capable of running the country."

Joe Stanganelli of Aaron River Road also asked the school committee to look at the big picture, "It is a real sad thing the Middle-High School students in particular were not able to be part of this. A message was sent that maybe there is something wrong with the message or the person who sent it."

In particular, Stanganelli rejected the idea of providing an "opt-out" for parents, "that is the endorse the idea that there is something possible scary here…this shouldn't have been controversial."

Howie Altholtz of Cedar Ledge said the decision process was flawed, "there is polarization in our society, it's true, but this (decision) only added to the fear and intimidation in our country…it caved into that mentality."

What he found most disturbing, Altholtz said, was the conflicting messages he received when he asked why the President's message was not shown. The High School principal said one thing, the superintendent something else and the school committee chairman a third thing, "the community was out of the loop, the parents out of the loop and the teachers out of the loop."

"The President is not entitled to blind loyalty, but he is entitled to some basic respect," Altholtz said, adding there was not anything in the speech that rises to the level of controversial or requiring a need for parents to "opt-out."

Altholtz asked the School Committee to take responsibility for their error in not showing the speech, apologize and show the speech to students.

All parents present expressed opposition to the idea of giving parents a chance to opt out of having their child watch the speech.

Committee responds

The School Committee did not give an apology or direct the school administration to show the President's speech in a school-wide effort. However, they did reach a consensus to have the superintendent encourage teachers to show the speech in their classrooms — and an opt-out option did not need to be provided to parents.

School Committee member Helene Lieb said the decision resulted in an opportunity lost, "I was floored it wasn't being shown in the schools."

Lieb hoped something positive could still be done in the classroom, "we should encourage it as much as possible."

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz suggested the speech be put in the context of a lesson and perhaps be shown with other Presidents' (George H.W. Bush and Ronald Reagan) back-to-school messages as a compare and contrast exercise.

"I might sound really ignorant, but I didn't even know the speech took place until I started receiving e-mails about it," School Committee member Lucia Flibotte said, adding she did not feel parents needed to be provided with a opt-out. She also said she did not like being called a racist by those who e-mailed her.

After listening to the parents who came to speak Superintendent Walsh said, "it's troublesome that some have said this is not about partisan politics yet this reeks of partisan politics."

Walsh further explained her decision as one she felt represented all parents in the district, "I have to feel I represent all the parents…they have the ultimate decision on what children see or don't see."

She said she would give teachers the "academic freedom" to use the speech in the best way they saw fit. Walsh also wanted to make clear she did not make a decision based on the content of the speech.

In the end, the School Committee gave direction to the superintendent to encourage teachers to take the opportunity to show the speech. The consensus was to alert parents the speech would be shown, but an "opt out" option did not need to be given to parents.

"The less constraints, the better," MacCarthy said.

Walsh said she would send out an e-mail to staff to encourage them to show Obama's speech framed in a lesson plan of their own design.

Towns to send letters of interest on Minot Light

At the meeting all shared similar concerns and indicated they would be willing to work together to ensure Minot Light remains a vital landmark in the communities.

"From our perspective we are certainly interested in doing the right thing, but we do have concerns," Selectman Ted Carr said to open the discussion. He named the cost to maintain the lighthouse, a cost so far unknown to both towns, as his and the board's greatest concern.

"We are worried about committing to the long-term maintenance when no one really knows what's underneath the water (the submerged section of Minot Light)," said Doug Smith, chairman of the Scituate Historical Commission. Smith highlighted the towns' affection and association with the lighthouse, but also the Lighthouse's difficult access and the long-term commitment involved in owning the 149-year-old structure.

Dave Ball, director of the Scituate Historical Society, said his organization intends to write a letter of interest. Ball indicated he has been in communication with a representative of the American Lighthouse Foundation, a non-profit dedicated to saving America's lighthouses and their history. That organization has taken ownership of several lighthouses from the federal government in recent years.

Cohasset Historical Society President Kathy O'Malley said her organization did not plan to submit a letter of interest, but was interested in providing support for the organization that does take on the care of the lighthouse.

"From our perspective we are certainly interested in doing the right thing, but we do have concerns."
— Cohasset Selectman Ted Carr

"We have to be very careful politically that we don't have the public thinking (the towns) are going at this full force…and not considering the implications," said Ball.

There was some discussion of how the group could find out the condition of the lighthouse and how much the annual cost of upkeep is. Cohasset Selectman Karen Quigley said records of the maintenance cost for lighthouse must be public information.

Scituate Selectman Rick Murray agreed it would be good to find out the cost for maintenance, but questioned how much each town would be willing to spend on the lighthouse.

"If we find out the light is in mint condition, would we still be interested in committing the town or towns to it?" Murray said.

Another tact

While all present want to see Minot Light preserved, some questioned the town and the small historical societies' ability to maintain the lighthouse in perpetuity.

As a result, in addition to sending letters of interest, the group will also pursue another tact — lobbying for the lighthouse to remain owned by the federal government.

In a letter written by Rebecca Bates-McArthur, chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission, it was stated that the Coast Guard might be willing to advise the General Services Administration to put the lighthouse under control of the National Park Service and be made part of the Boston Harbor Islands National Park.

At the same time, on the local level, an alliance for Minot's Ledge Light could be formed within the "Friends of the Boston Harbor Islands" for the "Friends of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse."

"This group could promote the recreational, educational and cultural impact the Lighthouse has had on the area through talks, displays, and trips out to see the Lighthouse," stated Bates in her letter.

At last Thursday's meeting, all seemed to agree this was the "ideal solution."

"It's a very creative idea," said Scituate Selectman Rick Murray.

Cohasset Selectman Ted Carr offered to make calls to Congressman William Delahunt's office and Senator John Kerry to request their help.

The Cohasset and Scituate representatives plan to meet again after Sept. 30 to share information and begin discussing a possible future partnership.

Eighth graders and sports

Older student 'verbiage' a concern

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At these non-school supervised events Flibotte said the eighth graders were overhearing a lot of "verbiage" from the older kids that may not be appropriate for a 13- or 14-year-old.

For several years now Cohasset High has called on select eighth graders to fill out junior varsity teams. Since Spring 2006 eighth graders have competed on 13 different high school teams in six different sports.

Athletic Director Ron Ford said the policy of allowing eighth graders to play at the high school level in very specific instances has resulted in Cohasset High fielding every team it planned to have over the last three years. Most of the sports that needed help from eighth graders have grown in numbers and high school students are now able to field the teams, Ford said.

Yet, it came to the attention of School Committee member Lucia Flibotte last spring that parents with eight graders on junior varsity or varsity teams had concerns about this practice.

"I'm not suggesting eighth graders not be brought up...from the feedback I've received from parents, first I think we need to have guidelines and (clarify) what the role of eighth graders are (on the teams)," Flibotte said.

Flibotte relayed concerns about eighth graders attendance at non-school-based events whether it is a pasta dinner, the end-of-year banquet or a captain's practice. At these non-school supervised events Flibotte said the eighth graders were overhearing a lot of "verbiage" from the older kids that may not be appropriate for a 13- or 14-year-old.

Flibotte said the eighth graders were hearing members of the team schedule practices around their drinking parties, getting into cars with seniors and "stuff a 14-year-old should not be part of."

"My concern is we can't control the verbiage at these events...(and middle school) is pivotal point in a child's life," Flibotte said. The only team last spring to use eighth graders on the roster was JV girls lacrosse.

Ford said he couldn't guarantee the answer to many of the questions raised. All Cohasset High sports programs practice as one team (junior varsity and varsity) on one field, "I'm a big believer in everyone staying together."

Yet, sports related activities such as pasta dinners were out of the realm of his control, as parents or booster clubs host them. He said regulating those types of activities opens the school up to liability.

Ford said he was always willing to talk to parents about their concerns as they come up, "there is no situation where a kid will be black balled." He said when an eighth grader is on a team, they are part of the team and treated the same as a sophomore or a senior.

Before an eighth grader is allowed onto a high school level team, Ford said he or she must pass several layers of administrative review – physical ability, emotional maturity, past behavior and academics are looked at before the student makes the team. In addition, the parent has to consent to their child's involvement.

"The parent has that trump card," School Committee member Helene Lieb said. An introductory letter is sent to parents detailing the expectations of the student while they are on the team.

The School Committee reached a consensus to add in a sentence or two informing parents that pasta dinners, banquets and captain's practices are not school-based events.

"Parents need to know it is not required," Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said.

This winter, Cohasset High will be establishing its own boys and girls swim team (formerly Cohasset partnered with Scituate High to field a team). Ford said he expects to need several eighth graders to fill out the boys swim team roster.

Learn about geothermal energy

Quagliaroli will be discussing the various installation methods for Geothermal and its use for heating and cooling homes and buildings in New England.

On Tuesday, Sept. 22 at 7p.m. the Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee will be holding a free seminar at the Paul Pratt Library on Geothermal Heating & Cooling. Our speakers will be David J. Quagliaroli of Dragin Geothermal.(http://www.dragingeothermal.com/) and Tom Pittsley of Middleborough, a homeowner with a geothermal heating and cooling system.

Mr. Quagliaroli will be discussing the various installation methods for Geothermal and its use for heating and cooling homes and buildings in New England. Discussion will include the pros and cons of open vs. closed loop, as well as standing column systems. Mr. Quagliaroli will discuss estimated costs for system installation and average monthly usage costs in addition to long term maintenance issues. Geothermal systems can allow a homeowner to heat their home for as little as $1 per day. In the summer time that same Geothermal system can cool your home or office and provide hot water for domestic use.

The AEC is interested in Geothermal system as we look to major renovations at our Town Hall. Replacing the current heating and cooling systems with Geothermal can offer a tremendous reduction in summer time electrical demand and lower our dependence on fossil fuels for winter heat. Geothermal systems operate at 75 percent greater efficiency than oil furnaces, 48 percent greater efficiency than gas furnaces.

Geothermal systems have been successfully installed in public buildings around Massachusetts including the North Adams public library (http://www.naplibrary.com/NAPLgreen.htm).

Elder Affairs director introduced

Coral Grande, who began her post as director of Elder Affairs last week, was introduced to the Board of Selectmen this week.

The Board of Selectmen welcomed her to the town and indicated they were there to support her department.

Grande comes to Cohasset by way of Gloucester. She most recently served as the Gloucester Council on Aging Executive Director and was chosen from among 35 applications for the director position.

"We have all the ingredients — the talent, the abilities, the resources — to make this department successful," Grande said, calling herself the "luckiest person in the world." She named keeping seniors in their homes as long as possible, ensuring they receive the services they need and keeping them active were all key goals.

Grande also said she is hoping to be part of the team that makes the new senior center a reality.

"We want to work very closely with you," said Selectman Ted Carr.

Carr speaks to Treat's Pond easement

During the Selectmen comment period at Monday's meeting Selectman Ted Carr said he was "fully resolved" to find a solution to the what he believes is a public safety issue on Atlantic Avenue/Treat's Pond.

The Board of Selectmen has been working with a small group of Atlantic Avenue residents to establish an easement agreement to legally access the drainage outfall of Treat's Pond located at Sandy Cove. Carr indicated the resident group recently floated a lease agreement, but the Selectmen had yet to see the language of the lease.

Carr said he would rather find an amicable solution with the residents and would keep on trying to find a resolution.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS
To Be Held On September 30, 2009

A special meeting of shareholders (the "Special Meeting") of Pilgrim Bank (the "Bank"), will be held at the Bank's branch office located at 800 Chief Justice Cushing Way, Cohasset, Massachusetts, on Wednesday, September 30, 2009. The Special Meeting will be held at 6:00 p.m., Massachusetts time. Polls will remain open for voting at the Special Meeting from 6:05 p.m., Massachusetts time until 8:00 p.m., Massachusetts time on Wednesday, September 30, 2009.

The Special Meeting is for the purpose of considering and acting upon:

1. The approval of a Plan of Reorganization from a Mutual Cooperative Bank to a Mutual Holding Company (the "Plan"), and all actions necessary or incident thereto, whereby the Bank will reorganize into a mutual holding company structure by establishing: (i) a Massachusetts-chartered stock cooperative bank (the "Stock Bank") that will succeed to all of the rights and obligations of the Bank; (ii) a mid-tier Maryland stock holding company (the "Holding Company") that will own 100% of the common stock of the Stock Bank; and (iii) a Massachusetts-chartered mutual holding company (the "MHC") that will own 100% of the common stock of the Holding Company.
2. The approval of the proposed corporators of the MHC.
3. Such other matters as may properly come before the Special Meeting or any adjournments thereof.

Any action may be taken on the foregoing proposals at the Special Meeting on the date specified above or on any date or dates to which, by original or later adjournment, the Special Meeting may be adjourned. The shareholders who will be entitled to vote at the Special Meeting will be those depositors of the Bank as of July 2, 2009 (the "Voting Record Date") who have also attained the age of 18 years.

The Board of Directors of Pilgrim Bank urges its shareholders to attend the Special Meeting.

Learn about new library technology

Bill Muenkel from 3M will be here to train the public on how to use this new radio frequency identification (RFID) technology.

Join the staff at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Monday, October 5 at 11 a.m. and learn how easy it is to check out library materials independently on the library's new self-check-out station! Bill Muenkel from 3M will be here to train the public on how to use this new radio frequency identification (RFID) technology.

During the past year, the library began implementing this technology which improves the speed and accuracy of most circulation and shelving functions, facilitating good customer service and minimizing loss of materials. Using a self-checkout system and RFID, customers can independently check out multiple items at once and pay fees and fines independently with cash or credit cards.

Donald J. and Sheila S. Evans have presented the Library Trust with a gift of $10,000.

A gift to inspire giving

Library supporters believed that a new non-profit organization, the Cohasset Library Trust, designed to both optimally invest the endowment funds and to increase the size of the endowment would, over time, significantly benefit the library.

The Directors of the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc. (CLT) announce that the Library Trust has received a gift of $10,000 from Donald J. and Sheila S. Evans, on the occasion of a recent birthday. The Evanses, in their letter to Jane O. Goedecke, CLT President, said their gift "expresses our continuing enthusiasm for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the Cohasset Library Trust's mission to support it!" They also went on to say, "we think of the library as the heartbeat of the Cohasset community, a crossroad of its activities and a vital part of its residents' lives. The library's future is critically dependent on the continued growth of the Library Trust's endowment."

The Evanses added: "We hope others may also find that such a gift is a very satisfying way to express their appreciation of and enthusiasm for Cohasset's library!"

In a recent interview Mrs. Evans said they believe strongly that taxpayers should pay for the kind of town they want, but that sometimes a partnership between public and private money can provide the extra something that makes a lot of difference. She gave the example that in 2000 the need for a bigger library was evident at the same time that Cohasset was faced with a $41 million expansion of its schools. The ability of the Library Trustees to raise $1.7 million from private gifts for the Library Building Fund, combined with Library Construction funds and the sale of the old library, permitted the renovation of the empty Ripley Road School to create Cohasset's current library.

At the time that the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc. was established in 2006, the library's endowment was the result of slightly more than 20 unsolicited gifts in the previous 103 years. Library supporters believed that a new non-profit organization, the Cohasset Library Trust, designed to both optimally invest the endowment funds and to increase the size of the endowment would, over time, significantly benefit Cohasset's library.

This has proved to be so. Since 2006, the Library Trust has received generous gifts from Mrs. Genevieve Good, the Thomas E. Behenna family and from Mrs. John Barnard, Jr. Also, in 2008, CLT's mission received a real boost by a $100,000 commitment from the South Shore Music Circus. The Evanses' gift both adds to the size of the endowment, but, perhaps more importantly, may inspire others to support Cohasset's library in this way.

First games on turf field next week

Williams, and Weymouth have converted their grass fields to turf in recent years.

"I'd venture to guess my entire team has played on turf before," said girls' soccer coach Deb Beal. "We'll still be learning, but to have it as our home field will be an advantage."

In anticipation of the turf field completion, the coaches put their heads together to work out a practice schedule so each team will have experience on the field.

While the soccer teams have had the option to practice and play home games at Milliken and field hockey at Deer Hill, the football team has been without a full-size playing field so far this season. Practices have been held on the practice field behind the gymnasium.

"We've been making due, but the turf field is going to give practices and game prep a whole new dynamic," football coach Pete Afanasiw.

That's not to say the soccer teams aren't itching to get over to the larger, wider turf field at the high school.

"The (turf) field is very big and you can playa much nicer brand of soccer," said Jim Willis, boys' soccer coach.

Spreading out the field of play gives players that extra second to make a good pass; the speed of the game will be a lot quicker, too.

"It really will change the style of the game. Players won't have to worry about holes or divots; they are guaranteed a flat surface," Beal said.

"(Players) will also be able to trust the touch. Here (at Milliken) you never know for sure where it will go," Willis said.

The smooth, predictable surface of the turf should translate well to the game of football as well.

"It's going to be an offensive advantage. Running backs will be able to make cuts faster," said Will Lynner, senior co-captain of the football team.

Varsity football coach Peter Afanasiw agreed. "When you're worried about a puddle or a hole in the field, you can't take the same strides. The turf itself feels grass-like, but you never have to worry about your footing."

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Ron Newman of Complete Turf Service uses a "yardboss" to make the fibers stand out allowing the rubber to fall into place while putting the finishing touches on the turf field at the high school on Tuesday. Newman and his coworkers were working with heavy hearts because their coworker, Randall Cook, had passed away that morning after falling into a coma. The last field Cook worked on was Cohasset's.

Post-rain the former grass Alumni Field was dotted with puddles and mud making for a very soft playing surface. Between the three different fall sports, by the end of the season the field was typically in poor shape, players and coaches said.

"If I'm being honest…it had rocks, the grass wasn't always groomed and to put it politely, it had improper drainage," said football co-captain and senior Jake Wheelwright.

The field made scheduling and re-scheduling games a challenge.

"There won't be any holes in the field, less twisted ankles," said senior girls soccer player Mackenzie Hart. Other members of the team hope the new field will draw more interest in high school from the community increasing their cheering fan base.

"We'll be able to play in the rain and not worry about mud puddles," said Tori Lehr. The move back to Alumni Field also opens up the option of night games under the lights.

After the heavy rain this past Saturday Ford was among the first to check out the turf field on Sunday morning. "It was dry; it was an amazing sight for me. I've seen Alumni before after that kind of rain and it's not been pretty…now, if there's a game scheduled we're pretty sure we're going to play."

The turf field also gives a nod to the past by incorporating the original Cohasset High Skippers logo from the 1950s: a white 'C' in the center of a blue oval. "We thought that was most representative of the alumni (that the field is named after)," Ford said.

In addition to the high school athletes, all Cohasset middle-high school students will be able to utilize the field during physical education class.

Cohasset High is inviting the community to the dedication and ribbon cutting of the new turf field on Friday, Sept. 25 as the football Skippers take on next-door rival Scituate Sailors.

"We really want to thank the Sports Partnership and the people of the town for taking on this project, especially during this economic time," Ford said.

Turf Field ribbon cutting Sept. 25

The new turf field at the Clark Chatterton Athletic complex will officially be opened on Friday night Sept. 25 at 6:30 before the High School football game. Come join town and school officials along with members of the Cohasset Sports Partnership, the Cohasset Booster groups and student athletes young and old as the field is officially opened with a ribbon cutting.

Arrive early to see the refinished track and the new field. Stay and watch the Skippers take on neighboring rival Scituate in a battle of gridiron greats. Kickoff is at 7 p.m. It's no longer Got Turf? It's Got Turf !

Jack Myers of Complete Turf Service and the director of field operations uses a rake to get the turf fibers to stand up so that the rubber pellets can fall in between the fibers.

Emergency Management prepares town in case of disaster

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

While no one wants to think about a major disaster affecting his or her hometown, whether it's a hurricane, a plane crash or something else, residents might want to know the town is prepared to deal with that emergency.

For many years now a group of town officials and local residents have been thinking about those "what ifs" and preparing the town to respond.

Cohasset's local Emergency Management Team is charged with coordinating federal, state, local, volunteer and private resources during emergencies and disasters in town. But, in order to do their job when a natural or man-made disaster occurs, the Office of Emergency Management needs to be prepared.

"I think we could say we are as prepared as any town our size," Glenn Pratt, Deputy Director of Emergency Management, said.

Emergency management involves personnel from nearly every aspect of town government: Board of Health, the public health nurse, school administration, town finance director, elder affairs, fire and police chiefs and citizens.

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) has Cohasset's (and every other town in the Commonweath's) local emergency plan on file. The file is not public, but it contains the A to Z of what the town would do in the event of a local, state, national, or global emergency.

A handout outlining how each household and family can prepare for an emergency is set to go out in October's tax bills.

The committee has plans for an array of possible disasters and meets quarterly to update those plans or to discuss new information.

"It tells where the critical infrastructure is, where the supplies are located, how items will be transported," Pratt said. "In town (the emergency management team) knows all this; we wouldn't have to look at the book. But, the state and federal agencies need to know so we're all on the same page."

Fire Chief Bob Silvia, his department and the police will be the first responders in the event of an incident. Once an incident gets too large for them to handle on their own, they request mutual aid from other towns. Once that is exhausted (or the other towns are experiencing similar disaster situations) state resources need to be called on, if that is not enough federal agencies and resources need to be requested.

"If there is a global emergency affecting more than Cohasset, resources are going to get stressed pretty quickly," Silvia said.

Preparation for a town-wide emergency has been on the books for decades, but it does need constant updates and refreshing as new information, buildings and technology comes into play.

As part of the federal Civil Defense Act in 1952 all towns were required to write an emergency plans. In the 1950s, Cohasset became the keepers of a complete surgical hospital. The supplies were housed in Cohasset until about 10 years ago when it was packed up and shipped to El Salvador, Pratt said.

The modern age of emergency management was kicked off with the Homeland Security Act following the 9/11 terrorist attacks. The focus became more emergency-based and less on civil defense, Silvia said.

Emergency management agencies at the federal (FEMA) and state (MEMA) levels were established and efforts became more proactive. MEMA is currently building a comprehensive database of all the equipment available in public safety departments across the state.

"If something is ever needed they'll be able to access it at a moment's notice," Silvia said. "At the state level there is constantly something going on."

Silvia and Pratt have attended countless training seminars. Much of the training is to ensure all emergency representatives "talk the same language" when communicating during an emergency situation, they said.

One of the focused goals right now for emergency management is the building of a central storage facility in the basement of the Deer Hill School. Emergency supplies will be kept in one place for easy accessibility. Emergency management also has an enclosed trailer in which supplies can be transported.

Among the stores are supplies to provide temporary sheltering for 40 people for several days. If more than 40 people need shelter, the American Red Cross is supposed to step in.

The main shelter location will be at the high school where there is emergency power capability, showers and a kitchen.

Recent history leaves examples few and far between of when Cohasset had to call in state or federal aid.

"Ninety-nine percent of everything we can handle ourselves or with mutual aid," Silvia said. A case during a hurricane when power was lost for five to six days more than a decade ago is the last time state assistance was called on in an emergency capacity.

While it has been a while since Cohasset has had to put one of their plans to use, or call on the state for help in dealing with an emergency, it might be comforting to residents to know there are plans in place to keep the town up and running and residents safe.

"It's really like an insurance policy," Pratt said.

Emergency kits for the elderly

Thomas Wigmore, a member of the Emergency Management Team, has distributed special Emergency Preparedness Packs to some Cohasset elderly citizens who are house-bound.

The bright red packs, which are about the size of a large lunchbox, include bottled water, toiletries, MREs (meals ready to eat), first-aid items, a poncho and more.

Wigmore said he has worked with the Senior Center to identify citizens who might need a kit.

Emergency Preparedness Packs from the American Red Cross have been distributed to some house-bound elders in Cohasset.

Wigmore also suggests the elderly keep a small supply of their daily medications in the kit as well as a "file of life" that includes important telephone numbers.

For more about the Red Cross kits, contact Tara Tradd at the Board of Health at 781-383-4116.

"I think we could say we are as prepared as any town our size."

Emergency management in brief

The Cohasset Emergency Management office is the town agency responsible for coordinating federal, state, local, volunteer and private resources during emergencies and disasters in Cohasset. They provide leadership to:

- develop plans for effective response to all hazards, disasters or threats;
- train volunteer emergency personnel (CERT) to protect the public;
- provide information to the citizens;
- and assist individuals, families, businesses (and community) to mitigate against, prepare for, and respond to and recover from emergencies, both natural and man made.

Cher gets her bike ready for a ride through Eastwick (Cohasset) during the movie's filming here in the summer of 1986. The TV cast of Eastwick does not feature the movie's stars.

TV's 'Eastwick' premieres Wednesday

Supermodel and actress Rebecca Romijn headlines the television show.

Twenty-three years ago the town of Cohasset was transformed by Hollywood into the town of Eastwick. Teaming with the magic of the movies, not to mention the supernatural premise of the film, "The Witches of Eastwick" took over the streets and landmarks of Cohasset in the summer of 1986.

Now, the story of three witches – and the devil incarnate – has found new life on the small screen. "Eastwick" will premiere on ABC this coming Wednesday, Sept. 23 at 10p.m.

The 1987 feature film and now the television series are loosely based on John Updike's novel, "The Witches of Eastwick."

Cohasset will not play a starring role in the television show, but perhaps residents can relate to the quintessential New England town featured as the backdrop.

Supermodel and actress Rebecca Romijn headlines the television show. The remainder of the cast includes Lindsay Price, Jaime Ray Newman and Paul Gross, trying to fill big shoes in playing Darryl van Horne, the role Jack Nicholson made famous.

Loosely based on the "Witches of Eastwick" feature film, the television show will revolve around three women who discover they have magical powers when a mysterious man comes to town.

This isn't the first time an Eastwick television series has tried to make a go of it. According to imdb.com, there was an unsold television pilot of "The Witches of Eastwick" made in 1992 and there was another failed attempt at a television adaptation of the book/movie in 2002.

For those new to Cohasset or unfamiliar with the movie, the 1987 film starring Jack Nicholson, Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer prominently featured Cohasset Village, the Common, First Parish Church and Bassing Beach. Warner Brothers, the movie crew and the A-list Hollywood stars literally took over the Cohasset streets and landmarks during the summer of 1986 to make the film.

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news can slow down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with the start of school, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasseters of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news at Town Hall.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, we receive dozens of emails everyday, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpg attachments.

We still accept news by fax and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off here at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., above the Upper Crust.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send us flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Email: mford@cnc.com

FAX: 781-741-2931

Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043

Sports news email: wwassers@cnc.com

Obituaries: obits@cnc.com

Advertising: coliver@cnc.com

Try to have your news to the Mariner by Wednesday morning for that week's issue, however, earlier is always better. We accept letters to the editor until noon, Wednesday. If letters come by email we can stretch that deadline a few hours.

We have forms available for wedding and engagement announcements with complete instructions at the Mariner office.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime.

Call Mary Ford, editor, at 781-741-2933; staff reporter Nancy White, at 781-741-2935; sports editor, Will Wassersug at 781-837-4577 or advertising account executive Claudia Oliver at 781-837-4519.

We couldn't do our job without help from the community. So let us hear from you!

Learn about new library technology

Join the staff at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Monday, Oct. 5 at 11 a.m. and learn how easy it is to check out library materials independently on the library's new self-checkout station! Bill Muenkel from 3M will be there to train the public on how to use this new radio frequency identification (RFID) technology.

During the past year, the library began implementing this technology which improves the speed and accuracy of most circulation and shelving functions, facilitating good customer service and minimizing loss of materials. Using a self-checkout system and RFID, customers can independently check out multiple items at once and pay fees and fines independently with cash or credit cards.

How come I didn't see your name on the Sandy Beach donor list?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Deeply saddened

TO THE EDITOR:

I am deeply saddened that our students were not able to see President Obama speaking to them last week. This community and our school system have always valued openness and respect. A valuable lesson and a teachable moment was lost by not showing our students that we respect the office of the President of the United States and the message he wanted to convey.

More thanks from Sandy Beach Association

TO THE EDITOR:

Our appreciation is endless! The Sandy Beach Association simply could not have operated this summer without the generous support of every single donor who gave to our annual fundraising drive. We have a few additional names to include in our annual thank you ad, which ran last week.

Tara Tradd from the Board of Health worked all summer long to test the quality of our swimming water. Her work was critical in keeping our swimming waters safe!

Paul Shea from the Conservation Committee. He works closely with our organization. We can't thank him enough.

Ross Rosano certainly had his work cut out for him this year! The fourth beach clean up this year was done free of charge. He was also our first "Green Thinker" by taking our seaweed to be used for organic mulch. This season he did all the legwork necessary to assure the success for the Sandy Beach/Holly Hill Farm "green connection."

We also received a few additional donations after our ad ran and we'd like to thank The Dutton Family, Helen M. Kelly, Kitty and Roger Whitley, Thomas and Therese Lincoln, and Katie and Dave Dugan for their contributions.

Thank you to everyone for another successful and safe summer.

'A shame in more ways than one'

TO THE EDITOR:

The President of the United States of America requested 15 minutes during the school lunch period Sept. 8th to make a live broadcast address to the schoolchildren of our country about the values of hard work and personal responsibility as they begin the new school year.

Cohasset decided not to allow the request, so our kids did not join their peers.

I have heard varying and somewhat contradictory explanations for the decision, and I understand we cannot allow just anyone to speak to our children in school, but I do not see a legitimate standard that our President does not meet.

The bottom line is, if the President of the United States of America is not to be granted permission to speak to our school about such a noble topic in this circumstance and without parental pre-approval, advance review of the text, or "opt-out" availability, I assume no one deserves and will be granted such respect and trust going forward. This is all a shame in more ways than one.

Speech should have been aired

COMMENTARY

SALLY AYERS

I was shocked to learn that Cohasset Middle High School did not air our President's speech on Tuesday Sept. 8, 2009. When the controversy first arose over the President's proposed address the previous week, I made a point of going on the school's website to research whether Cohasset Schools had taken a position. I was going to be very vocal had it not. There was no information on the website at that time and I comfortably assumed that the speech would be made available to our teachers and students.

• Day 1:

I was looking forward to checking in with my daughters (grades 10 and 11) later that evening to get their impressions of the speech. When they told me that they hadn't seen it and that it wasn't made available, I was shocked — you know the kind of shock that initially starts with denial and then progresses pretty quickly through the stages of anger, outrage and grief? That shock.

• Day 2:

I think it must have been somewhere in between the initial shock and the denial phase that I contacted a friend and fellow High School parent to see if my daughters had checked-out of town for the day or if the school really didn't air Obama's speech. It was confirmed: It was not aired and no one knew why.

• Day 3:

I was happy to learn that my fellow parent friend, thankfully a more proactive person than I, had taken the initiative to contact Joel Antolini, the school Principal, to see what had happened. This is what I learned:

1. Nothing formal was done school wide.

2. That "someone" (we still don't know who) decided not to air it because it was to be aired during lunch hour and that the school lunch (we'll leave this topic for another day) was too stiff a competition.

3. That Joel Antolini said that he was "pleased that the President's remarks were very similar to the comments I made to the students when we opened school." (Give me a break here, Joel).

4. That Joel Antolini did not make an announcement and that "some of the teachers were interested, and probably told students it was available."

5. And that "regarding the decision" (to air or not to air), "there really wasn't one" because "No student, parent, or faculty member asked to view the President's address."

Once the denial was over and my anger began to fade, and the grief rolled in, it occurred to me that our newly elected President had asked us, our students and our school faculty to view his address, and that my kids' school didn't honor our President's request and that my kids' school let him down and that my kids' school had let them down.

Shame on the Cohasset Middle High School Leadership that allowed this to happen.

Behind the scene on 'water gate(s)'

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Paving Progress – Friday of last week, we were able to place the final coat of paving on Rust Way, but further operations were halted due to impending rain later in the day. Paving resumed on this past Monday when Jerusalem Road Drive and Haystack Lane received their topcoat paving. Slowly, but surely we are marching through the list of streets to be paved.

Sewer Meeting – Remember to attend the up-coming sewer meeting planned for 10 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 26th at Town Hall. If you are in the area to be connected to the new sewer, this is your chance to ask any questions regarding the connection process.

The Anatomy of a Water Gate – We mentioned in a previous article that we are replaced a series of "water gates" in the Common area that were damaged when the road was ground prior to base coat paving. Since water gate is not a common term, we thought a description of what they are might be of interest to you. First of all, the term water gate is short for "water gate valve." The term is commonly used to refer to the valve and its appurtenances, which allow the valve to be opened and closed from the road surface above the buried valve.

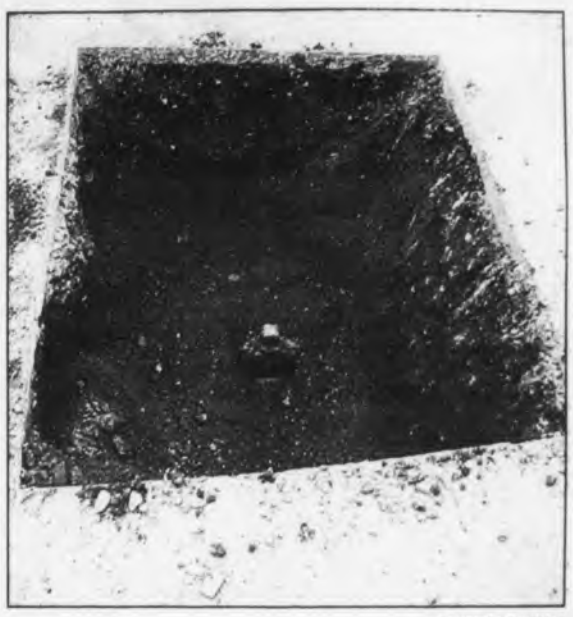
As you probably already know, the Water Department has large pipes in the ground that carry the water into our neighborhoods. In the case of North Main Street at the Common, the pipe (or water main) is 12 inches in diameter. Periodically there are valves in this water main, which allow sections of it to be isolated from the balance of the system for repairs or other purposes. The valves in a 12-inch pipe are of necessity quite large themselves. Each valve has a two-inch square top onto which a special square ended wrench mounted on the end of a long "T" shaped handle can operate. The first photo shows the square end just peeking through the dirt at the bottom of a pit dug in North Main Street near the Community Center. Remember, since water freezes easily, the pipes must be at least several feet below ground to avoid freezing.

The next photo shows a close-up of the square top of the valve used to open and close the valve.

The valve is then covered with a two-part cast iron tube, called a "riser," that provides a tube shaped chamber between the valve and the road surface. A long wrench can be lowered through the riser to open or shut the valve. The next photo shows the bottom part of the riser inserted over the top of the valve. If you look closely, you can see that the riser is wider at the bottom, to cover the top of the valve.

Once the bottom half of the riser has been placed and leveled so that it is vertical, the top half of the riser is slipped over the bottom half. Since the top half slides over the bottom half, the top half can be adjusted upward until the top is flush with the finished roadway.

After the top half is placed and covered with a cap, the pit is partially filled with sand and the sand is compacted around the tube. The sand actually holds the moveable portion of the riser in place while the hole is backfilled completely and paved.



Now, with this arrangement, whenever the road is paved to add asphalt or ground to remove asphalt, the riser can be adjusted up or down so that the top is always flush with the road surface.

This is exactly the process used to replace a number of water gates around the Common that were damaged during construction. In this particular instance, the back-fill used above the sand, but below the asphalt is a special material called flowable fill, which was described in last week's article as a type of cement that will not compress when it sets up; but can easily be dug with hand tools. The use of this material significantly reduces the road settling issues that sometimes occurs in excavations after paving is completed.

Flip a coin to see who wakes the kids and who makes the coffee.

After a few failed attempts at waking children, resort to microwaving a piece of bacon and running through the bedrooms waving it under their noses. Return to kitchen feeling like the Pied Piper of Ham-ville, with little children following behind you yawning and whining about how they really don't need to go to bed any earlier.

Do your best imitation of short-order cooks and whip up pancakes, egg sandwiches and the always nutritional, Reese's Pieces cereal. Mistakenly pour OJ in cereal. Toss out and try again.

Need…. more…. coffee…

Inhale some coffee while surveying the kids. Realize that one child has on the wrong sports uniform. Send him back to change seasons. Note that you have only a few seconds to drink your coffee before that child will undoubtedly yell that he can't find the right uniform. Buy yourself a few more minutes by yelling back that if you come in there and find it, he'll have to pay you $5. When he still can't locate it, go to his room, dig through the hamper and find uniform at the bottom. Take a sniff. Attempt not to pass out as you hand it over and assure him that he's only going to stink it up anyhow.

Suddenly remember that you have a dog. Ask if anyone has fed him breakfast. Several hands shoot in the air as you look over just in time to see the aforementioned dog throwing up all over the couch. Clean up the mess while noticing that the dog doesn't even remember that he ate breakfast — let alone three times — and is busy trying to steal a still-drowsy child's egg sandwich out of her hand.

Attempt to find all appropriate sports equipment and put in a pile by the door. Once that's accomplished, take a sip of coffee before chasing the dog around the house to recover whatever sock, shoe, cleat, glove or cap with which he's absconded.

Roll out the door into the cars. Spend the day driving, cheering, consoling, supporting, coaching, cringing, celebrating, … and drinking even more coffee until it's time to go home, make dinner, watch a movie, fall into bed and wake up and do it all over again. After all, today was only Saturday. There's still one more weekend day to go.

5:45 a.m. "Honey … wake up. I mean it. The alarm's going off. Yes, I know it's the weekend. But, that's why we have to get up even earlier."

HEALTH NOTES

Changing with the times

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Ideas, products, messages and behaviors all change as do physical things such as houses and institutions.

Change is always with us. When change occurs, its effect depends on many unrelated factors. Malcolm Gladwell in his new book Tipping Point says "tipping points" are the levels at which the momentum for change becomes unstoppable. Ideas, products, messages and behaviors all change as do physical things such as houses and institutions. Some examples:

Vocabulary. Much of the one you use routinely is no longer in use. Many examples exist: OMG seen in cell phone texting replaces oh, my soul, the polite version. How many people now use the original? We think of word evolution as coarsening the language, but those who have become used to the new words are creating newer words or broadening usage — words like clunker, and firefighter which replaced the antique terms wreck and fireman.

What's now illegal. Drinking, cheating, truancy and even kidnapping and murder in the face of a greater diversity of types of events are all factors which have greatly broadened understanding and public perception of the words themselves. Recent media coverage cites an ordinance, which proposes arresting smelly bus passengers as a nuisance. The same media provides comprehensive coverage of the H1N1/Swine Flu issue, but coverage states that pregnant women may have mortality figures as high as 5 percent if they catch Swine Flu. The new factor here is that pregnant women as a group includes pregnant teenagers — a category who's relative numbers have been increasing compared to the larger group. What factors affect our thoughts about each group?

Sports. Change in the sheer quantity of kids starting their sporting career have necessarily made the divisions more standardized and regulated to enable better and fairer interplay and the increased participation by parents in oversight of their children's sporting activities. As a result, sports are more effectively focused on overall public health goals rather than just winning. Although winning is one factor, but overall public health is a more important factor. And even public health goals have been modified by another important factor, routine brain exercise; not just memory, but also other exercise it needs.

Health. Full brain training as an element of the health picture has become an increasingly important factor in individual health maintenance. Twenty years ago, a full body workout was effectively disassociated with the need for training in such mental activities as memorizing, learning by rote, later reasoning and assimilation of experience by reading. Now, we have learned that elements of the brain's control system must be regularly exercised in the same way our throwing arm is if we wish to maintain nearly the same elements of mental acuity as we had at a younger age. An example of experiential loss of capability is loss of balance in older persons. Their brains are no longer exposed to directional accelerations as often or severe as in the activities of their younger days. The time in life at which these differences occur can vary by many years. And time is important and certainly an age-related factor. When does one get to do all the things he wants? The answer is surely later.

Brain Fitness. But it's never too late to begin exercising the brain in modern ways. The year for such activities has been one of sustained growth and the diversity of products is staggering. The Cohasset Board of Health has voted to approve a plan for extended use of brain exercise software and its associated material for the Town cooperative Brain Fitness program.

Our plans for the future include installation of additional relevant updated programs at the Paul Pratt Library and provisions for their regular use by its patrons. In addition, we will be discussions of the software at several forthcoming events including the following: Sept. 17 Mass Health Officers meeting; Sept. 21 Public Forum, televised Selectmen's meeting in which the various brain fitness programs will be explained. Sept. 29 Cohasset Health Fair in which new software will hopefully be announced and demonstrated. This latter activity is being awaited by the Library staff that wish to make the programs available to the public from the Library.

Nancy and Rudy Talbot: With Timeless Respect

COMMENTARY

MARTHA A.R. BEWICK

Everyone has mourned Ted Kennedy during these past several weeks. But Massachusetts and the South Shore also took note of the death of someone close to home, whose passing created headlines across the country.

From Time and Forbes magazines, to the Boston Globe, the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times, and the national wire services, the country has observed the death of Nancy Talbot, who with her husband Rudolph, founded The Talbots in Hingham over sixty years ago, in 1947. Known for classic clothing styles, the Talbots shaped the fashion sense of two generations.

Starting in a small shop next to what is now the Snug in Hingham Square, the Talbots moved to the beautiful old home which became the flagship store for a corporation that is fortunately still headquartered in Hingham. What was a handful of friends and families has grown to 11,000 employees in almost 600 retail stores across the United States. In spite of its size today, the Talbots' Hingham Square store concept, with its red door, wooden floors, traditional prints, and feeling, has been replicated in stores around the world.

Nancy, who passed away from complications of Alzheimers at age 89, on August 30, was a friend to many on the South Shore, and a "tough" but respected boss to others, who lived and enjoyed an active and full life with Rudy and her family.

When the Talbots decided to venture into mail order in 1948, their first black and white flyer of 3,000 was sent to a New Yorker subscription list. This opened a door to business beyond the store. Some 30 years later, Talbots was sending out 24 catalogs to a worldwide list of 70 million!

One of her employees in the early days, when Rudy and Nancy Talbot decided to launch the catalog, was Evelyn Bright, a widow with young children, and a friend of the Talbots, who had experience as a writer and editor. One day Nancy approached her with the idea of her writing copy for the catalog descriptions of the clothes, and she agreed.

"Ru would come by the house," Evelyn recalled, "with a big flat box with clothes for one page in the catalog. We would distribute them around my study. I was supposed to describe materials, and think of something to say. Nancy would like something light and witty. When I had typed up the descriptions on the typewriter, and these were finished, he would come by and take the box away, and bring another one."

"He was a sweet man. Every day he would come in and report how many items of clothing had been sold," she said. Evelyn Bright, now Evelyn Hitchcock, was then a one-woman copywriter for what was to become an international enterprise. " I did this for eight to ten years," she said. "It was great fun!"

Evelyn Hitchcock is today Chairman and CEO of another of Hingham's iconic enterprises, Hitchcock Shoes Inc., a nation-wide catalog and mail order business specializing in wide shoes, with headquarters, warehouse and retail facilities located on Beal Street.

She also recalled other Hingham friends of Nancy's who helped in the Talbots' early catalog days. "Skiffy Beveridge and Pen Carr were the order department," she said. "They would take calls over the phone, and fill the orders as they came in. Then they would walk around and make lists and drape clothes over the furniture in a central spot. Then the young Wright boys, the sons of Fran (who was Hingham's Uncle Sam for many years), and Fay Wright would come by after school, and pack the boxes and take them to the Post Office. ...That was how it worked."

"Talbots was the place where all of our daughters worked during the summer as well," Evelyn Hitchcock added. "It was a good place to find a summer job."

Ruth Potter, a close friend of the Talbots from the days they first moved to Hingham, also welcomed an opportunity to reminisce about Nancy: "We met them right after the war. Ru and Nan came on from Chicago. They rented a little house on Cottage Street, and Nancy immediately painted the living room navy blue. I was so impressed....She was very much of a rebel....free-thinking, a liberal, and a Democrat."

"Their daughter Janey fell in love with a young doctor when she was on a Grenfell mission. After their wedding reception they left for an around-the-world trip with backpacks on their back." Ruth has also kept in close touch with Jane and her family over the years.

"In Talbots," she said, "I think Nancy was the brains of the outfit. ... She was inspired by her older sister, who first got into the retail business with a women's clothing store in Chicago. ... Ginny Dyer's mother kept her books, and was their first employee at the little shop downtown. ... I think the store was an outlet for some of her creativity. Nan took a real interest in how it was laid out, and how clothes were displayed. I remember going with her to New York to review lines of clothing she would order...."

Tradition

Hingham had a tradition of cottage industries, and the Talbots' history adds to the tradition. Dottie James, a long-time Hingham resident, mentioned a time when Rudolph Talbot would take fabric to different individuals in Hingham, who would then make neckties for the men's line of Talbots' clothing. Ruth Potter also recalled: "I remember Louise Hurlburt, who had a small cotton plaid fabric. She used this to make watchstraps, ties, belts, and cummerbunds, and people around town would make them up. This was her idea." These plaid items became one of Talbots' popular lines of accessories.

"How would I remember Nan?" Ruth mused. "She was very active physically. She played tennis, and had wide interests in gardening, in decorating her house, and in the theater. ...She loved music and played the piano. The family had a Steinway, and they supported Channel 2. We went to New York to see plays. ... She really enjoyed life."

Ruth paged through old photo albums, full of black and white pictures from the 1940s, 50s and 60s, happy records of trips to Bermuda, Cape Cod and to the Caribbean with her husband John, and Rudy and Nancy Talbot. There in one photo they were joined by the Carrs, and Skiffy Beveridge, the early employees...in others there were the Wakemans, the Wrights... all familiar Hingham friends of earlier days.

Ruth fondly recalled a memorable beam-raising at the Talbot's new home in Hingham. "They built a house on Seal Cove Road," she said. "The living room stretched so far they needed a steel beam. We were all invited for a party like a barn-raising, even though it was a steel girder raising with a special crane. Rudy and Nan invited Armand Zildjian, who made cymbals, to the cocktail party, and he played his cymbals and drums. He was a neighbor and he would often play percussion at their cocktail parties."

(The Zildjian cymbals, another iconic South Shore brand, are found in symphony orchestras and contemporary bands all over the world.)

Nancy Talbot and her husband shaped our sense of style for two generations, and contributed this sense of quality to their store in Hingham Square. Talbots is still a center point of the Town of Hingham, with its strong classic New England beauty, its red door, the beautiful Christmas lights each year on the large evergreen, and continuing classic styles in the store. Many from the South Shore work at Talbots' stores today, or at the outlet on Rte. 3A, and many more have worked in the headquarters on Beal Street. Talbots continues to be Hingham's major employer, with about 900 employees at its headquarters campus.

As Chartis Tebbetts of Cohasset observes: "Nancy Talbot was a woman who created a business and ran it very well." And so we say thank you to Nancy Talbot, in the words Talbots has posted on its website: "With timeless respect for our timeless founder." And timeless neighbor. And timeless friend. We send our sympathy to their children and grandchildren, and say: Thank you Nancy, and thank you Rudy. Thank you Talbots.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week. This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call examines the salaries and other benefits received by the 40 state senators.

$3,203 PAY HIKE FOR LEGISLATORS - Legislators received a pay raise of $3,203 or 4.8 percent from $58,236 to $61,439 beginning in January 2009. The hike was required under the terms of a constitutional amendment approved by the voters in 1998. The new $61,439 salary represents an increase of $15,029 or 32 percent over the $46,410 salary that legislators received following approval of the constitutional amendment in 1998.

BONUS PAY FOR ALL 40 SENATORS - Over the past few years, the Legislature has increased the total number of legislators who receive annual bonus stipends of $7,500 to $35,000, beyond their annual base salary. All 40 senators receive bonus pay for their service in Democratic or Republican leadership positions, as committee chairs or vice chairs and as the ranking Republican on some committees. The senators include 35 Democrats and five GOP members. Supporters say that legislators in these important positions should be appropriately compensated for their many responsibilities and hard work. Critics say that the base salary is sufficient and is already automatically increased every two years.

PER DIEMS - Legislators are entitled to collect "per diems" to reimburse them for mileage, meals and lodging expenses for travel from their "place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of their official duties." The amount of the per diem varies based on the city or town in which a legislator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. These reimbursements are not taxable income and range from $10 per day for legislators who reside in the greater Boston area to $82 for Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 for those in Nantucket. Bay State senators in 2009 so far have received a total of $51,685 in per diems that range from $410 to $7,470 for individual members. The Legislature in 2000 doubled these per diems to the current levels. Supporters of the per diems say they are a reasonable reimbursement for legitimate expenses. Opponents say that the idea of paying a per diem is outrageous. They note that other state workers and most private workers are not paid additional money for commuting.

$7,200 FOR GENERAL EXPENSES - Each legislator receives a $7,200 annual general expense allowance. The Legislature in 2000 doubled this allowance from $3,600 to $7,200. This separate, flat rate expense allowance is not based on a lawmaker's geographical distance from the Statehouse. It is designed to pay for some of the costs of legislators' Statehouse and district offices and to pay for other expenses including contributions to local civic groups and the printing and mailing of newsletters. Legislators are issued a 1099 from the state and are required to report the $7,200 as income but are not required to submit an accounting of how they spend it.

PARKING SPACE - Lawmakers are entitled to a parking space inside the Statehouse garage or at the nearby McCormack State Office Building. Some of the value of the space is a tax-free benefit under federal and state tax guidelines that apply to all public and private employees - not just state legislators. The first $205 in monthly value of the space under 2009 federal and state regulations is tax-free. Any value of the space above those amounts is treated as income and legislators are required to pay taxes on it. The value of the parking spaces in 2009 was determined by the Bureau of State Buildings to be $394 per month. Based on that figure, legislators would be taxed on the excess $189 monthly by the Internal Revenue Service and the state.

HEALTH INSURANCE - Legislators are eligible to choose from nine health insurance plans offered by the state's Group Insurance Commission that manages the plans for 330,000 current and retired state and municipal workers, their families and dependents. Monthly premiums for family plans range from $971 to $1,786 while individual plans are available from $404 to $755. Lawmakers elected prior to June 30, 1993 pay 20 percent of the premium and the state pays 80 percent. Legislators elected to their first term after June 30, 2003 pay 25 percent while the state picks up only 75 percent. State and federal privacy regulations protect this information and it is not possible to obtain records about which plans individual legislators have purchased.

LIFE INSURANCE - Legislators who purchase a regular health insurance policy from the state are also required to buy the state's basic $5,000 life insurance policy. The policy costs $6.85 per month. Lawmakers elected after June 30, 2003 pay 25 percent of the premium and the state pays 75 percent. Legislators elected to their first term before June 30, 2003 pay 20 percent while the state picks up 80 percent. Legislators also have the option to buy additional life insurance with a value of up to eight times their salary. The entire premium for the optional insurance is paid by legislators.

LONG TERM DISABILITY AND HEALTH CARE SPENDING ACCOUNT - Legislators also have the option to open a Health Care Spending Account (HCSA) and to buy long term disability insurance. The HCSA allows legislators to pay for out-of-pocket health care expenses with pre-tax money and reduces their federal and state income taxes. The entire premium for both of these optional plans is paid by legislators.

DENTAL AND VISION INSURANCE - Legislators are eligible to choose one of two dental/vision insurance plans. Monthly premiums for family plans range from $79 to $111 while individual plans range from $25 to $36. Lawmakers pay 15 percent of the premium and the state pays 85 percent.

In Cohasset – An outrage in our schools

COMMENTARY

JODI TOLMAN

My children, and all of Cohasset's students – were done a tremendous civic disservice by those whom we expect to provide our children with compelling, meaningful and uplifting experiences.

According to our principals and superintendent – last week's presidential address to America's students:

• Was publicized by the White House too late to provide our schools enough time to air it. They simply didn't know about it, they said, despite the fact that it dominated numerous news cycles.

• Was ill timed, conflicting with other already planned, more important lunchtime activities.

• Contained troubling content and should have been viewed by students only in the company of their parents.

• Would have been made available to any student – all they had to do was ask.

In other words – the president's message of personal responsibility; hard work; never giving up; the importance of setting and achieving goals; learning from one's mistakes; discovering and nurturing one's talents so they may benefit our people and country; not allowing adversity to stand in the way of success; being willing to ask for help; taking care of yourself; and standing up for others is content too controversial to expose our kids to without parental supervision – much like sex or violence on TV.

And the President's words of curiosity to our children, wondering how it will be answered when history asks what was their contribution to the world – and encouragement, asserting that every person has value and strengths that can make the world a better place – and the clear statement of his expectation of great things from each of them – were words too disturbing to hear during their busy school day.

But – if our kids had only asked to see the address – they could have watched it in the library. However, not one student asked to see it, so…

My children, and all of Cohasset's students – were done a tremendous civic disservice by those whom we expect to provide our children with compelling, meaningful and uplifting experiences. Instead, they were robbed of an inspirational and historic opportunity – because our district leadership caved to pressure from extremists who were screaming that this was indoctrination – dangerous and insidious.

Let's call this what it is – yet another attempt to alienate this president from our people, and now our children; to ostracize him as the "other;" to de-legitimize and marginalize him; to suggest that he is a danger lurking in our midst; that he doesn't belong where he is; that he has no right and shouldn't be allowed to speak to our children and that our children must be protected from him.

This in an outrage. We in Cohasset, and Americans everywhere, should be moved to profound shame and concern, summoning us to loudly and clearly speak out and demand an end to this divisive fear and hate mongering.

We know what this is. We've seen it before. This is prelude to the repetition of the ugliest chapters in our nation's history. This is the real and awful spectacle from which we must ferociously protect our children.

Jodi M. Tolman lives at 3 Forest Circle.

DAR promotes Constitution Week

In Cohasset, the small park between the Post Office and South Shore Community Center was rededicated as Constitution Park in 1987 during the Bicentennial of the Constitution.

The national celebration of Constitution Week began Thursday, Sept. 17. The week-long commemoration of America's most important document is one of the country's least known official observances. The Constitution stands as a testament to the tenacity of Americans throughout history to maintain their liberties and freedom, and to ensure those unalienable rights to every American.

The Daughters of the American Revolution started the tradition of celebrating the Constitution many years ago. In 1955, the Daughters petitioned Congress to set aside Sept. 17 through 23 annually to be dedicated for the observance of Constitution Week. The resolution was later adopted by the U.S. Congress and signed into Public Law #915 on Aug. 2, 1956, by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. The aims of the celebration are to (1) emphasize citizens' responsibilities for protecting and defending the Constitution, preserving it for posterity; (2) inform the people that the Constitution is the basis for America's heritage and the foundation for one's way of life; and (3) encourage the study of the historical events that led to the framing of the Constitution in September 1787.

The United States of America functions as a Republic under the Constitution, which is the oldest document still in active use that outlines the self-government of a people. This idea that men had the inalienable right as individuals to be free and live their lives under their own governance was the impetus of the American Revolution. Today, the Constitution stands as an icon of freedom for people around the world.

"Constitution Week is the perfect opportunity to read and study this great document, which is the safeguard of our American liberties," said DAR President General Linda Gist Calvin. "We encourage all citizens across the country to take time this week to reflect on our heritage of freedom."

DAR has served America for 119 years as its foremost cheerleader. In 1928, the Daughters began work on a building as a memorial to the Constitution. John Russell Pope, architect of the Jefferson Memorial, was commissioned to design the performing arts center, known as DAR Constitution Hall. Today, DAR Constitution Hall is the only structure erected in tribute to the Constitution of the United States of America.

In Cohasset, the small park between the Post Office and South Shore Community Center was rededicated as Constitution Park in 1987 during the Bicentennial of the Constitution. It was the former site of a stable owned by Caleb Tilden.

Three seasonal flu clinics offered

Clinics are free of charge and open to Cohasset residents. If Medicare covers you, bring your card.

The Cohasset Health Department will begin its seasonal flu campaign with three clinics this year.

• The first clinic will be on Tuesday, Sept. 22 from 10 a.m. to noon at Town Hall.

• The second clinic will be on Tuesday, Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to noon at Town Hall.

These clinics are for seniors (65 or older) and high-risk adults (those over 21 with a chronic health condition).

• From 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Oct. 24, there will be a town-wide seasonal flu clinic for any resident 9 years of age or older.

Clinics are free of charge and open to Cohasset residents. If Medicare covers you, bring your card.

Stay tuned for further updates and news about availability of the H1N1 vaccine.

Anyone with questions should call Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210. People are encouraged to get a seasonal flu shot early this year.

Rep. Bradley to host office hours

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, will host district office hours from 6 to 7 p.m., on Monday, Sept. 21, at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. Enter through the Route 3A side entrance of the building into his district office.

Those who are unable to attend scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, can call 617-722-2520 to schedule an appointment.

Police had a busy summer

In July and August, police issued a total of 374 parking tickets.

In July, Cohasset Police Department had 10 arrests, five for Person Under 21 possessing Alcohol, two for Receiving a Stolen Motor Vehicle, one for Breaking and Entering, one for Assault and Battery, and one for an Outstanding Warrant, Police Chief James Hussey said.

In August, there were eight arrests, three for Assault and Battery, one for Possession of a Class D Substance, one for Disorderly Conduct, one for an Outstanding Warrant and two for Protective Custody.

During the month of July, the Police Department investigated 15 Motor Vehicle Accidents, two of which resulted in personal injury. There were 209 Motor Vehicle Citations issued totaling $3,265 in fines. Additionally, there were 184 parking tickets issued totaling $5,500 in fines.

During the month of August the Police Department investigated 22 Motor Vehicle Accidents, one of which resulted in personal injury. There were 244 Motor Vehicle Citations issued totaling $3,455 in fines. Additionally, there were 190 parking tickets totaling $5,825 in fines.

Also in July the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 1,109 calls for police services, and of those 249 were Emergency 911 calls.

In August the Emergency Dispatch Center received a total of 1,058 calls for police services, and of those 209 were Emergency 911 calls.

In the month of July, there were two reports of Breaking and Entering, both involving Motor Vehicles. In addition, there were 14 Criminal Complaints issued for the month.

In August, there were four reports of Breaking and Entering, three involving businesses, and one involving a motor vehicle. In addition, there were 15 Criminal Complaints issued for the month.

Parking problem

Government Island 'tow zone' back on the table

"It can be a deterrent, when people see the word tow, they are less likely to park there illegally."
— Chief James Hussey

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Most of the time it is not a difficult task to find a parking space in Cohasset.

However, there are several "hot spots," so to speak, that the town, Selectmen and police felt needed to be re-vamped as far as parking signage.

Back for the second time, the Board of Selectmen reviewed parking signage recommendations made by the police department.

One of those hot spots for parking mostly during the summer months is Government Island.

Police Chief James Hussey proposed placing six new signs in the upper Government Island lot that reads, "Parking by permit or for lightkeeper hall functions only – Tow zone."

The tow zone is new language for parking signs in Cohasset and it did not sit well with Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

"By no means is it our priority (to tow cars), but we want to be have the ability," Hussey said. "It can be a deterrent, when people see the word tow, they are less likely to park there illegally."

At a previous meeting in August, Dormitzer adamantly opposed the tow zone message and his stance had not changed.

"I don't understand the thinking there…why would we post it in a parking lot?" Dormitzer said, adding with the exception of two signs, there is currently no signage in the Government Island parking lots. "You have to reserve the most egregious penalty for the most egregious violation…I just don't agree with this thing, sorry."

Dormitzer offered several other suggestions to alleviate the problem: increased signage indicating permit only parking, increased notice of a function at Bancroft Hall.

"My problem is there are no signs at all. My own view is to put (more) signs up rather than take the draconian view of this," Dormitzer said.

The other Selectmen did not have the same strong feelings about "tow zone" as Dormitzer. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said he did not have a problem with warning non-permit holders of the possibility they could be towed.

Vice chair Karen Quigley said she has often had a problem finding a parking space at Government Island. "It's aggravating to say the least," she said, adding she sympathizes with the person who has rented the hall and has guests who can't park.

A recent incident on this past Fourth of July weekend caused the police to look closely at Government Island. A father-of-the-bride having his daughter's reception at the Lightkeepers wanted 40 cars towed to make room for wedding guests.

"I've never seen it like that the 15 years (I've been on the police force)…it was the perfect storm," said Lieutenant Bill Quigley.

Selectmen also discussed clearing up some conflicting signage in the village near Tedeschi's. Currently, there are five or six parking spaces marked for 15-minute parking at one end and 30-minute parking on the other.

"The language obviously is confusing. All we are looking for is clarity," Hussey said. The recommendation proposed clearly establishing four 15-minute spaces for those doing quick errands in the village.

Dormitzer said he did not see a need for four spaces; two was enough.

"There is not that kind of turnover in the village," Dormitzer said.

The final discussion centered on restoring signage on the ocean side of Border Street from the Mill Bridge to Parker Avenue indicating "no parking." Residents in the area requested the signage be restored. Temporary signs had been placed in the area.

Dormitzer was concerned cars would then park on the residential side of the street, which might become a nuisance for residents.

With the multiple threads of discussion, the Selectmen delayed their vote until their next meeting when they can all be clear what recommendations is on the table. Chief Hussey and Lieutenant Quigley were asked to create a concise version of their recommendations and the Selectmen would take their vote next week.

Little Harbor sewer information session

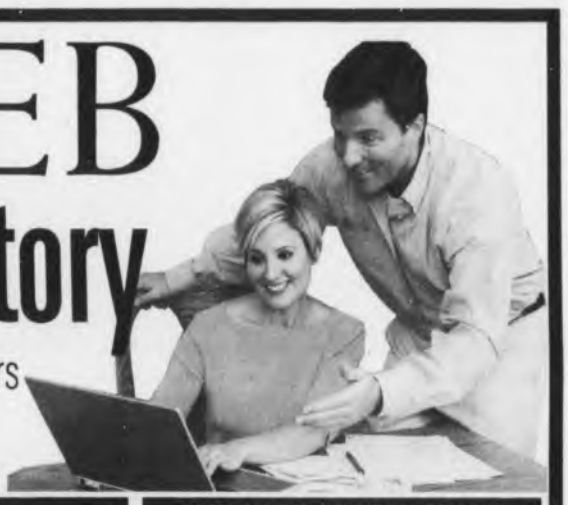
The Cohasset Sewer Commission will hold a public hearing at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium on Saturday, Sept. 26 at 10a.m. to noon. The hearing will benefit the future sewer users in the newly constructed Little Harbor Sewer Districts. A brief project summary will be provided by the Sewer Commission followed by a question and answer period.

In addition, there will be representatives from the Water Commission; Town of Cohasset licensed drain layers and the Town selected pump supplier, Environment One Corporation, in attendance to answer any questions you may have. We hope all future users are able to attend this local forum.

Walk-in legal clinic

Do you have a legal question or are you confused about a legal issue? The Bar Association of Norfolk County is sponsoring free evening legal clinics as a public service to the community. A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for a one-on-one consultation with you to discuss your legal questions. All consultations are strictly confidential. The free evening legal clinics will be held at 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesday evenings at the following courts at Quincy District Court

The next clinic is Oct. 6.For further information contact Adrienne C. Clarke, Bar Association of Norfolk County 617-471-9693.



Town gets Green Communities grant

The Town of Cohasset has been awarded a $25,000 technical assistance grant to take steps toward being part of the state's Green Communities Program. The grant provides a consultant to get the town on track to completing the Green Community application.

Not much is known about how the grant will play out. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he is awaiting further guidelines from the state on how to proceed.

High School Sophomore Goes From Size 12 To Size 4 In Jeans!

BEFORE

When I was younger I was always the quiet and shy one. I would call myself as being the stereotypical nerd with the braces and huge glasses and being a little on the heavy side. Being insecure with myself and my body played a big role on how I acted around others.

I never even thought of going to gyms before I joined Get In Shape For Women. I would feel intimidated, embarrassed and I would not know how to use anything.

I knew getting healthy and losing weight was definitely something that I wanted to do. Going around town I noticed Get In Shape For Women. I had never heard of them and went online to check it out and it seemed like lots of other people have gotten great results from it. After the first week I felt like I belonged.

As time progressed I could see myself being more confident and smiling a lot more. Every time I walk in there they always know how to put a smile on my face. I never thought I would live to see myself walking into a gym and smiling and laughing and having as much fun as I do at Get In Shape.

Since July, I went from 155 pounds to 121 pounds. I feel super great. I went from a size 12 to a size 4 in jeans! I used to hate trying things on at stores because things would never fit me right but now I "love" trying things on and looking in the mirror.

I would like to take the time to thank Get In Shape for all they have done for me and are still doing for me. They have really brought out a different side of me that I never thought I would see and has changed me so dramatically. Now that I have the skills, I can go work out on my own.

Cohasset Housing Trust could get funding

Clears hurdle with CPC

Tuesday, Jim Hamilton, chair of the Housing Trust, presented the Trust's application for funding to the Community Preservation Committee (CPC).

In a 4-3 vote, the CPC approved the transfer of $50,000 to the Trust, which has been operating without funds, in spite of the fact that the formation of the Trust was approved as a bylaw at the November 2008 Town Meeting.

Over a year ago, the CPC granted $20,000 to the Housing Trust for engineering and perc tests on town property off James Lane. It was later determined from Health Department records that the property had perked, so the funds have been held in the CPC account. Together with the $50,000 granted for this year, the $20,000 can still be used for engineering fees, unless the use of the funds differs from the request. If so, the Housing Trust must reapply for those funds, and upon approval from the CPC, have November Town Meeting vote the use of those funds.

In his presentation to the CPC, Hamilton made the point that the reason why Housing Trusts are formed is to take advantage of real estate opportunities or site studies funding which need only being approved by the Board of Selectmen. The alternatives is the time-consuming route of CPC approval, then reviews by the Advisory Committee and the Board of Selectmen, and finally waiting for the next town meeting for voter approval.

The Housing Trust was formed after the November 2008 Special Town Meeting. Earlier, the selectmen-appointed Cohasset Housing Partnership had requested a more flexible way to deal with Cohasset's percentage of affordable housing inventory, which ranks low in the state. Chapter 40B sets the goal of 10 percent of a municipality's housing stock be affordable by state standards. Cohasset has less than 3 percent affordable housing.

Hingham and Hanover have formed Housing Trusts and transferred the percentage of CPC funding devoted to affordable housing to their Trusts, leaving their CPCs to concentrate on open space and historical preservation.

During the discussions, Hamilton there were several opportunities for affordable housing in the works, but the Trust had yet to meet after this summer.

The CPC asked that the wording in the bylaw be changed to include that all Trust requests for funds for selectmen's approval conform to their application, which specified selectmen must approve the spending of funds. Though they did not delay their vote, the CPC made it clear that next year's application for funds would only be approved if the language of the bylaw was changed. Hamilton also agreed in principle that the Housing Trust would keep the CPC informed as to any fund requests brought forward to selectmen.

Hamilton had reported to the selectmen this spring that the town had reached 10 percent affordability because Avalon Bay's 200 rental units all count towards the town's affordable housing stock. It was later learned that the final paperwork required by the Department of Housing and Community Development hadn't been submitted. Avalon Bay has yet to apply for a building permit.

Several other projects, one at 25 Ripley Road and the other at 821 Jerusalem Road, have not added any affordable housing due to the permit not being granted by the ZBA for the former property and litigation for the latter.

Old Colony Square, a mixed residential and business project presently under construction, will add two affordable units to the 76 affordable units at 60 Elm Street.

The Housing Trust includes, Hamilton; Tom Callahan, a lawyer; Clark Brewer, architect; Margy Charles, real estate; Steve Lucitt, banker; Taffy Nothnagle, formerly of the Housing Authority,; Karen Quigley, selectman liaison; ; and Judi Barrett, Cohasset independent consultant and expert on Massachusetts affordable housing and Department of Housing and Community Development guidelines as they pertain to 40B.

Joseph's Hardware closes Hingham store

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Joseph's Hardware has left Hingham Square.

Over the past week, customers could be seen driving slowly past the front doors of the building in the Sherwin Williams plaza off South Street. They strained their eyes to read the note taped to the front door. Others got out and read the note. The front doors were also covered with brown paper.

The note said the Hingham store was closing due to family illness and asked customers to visit Joseph's other locations.

Baron Joseph of Joseph's Hardware said in a telephone interview that the decision to close was a result of his wife's illness. His wife, Jenny, was recently diagnosed with PLS (Primary Lateral Sclerosis), a rare and progressive neuromuscular disease.

Joseph said his wife's symptoms surfaced about six months ago; she was diagnosed at the Curt & Shonda Schilling ALS Clinic at the Lahey Clinic in Burlington. Joseph said Jenny's condition has to be monitored closely.

Therefore the couple, who are partners in the family business, reached what Joseph described as a difficult decision to close their Hingham location. They do not own the Hingham building.

"We took some time off in August and looked at our various locations," he said. Joseph said Hingham was the easiest location to close. Joseph also has stores in Cohasset, Norwell, Marshfield and Plymouth.

Although Joseph said the decision to close in Hingham was made over the past week, longtime Hingham store manager Kevin Jenkins, a Hingham resident, was moved over to manager of the Norwell store on Route 123 about a month ago. "Kevin and his family mean a lot to us," Joseph said.

Joseph explained that doctors have said the stress element in Jenny's life has to be reduced. He said, for example, that Jenny would not be able to drive.

Joseph did not cite the economy as a factor but did say that having the parking lot redone in July was a difficult time for the business. The parking lot that also serves Sherwin Williams and the other shops was completely dug up, rebuilt and repaved in July.

Joseph's Hardware closed abruptly last week in Hingham Square, a move that surprised local customers.

Joseph obtained a building permit to expand at his Cohasset location in September 2007. The Planning Board asked him to come to meetings approximately every 6 months since the approval to update the Board on the status of his project.

Joseph said he would miss Hingham. "The Hingham people have been great to us," he said.

Judy Sneath, director of the Hingham Downtown Association, whose membership includes businesses and shops, said a downtown hardware store is an integral resource for the Hingham community.

"We all rely on the convenience and support provided by our local merchants, and hope that this space will soon be occupied again by a service-minded business (preferably a hardware store!)," she said. "With business up in most downtown shops, a thriving restaurant scene, and a lovely streetscape, this prime downtown location should be desirable to any one targeting the Hingham and South Shore market."

Joseph opened in Hingham after Walsh & Packard closed in the fall of 2005. Landlord Walter Lindell had been looking for hardware stores to replace W&P.

At the time Aubuchon Hardware was interested in the site but Lindell thought Joseph's would be more "hands on."

Reached by telephone Wednesday about Joseph's moving out of the Hingham location, Lindell said he would decline to comment at this time.

Joseph obtained a building permit to expand at his Cohasset location in September 2007. The Planning Board asked him to come to meetings approximately every 6 months since the approval to update the Board on the status of his project. At the last update on April 22, 2009, he indicated that – now that the foundation hole was dug – he was looking for a contractor to pour the foundation. He told the Board that he anticipated completion in the fall.

Last year, Joseph moved his Norwell store from 695 Main St., to 711 Main St., the former location of New Traditions Fine Furniture.

Piano lessons to resume

Priscilla D. Daniels, professional pianist and teacher of pianoforte, will resume her lesson-schedule at her Beach Street home in Cohasset. Her personalized instruction has attracted students who have had careers in music, while others play just for pleasure.

Daniels is a magna cum laude graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. She is a member of Alpha Chi Omega, national sorority, and Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary professional society. She has taught in Swampscott, Lincoln, Norwood, and currently in Cohasset.

As part of each lesson she incorporates music theory, harmony, rhythm study and expression. She encourages her students to improvise and compose, and strives to communicate a love and appreciation for the fine arts through the medium of the piano.

Skipper boys nab first win

Boys' Soccer

The Cohasset boys soccer team broke into the win column on Wednesday with a 1-0 home win over East Bridgewater at Milliken Field.

Andrew Littauer scored with 20 minutes left to play to help the Skippers to their first victory after an 0-3 start.

"Andrew hit a big header off a pass from Jonah Adkins for the goal," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "Those were the first points for both of them this season."

Willis said his team has been competitive in all four games this season, with the exception of the first half of their game against Norwell, a 3-0 loss.

All three goals came in the first half.

The other two losses were both 2-1 losses to Harwich and Scituate.

"We had a horrible half against Norwell," Willis said. "It was ugly. The rest of the game we played well. We were very competitive."

In the E.B. win, Willis liked what he saw.

"Today we played pretty well the whole game," he said. "Andrew's goal was just a perfect shot. It was beautiful. Hopefully we can build on that. We've played decent defense, but we haven't found the offense to go with it. We're only scoring one a game."

Willis feels the offense will come.

"We're playing really well until we get inside 20, 25 yards," he said. "Then the goal

A new neighborhood rivalry

Cohasset faces Hingham for the first time

By William Wassersug

Football

For years, Hingham and Cohasset football have been friendly neighbors, scrimmaging in the fall, but never taking it to the next level.

That changes today when the teams will meet at Hingham High School at 4 p.m.

"We've never played them," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "For as long as any of the coaches have been here we haven't played. We've scrimmaged in the preseason. We didn't this year because we are playing."

Both teams are coming off big wins.

Cohasset routed Quincy 39-0, and Hingham downed New York's Christ the King High School 42-15, without starting quarterback Jake Quinn, who missed most of the game taking ACT tests that had been scheduled long before the game was.

Junior Harry Rein led Hingham instead, running for 49 yards and a pair of touchdowns while booting six extra points.

Heading into the game, Afanasiw knows there's a challenge ahead.

"They can put up a lot of points," he said. "They have all their skill players back. Jake Quinn is a very fast, mobile quarterback. He's got a good head on his shoulders. They also have three or four solid running backs who all have scoring potential running behind a big, physical line. It's going to be a daunting task."

Among those backs are Anthony Cappella, who has lots of speed and big back Robert Maguire.

Turf Field Opens with Much Anticipation

The new turf field at the Clark Chatterton Athletic complex will officially be opened on Friday night September 25 at 6:30 before the High School Football game.

Come join town and school officials along with members of the Cohasset Sports Partnership, the Cohasset Booster groups and student athletes young and old as the field is officially opened with a ribbon cutting.

Arrive early to see the refinished track and the new field.

Cross Country

After two meets, the boys team is 1-1, and the girls are 0-2, but are running very well.

"The girls lost to Braintree last week, but I thought they should have won," Mingels said. "There were some course issues. It's nothing new. I was leading a race once and took a wrong turn."

Cohasset has seven runners on the girls team, including four returners.

Senior captain Tatyana Nakashima, sophomores Chrissy Secatore and Anya Gruber join fellow sophomore Lissette Santiago, who is the team's No.1 runner.

"Lissette runs very well for a sophomore," Mingels said. "She goes out aggressively. She's a gamer. She has a great mentality in a race. She's a fierce competitor."

Newcomers Ellie Tedeschi, Stephanie Brierley and Sarah Russell add some depth.

"The addition of the sophomore girls really helps us," Mingels said. "Ellie and Stephanie run together with

Field Hockey

With two games under the belt, Cohasset is 2-0 and has looked strong.

Cohasset won their opener 3-1 over Carver, and followed with a 7-0 victory over Hull on Wednesday at home.

In the Hull game, Olivia Murphy had two goals. Elise Quebec, Izzy Franklin, Caitlin DeAngelis, Hilary Gaumer and Kelsey Erler all chipped in goals.

Gaumer added two assists and Erler, DeAngelis and Natalie Dignam both added assists.

Coach Laura Giuliano is pleased with her team.

"The 2009 Cohasset Field Hockey team is guided by the outstanding leadership of senior captains Taryn Donohue, Hilary Gaumer and Lucy Noble," she said. "The team shows promise for this season lead by a strong core of returning varsity players infused by talented players from last season's undefeated J.V. squad. The strength of the team originates from the solid play of midfielder's Izzy Franklin, Kelsey Erler and Sage Stebbins who con-

Skippers make a statement

Team dominates Quincy

On a rain soaked, wind swept night, the Cohasset Skippers traveled to Veterans Memorial Stadium to take on the Quincy Presidents in the first gridiron contest of the year. The weather conditions didn't hamper the action as the artificial turf playing surface allowed the teams to compete despite monsoon like conditions.

The first half belonged to Skippers senior running back, Dana Valentine who traveled to the end zone three times in the half.

Offensively, Valentine tallied 148 yards on 17 carries and three touchdownss.

Besides Valentine, the Skippers had other offensive weapons.

Junior quarterback Jeff Cavanaro had 13 yards on three carries while completing four passes in the driving rain for 47 yards, one for a touchdown to Senior John Maher from the 25-yard line.

Junior Thomas Flibotte also looked strong running the ball and blocking for Valentine.

Senior lineman Will Lynner was instrumental in making holes for the powerful Skipper rushing attack.

Senior, Brendan Doonan had a great game kicking the ball. He was 5-for-5 in PATs. His strong leg on kickoffs gave the defense great field position to work with including two touchbacks on kickoffs.

Defensively Doonan, Maher and Junior Robert Jones controlled the secondary with many deflections and strong pass coverage.

The final offense of the game came from sophomore Kyrel Jaundoo who scored a defensive touchdown when he scooped a fumble and ran it back 20 yards. Defensively Junior Jake Kissick recorded two sacks and senior Jake Wheelwright had an interception.

Senior, Graham Stevenson recorded a safety on Quincy's second play from scrimmage that set the defensive tone all night. The entire defense applied tremendous pressure on the Quincy quarterback all night long.

Coach Pete Afanasiw commented. "A very big test awaits the Skippers Friday afternoon when they will take on the extremely talented Hingham Harbormen at 4pm in Hingham," he said.

While it may be daunting, Cohasset has the weapons to get the job done.

"I think we may have a little more speed on the line," Afanasiw said. "We hope to take advantage of that. Defensively we want to contain their weapons. We'll have to be like Belichick. Bend, but don't break. Offensively we want to run a balanced offense, get some long drives and keep their offense off the field."

To do that, the Skippers may have to dig deep into their book.

After Dana Valentine dominated last week, Afanasiw expects Hingham to devote plenty of energy to shutting him down.

"I think in a logical way that the defensive scheme will be to shut down Valentine," he said. "They're going to make someone else beat them. If we're going to have success, someone else needs to step up. (Jeff) Cavanaro, (Tom) Flibotte, our receivers, (John) Maher, (Dean) Driscoll. They need to have big games."

Afanasiw said this game could be decided by who adjusts best to the flow of the game.

"We're going to do what it takes," he said. "If something isn't working we won't stick to one thing. If they take away Valentine we'll do something else. It's going to be a good game. These are both quality football teams. They probably have the edge in experience. They also have coach (Paul) Killinger and an incredible coaching staff. Their kids are well schooled and knowledgeable.."

Despite the team's big score last week, Afanasiw said the Skippers know how quickly things could change, and that's without using Hingham's win as motivation.

"In football, unlike most other sports, you have to put the past behind you," he said. "If you make a bad play you can't look back. What you did in the game Friday night won't help you this Friday."

Playing the Harbormen, however, is motivation in itself.

"It is a pretty big game," Afanasiw said. "If the kids play well, even if they don't win, it can be a big boost to their confidence. We have the meat of the order coming up over the next several weeks. The kids really want to do well."

As for last week's game, Afanasiw was pleased.

"Looking at the game I liked our consistency," he said. "We executed well. Sure, there were a few mistakes and things we need to fine-tune, but considering it was our first game and the weather (heavy rain) it was good. There was a good feeling watching it on film."

Excitement abounds early, at least on TV

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Well, football season is here, the Red Sox are in another race for the playoffs and high school sports are just about in full swing.

This is a good thing, except for the fact that I'm never home anymore or glued to the TV.

OK, not a good thing for my family, but good for me.

I love the excitement of a good game, especially when they're games like Monday night's Patriots miracle comeback over the Bills, or the University of Miami's last-second win over Florida State last week.

I can't say I've had that feeling of excitement on the high school grid yet.

The two games I've been to have had a combined score of 74-15.

The good part of that is that both teams I was cheering on were winners.

The two other teams I cover split, with one of them winning 39-0 while the other, Hanover, dropped a tight 12-0 decision against a good Abington team.

Of course, the two big wins by Cohasset and Hingham should add up to a great game today.

Still, when I hit the volleyball court Monday night, I wasn't expecting a match that kept me on the edge of my seat.

Hanover lost 3-2 to North Quincy, but I have to admit the emotion and energy in that gym was infectious.

North Quincy came in with a huge group of players and fans, who were pretty loud.

Loud enough that players on the floor had some trouble hearing each other calling plays and sets.

It was actually both sides on that front, but again, there was that excitement and a laugh or two when visitors tried a Tomahawk chop.

Hanover ignored it, but it reminded me of the days when I used to go to Miami/Florida State games at the Orange Bowl and Hurricanes fans would do that to annoy FSU fans, who did the chop to cheer their team at home.

Funny thing is, even with the Patriots and Canes coming to the final seconds, I never expected a volleyball game to keep me on the edge of my seat.

It was even more fun because my older daughter, who wants to start playing sports, or maybe writing about them, was getting equally into the game, cheering on Hanover, even though she goes to Marshfield.

All the while I was trying to point out some of the little things that were happening, like watching those flutter serves that look like a knuckleball on steroids or the drop serves that some of the players were hitting.

In the end, I was reminded of why these young ladies play, and impressed by their positive attitudeafter the game.

They were all telling themselves to be proud and stay positive.

I thought about that composure even more last night when I heard about Kanye West ruining Taylor Swift's acceptance speech for an MTV Video Award Sunday night.

There isn't much in common with these two events, other than the fact that it involved high school aged girls and how they were all able to stay composed when things didn't go quite as planned.

For the record, Kanye really looked like a jerk, I am not a fan of his music, and the Hanover girls, well, they have me ready to come back and watch some more.

Good job ladies.

And let's not forget my favorite new competition – the Boston Bruins Happy Gilmore drive competition.

This was a charity tournament by the Bruins recently based on one of the funniest sports movies ever, (yes I said it, and I'll add Major League to that list) starring Adam Sandler as a hockey player wanna be who has a knack for hitting golf balls a long way with his own special swing.

Check the video on the Boston Bruins website. It is hilarious.

Just sayin'.

Cohasset's Wakeman to compete in 12 Metre World Championships

NEWPORT, R.I.– The countdown clock has just about run out as only a week remains until the start of one of the most anticipated yacht racing events of the year – the 2009 12 Metre World Championships. What is expected to be the largest gathering of these vintage yachts in the 26 years since Newport last hosted the America's Cup (in 1983) is scheduled for September 22-27, and the accompanying reunion of sailing personalities has drawn a great deal of interest and speculation. This will be a homecoming for these sailing legends, many of whom rose to prominence in the sport while racing "Twelves" on Narragansett Bay.

The 2009 Worlds are the centerpiece of the Golden Year of Racing, a year-long 50th anniversary celebration of the 12 Metre's debut in the America's Cup, in 1958, which ultimately saw Columbia ~ US 16 defeat the British challenger, Sceptre ~ K17. Five America's Cup winning boats (including Columbia), a winning skipper, and several boats that were in the Defender competition for the Cup will race. International sailors, including the skipper and crew from France's Challenge 12, and crews from Norway (racing on Gleam), Switzerland (racing Onawa) and the United Kingdom (racing on USA) will up the ante in what should be a fierce competition.

In the Grand Prix Division, Kiwi Magic ~ KZ 7 will be skippered by 1992 America's Cup winner Bill Koch (Osterville, Mass./Palm Beach, Fla.), while among the six Twelves sailing in the Modern Division are three (Courageous ~ US 26, Freedom ~ US 30 and Intrepid ~ US 22) who collectively have won the Cup five times. Cup winners Columbia ~ US 16 and Weatherly ~ US 17 will sail in the five-boat Traditional Division and Onawa ~ US 6, the oldest yacht in the American fleet, will compete in the Vintage Division which will have three yachts racing. The Twelves will be docked at Bowen's Wharf and Bannister's Warf in historic downtown Newport.

Of particular interest to sailing afficionados will be the 12 Metre Legends Forums, sponsored by North Sails, held after racing in the 12 Metre Worlds Village at Bowen's Wharf on September 23, 24 and25.

Moderators Tom Whidden (Essex, Conn.) and regatta co-chairs Gary Jobson (Annapolis, Md.) and Jan Slee (Newport, R.I.) will interview the slate of 30+ participants who are skippers, tacticians, crew and yacht designers. They include Gianfranco Alberini (ITA), Richard du Moulin (Larchmont, N.Y.), Halsey Herreshoff (Bristol, R.I.), Ted Hood (Portsmouth, R.I.) , Luigi Lang (ITA), Andy MacGowan (Middletown, R.I.), Lowell North (San Diego, Calif.), Charles Dana, Bill Langan, David Pedrick and David Ray (all Newport, R.I.), Jack Sutphen (San Diego, Calif.) and Sam Wakeman (Cohasset, Mass.). The North Sails Legends Forum Finale will take place before the awards presentation on Sunday, September 27, at New York Yacht Club's Harbour Court.

Gary Jobson will narrate and produce a one-hour film for ESPN Classic on the history of the 12 Metres and the 2009 Worlds. Bill Koch is the Executive Producer for the film which will feature racing footage shot during the Worlds and interviews with the Legends. It is set to air Saturday, November 7, at 1p.m. on ESPN Classic and will be available in the future on DVD.

Tough outing for Lady Skippers

Girls soccer stopped by Norwell

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

Although it had been almost a year, the Norwell girls soccer team certainly didn't forget that it was the Cohasset girls who ended Norwell's magical postseason run. Monday in Cohasset, the Lady Clippers exacted a bit of revenge and remained unbeaten and unscored upon this season. The Norwell girls improved to 2-0 with the 3-0 victory.

"I'm very pleased," Head Coach Bruce Emerson said. "They're going to be the best team in our league - them and East Bridgewater. So to start off with the two best teams in the league, that's a real test."

It didn't take long for the Norwell girls to score. Before some of their parents even arrived at the field, the Lady Clippers took a 1-0 lead in the first minute when Krista Prouty put home a pass from Kara O'Connell. Norwell kept the pressure on. The girls kept attacking the net. They had a goal disallowed and a shot on goal before scoring their second goal in the 17th minute.

O'Connell took a corner and dropped the ball right into the box. Sophomore Bridget Conway came in and one-timed a shot past Cohasset keeper Charlotte Malone. Flustered by the solid play by Norwell's back four of Laura Ferzoco, Samantha Casey, Caitlin Collins, and O'Connell, the Lady Skippers weren't able to get a shot off until the 25th minute and didn't get a shot on target until the 27th minute.

The shot on goal came from Christine Coner, a line drive right at Norwell keeper Brooke Alman. The Lady Skippers nearly got one back in the 34th minute off a set piece from the left wing. Tori Lehr chipped the ball to the far side of the box where Michaela Brophy flicked it to Katie Brennan. Brennan ripped a shot on goal, but Alman came out of nowhere to make a stunning kick save.

Ten minutes later, the Norwell girls made it a 3-0 game on a great shot by Alli DeBenedictis. Teammate Krista Prouty played the ball wide to DeBenedictis, and when she caught up to the ball and maintained control, she stopped a put a shot on net. The well-hit ball made a bee line and banked off the inside of the far post and sharply hit the ground directly behind the goal line.

The Lady Clippers (2-0 overall, 2-0 South Shore League heading into Wednesday's game against Mashpee) swapped keepers to start the second half with Conway taking over for Alman. Cohasset picked up its game a bit, and in the 48th minute hit the side of the net from the top of the box. Norwell managed to spread the field in the latter stages of the second half and picked up a handful of shots on goal, one from Allison Weiler (60th), two from DeBenedictis (65th, 71st), and one each from Laura Dargon (74th) and Ferzoco (78th). In the final 90 seconds of the contest, Alman, who came back into the game to play in goal in the 62nd minute, made a save, and Caitlin Collins cleared a ball to perserve the save. Collins prevented Coner, who was on a 3-on-2 breakaway, from getting inside, and booted the ball away.

"I think we handled them very well," Emerson said. "We were able to control them. I'm really happy."

Norwell started its season with a 5-0 win last week over East Bridgewater. Prouty scored three goals, and DeBenedictis and Darci Vierra each scored one.

Cohasset fell to 1-1 with Monday's loss.

"I don't think they're any better than us or that we're any better than them," Cohasset Head Coach Deb Beal said. "I hate to face them this early in the season. Do we have work to do? Absolutely. Are we going to figure it out? We absolutely are."

tinuously push the ball up the field."

"Forwards Olivia Murphy, Natalie Dignam and Caitlin DeAngelis possess a propensity for scoring while on the other end of the field," Giuliano said. Then defensive players Sarah Mavilia, Lucy Noble and Emily Toomey excel at protecting the goal.

For Giuliano, a teacher at Cohasset, who played at Cohasset and then Dartmouth College, coaching this team has been a great experience.

"I really enjoy the game," she said. "These Cohasset girls are marvelous. It's a joy coaching them. For a small school they are fierce competitors, and they're good athletes. Most of these girls play two or three sports. It really is exciting to coach them."

Cross country running well

Chrissy. They run well together. Then we have Tatyana and Anya who are both very steady performers. Anya keeps getting stronger and stronger and Sarah has a lot of potential. She'll do well if she sticks with it."

On the boys side, the team is doing well, checking in at 1-1. Their loss was in a tiebreaker to a talented Norwell team.

"The boys team is has 16 or 17 kids," Mingels said. "We're very strong this year."

Senior captain Dave Allen leads the boys team, with senior captain T.J. Stokes right with him.

"They're both very good," Mingels said of his captains. "It's more a 1A, 1B kind of thing."

Junior, Garrett Canney is a newcomer to the sport who has looked solid.

"Garrett had never run cross country before," Mingels said. "He has a lot of natural ability. He should get stronger and stronger through the year."

Senior, Jackson Dean is another first-year cross country athlete.

"Jackson is very steady, very strong," Mingels said.

Senior Connor Murphy and Kenton Gilmartin are also expected to contribute.

With the top five runners on a team scoring points, and the top seven able to affect the outcome, Mingels likes the depth, and the fact that in cross country, everyone gets to compete.

"The beauty of cross country is that everybody runs," he said. "And on any given day, anyone can matter with the score. You never know when a kid gets stronger and maybe they go from from the middle to sixth or seventh. That can change a meet. Our last one came down to the sixth kids."

seems to get into everyone's heads. When you're not scoring it becomes a bigger deal and people panic. We shoot a lot of balls over the net or wide. We haven't had many constructive touches inside 18."

Part of that, Willis concedes is competition.

"We've played good teams who defend well," he said. "And we have played against some good goalies."

A good goalie has been one reason Cohasset has been competitive so far.

"Will Wise is making a lot of saves," Willis said. "Especially the past few games. He's seeing upward of 15 shots. He's done a great job."

Other players who have been playing well include Mike Monaco and Adkins offensively.

"Mike Monaco and Jonah Adkins are catching the middle of the field very well," Willis said. "They are putting us in good position. They're both really hustling. Travers Craven has also played well. He scored against Harwich."

With a game on Thursday at Cape Cod Academy, the team didn't have too much time to celebrate, but they did appreciate the first win.

"The kids are excited," Willis said. "They recognize it. It was 1-0, and kind of an ugly win, but we'll take it. I think now that monkey is off their back. They can concentrate and play a little better not thinking about a first win. I know it didn't help the confidence to start 0-3, but nobody wants to be 0-4."

Willis said his team is far from finished.

"I really like this group of guys," he said. "They're a fun group to work with and a nice group of kids. We're young. We'll get a couple of wins under our belt. I think we're better now than we were last year. I think today's game would have been a tie last year. We had six ties. We're learning how to win and learning to put games away."

As an example of that thought, Willis mentioned an East Bridgewater goal that was called back because the free shot was after a whistle.

"Last year our kids might have lost focus after that," he said. "This time the kids controlled the ball after and held on for the win."

The boys are at Carver Tuesday night at 7 p.m. and at Hull on Thursday at 3:30 p.m.

"I am within 10 pounds of my goal weight!"

In my first six months as a member of Get In Shape for Women I lost 45 pounds. I had been trying to lose weight for years on my own without success. The Get In Shape for Women program has provided me with the fitness training, accountability and encouragement that I needed to achieve my weight loss. Everything that I have learned about weight training, cardio, and nutrition at Get In Shape for Women will help me stay fit and keep the weight off permanently. I am down three sizes and within 10 pounds of my goal weight; it feels great! I know I will reach my goal soon. My trainers have been great at working with me on an individualized basis to help me get to where I am.

I couldn't have done it without their support and knowledge. If you are ready for hard work and to achieve weight loss and fitness success, try Get In Shape for Women. It's the best thing I have ever done for myself

"It's the best thing I have ever done for myself."

I have battled with my weight my whole life. Tired of many diets and constant "yo-yo-ing" on the scale, I decided some accountability was necessary and made the commitment to personal training at Get In Shape. I dedicated myself to exercising 3 times a week from the start, but it wasn't until I took the instructions offered to me about eating healthy seriously, that muscles I had been developing began to emerge and I had a toned and slimmer body to show for my efforts. As of this date, I have lost 18.5 inches and 33 pounds going from size 14 to a size 8. I am so thankful for the motivation, instruction and support I received at Get In Shape to achieve a strong, healthy and slim new me!

Small town celebration was huge success

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The second Annual Cohasset Day did not allow anyone to rain on its parades!! Due to a doom and gloom forecast for Saturday, the decision was made early last Friday to move the event to its rain date, Sunday, Sept. 13th.

At least 2,000 people from Cohasset and surrounding towns came to enjoy the food, fashion, music great looking classic cars and old time atmosphere, all under a cloudless sky and high temperatures. Cohasset Day was founded to celebrate all things "Cohasset" and is an initiative of the Economic Development Committee in partnership with the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. Special thanks to local sponsors, and volunteers who planned and worked so hard over the past several months to make the day a success. Very special thanks go to the entire Cohasset Day Committee.

All the town merchants, restaurants, participating non-profits and volunteers are to be commended on a day well done. For all those who attended…thank you for coming…we hope to see you next year…rain or shine!

The winners of the second annual Cohasset Classic Car Concours were:

Atlantic Symphony mixes art with music

'Pictures Plus' in Scituate Sunday

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

COURTESY PHOTO

Pat Bianco's interpretation of "The Heroes' Gate at Kiev," a movement in Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition," will be on display and part of the performance, along with works by many other South Shore artists, when the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra has its season opener on Oct 24 at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center.

A treat for the eyes and ears is what the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's opening night audience can expect on Oct. 24 at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center.

Under the baton of music director Jin Kim the soaring sounds of Mussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition" will be enhanced by projections of local artists' visual renditions inspired by eight of the composer's 10 movements that comprise the piece.

In addition, 60 artworks, also influenced by these movements, carrying such titles as "The Old Castle," "The Garden of the Tuileries" and "Cattle," will be on display that evening in the lobby of the arts center.

This grand collaboration has long been a dream of the orchestra's managing director, Nina Wellford, of Hingham.

"The groundwork for this began with the North River Arts Society in Marshfield. Over the past few years, their members have created artwork for three of our concerts," Wellford began in a phone interview.

"But those efforts were miniature compared to this undertaking."

As soon as Kim announced his decision to include "Pictures at an Exhibition" on the opening program — which also includes Haydn's Symphony No. 6 "Le Matin" and Copland's Three Latin Sketches — Wellford got to work expanding the original collaboration. She did that by inviting several South Shore arts organizations, as well as a couple of area schools, to take part in what she described as "this dynamic exploration of the intersection between visual art and music."

The guidelines for the participating groups included their choosing the movement they would like to illustrate, calling for and selecting the artists they would like to represent them, choosing six to eight works for the lobby exhibit and the one work that would be projected for the performance of their chosen movement.

Besides North River, participants are the Scituate Art Association, Thayer Academy, South Shore Art Center, Inly School, Hull Studio Artists and the Quincy Art Association.

To Wellford, who talks about "the synergy between visual arts and music," the collaboration between the orchestra and arts groups is particularly appropriate for "Pictures at an Exhibition." She cites the fact that Mussorgsky himself was inspired to compose the piece after seeing, in St. Petersburg, in 1874, an exhibition of works by his recently deceased good friend, 39-year-old artist and architect Viktor Hartmann.

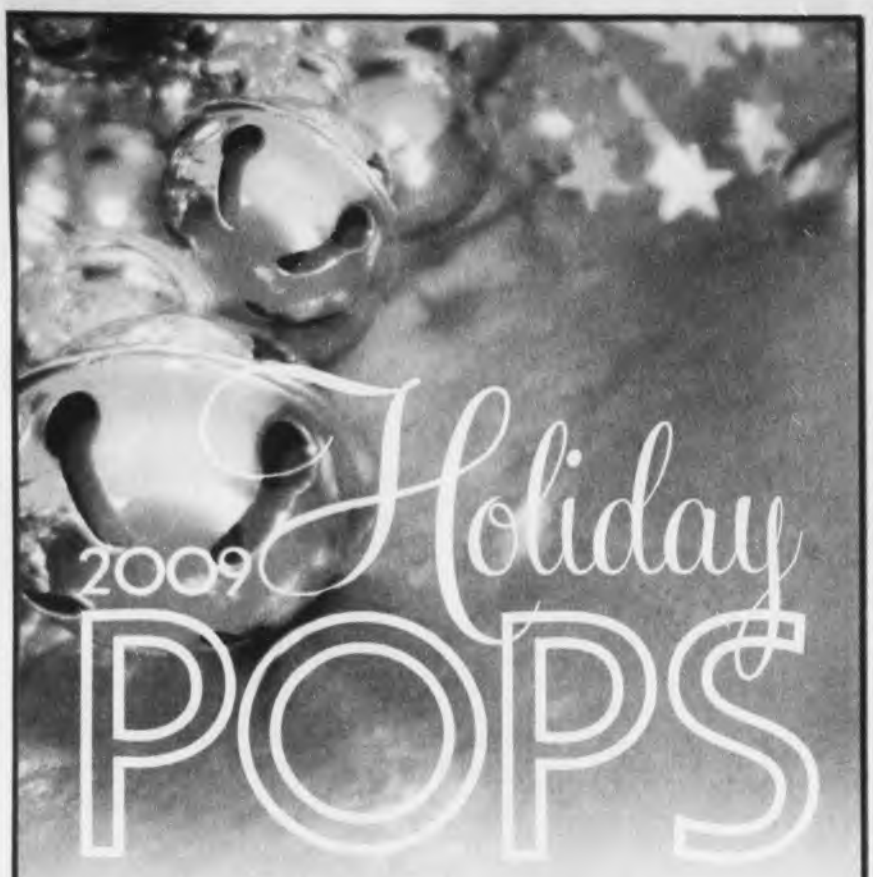
The fact that most of the 400 drawings and watercolors in the exhibit — done during Hartmann's visits to such places as Poland, France and Italy — have been lost presents a special opportunity, says Wellford.

"It means that a visual artist today has great freedom in interpreting the musical movements."

In fact, the music itself has had many different interpretations, since Mussorgsky wrote Pictures only for piano in a feverish six weeks shortly after seeing the exhibition. He tied the movements together with a "promenade," as though the piece were an actual tour of an exhibition. The resulting work was so admired that several major composers were inspired to create full orchestrations for it, including Ravel, whose version will be performed by the Atlantic Symphony.

One of the artists involved in this ambitious project is Pat Bianco, who is representing the Quincy Art Association. Charged with depicting "The Heroes' Gate at Kiev," Bianco has created a work that is at once explosive and ethereal.

Having seen copies of Hartmann's original concept for what actually had been an architectural commission, the artist faced a singular challenge: how "to reconcile the quaint, almost Disney-like gates with the fabulous, triumphant, sparkling music that Mussorgsky wrote about them…



"It would have been easy to get caught in the frilly capitals and pillars, the filigree of the side gates and decoration, the knobs and spires, and windows. Instead, I tried to depict the music, swirling and rushing around the gates and off into the universe. Colors and clouds coalesce to create my visualization of those crashing chords sometimes laved with tendrils of softness."

A work so far not created for the Atlantic Symphony's performance of Pictures at an Exhibition is the one for the movement titled "The Gnome." That will be done at "Pictures Plus," which will take place this Sunday (Sept. 20), 4 p.m., at the Scituate Town Library, under the sponsorship of the Scituate Library Foundation.

Open to adults, teens and children, "Pictures Plus" will be composed of two parts: one a multi-media conversation about Mussorgsky's masterpiece, led by annotator Steve Ledbetter, the other, a hands-on activity during which participants will create artworks inspired by "The Gnome." Those works will be on view in the library for the month, and moved to the lobby exhibit on opening night.

2009-2010 is the lucky 13th season for the orchestra and Kim. In the time he has been music director, the Atlantic Symphony has grown in stature and excellence, as well as budget – from $40,000 to $400,000 – and corporate sponsors – from none to 22. The all-important donor pool also has expanded considerably. And while subscriptions in these recessionary times have flattened, single ticket sales have exploded, says Wellford.

All this good news she attributes to "the unwavering support of our South Shore audience."

Cohasset ASP in its 22nd year!

Information meeting on Sunday

This past summer 150 teenagers, college students and adults from the Cohasset area ventured to Virginia and Kentucky for their annual trip to the Appalachian Mountain region to do home repair. The main goal of the week long work camp centers around making homes of needy families warmer, safer and dryer.

Now, just 2 short months later, Cohasset Appalachia Service Group is gearing up to begin its 22nd year serving the poor of our country. An Information Meeting will be held from 8 – 9 p.m. this Sunday, (Sept. 20) at Second Congregational Church (next to Town Hall). All 10th, 11th and 12th graders are welcome to attend with their parents, to find out what the program entails and receive a project overview booklet, which includes registration information and all necessary forms. Adults interested in going on the trip as advisors are encouraged to attend as well. "But I don't have any construction experience." No problem – the two major skills they need most are patience and the ability to relate to teenagers really well!!

It is truly a "mountain top" experience – guaranteed. There are thousands of stories to be shared and more to be discovered. Looking for something meaningful to do? Consider joining them this year – experience, personally this amazing adventure.

If you would like more information, please visit Cohasset ASP on the web at www.CohassetASP.org.

Newcomers walk to support cancer research

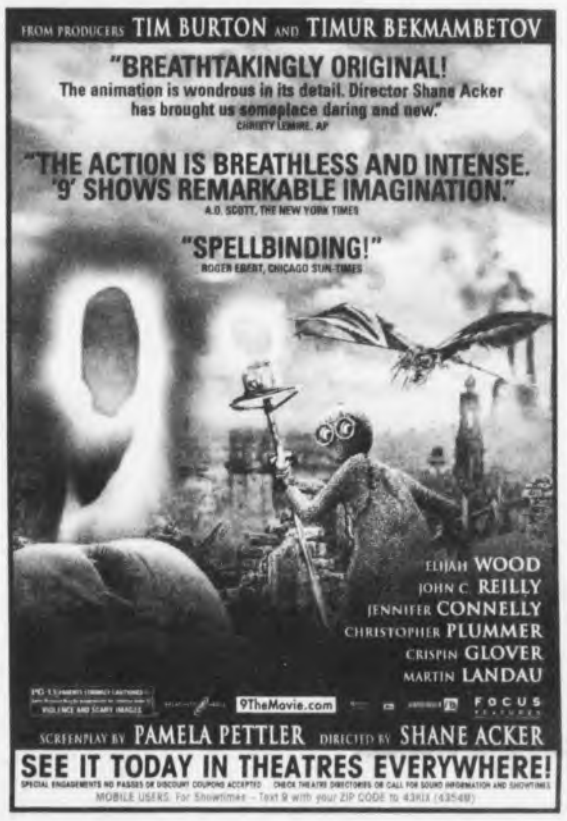
Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club invites the public to take part in its walk to support cancer research. The walk will take place at 10 a.m., on Sunday, Sept. 27, on Minot Beach in Scituate, beginning and ending at the entrance across from Bailey's Causeway.

All donations should be made by check to Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. At least a $10 donation per family is requested. Beth Golden and Kim Carvette will be on hand to collect and send checks to Dana-Farber. For more information, call Golden at 617-312-5572.

Fitness Together to host open house

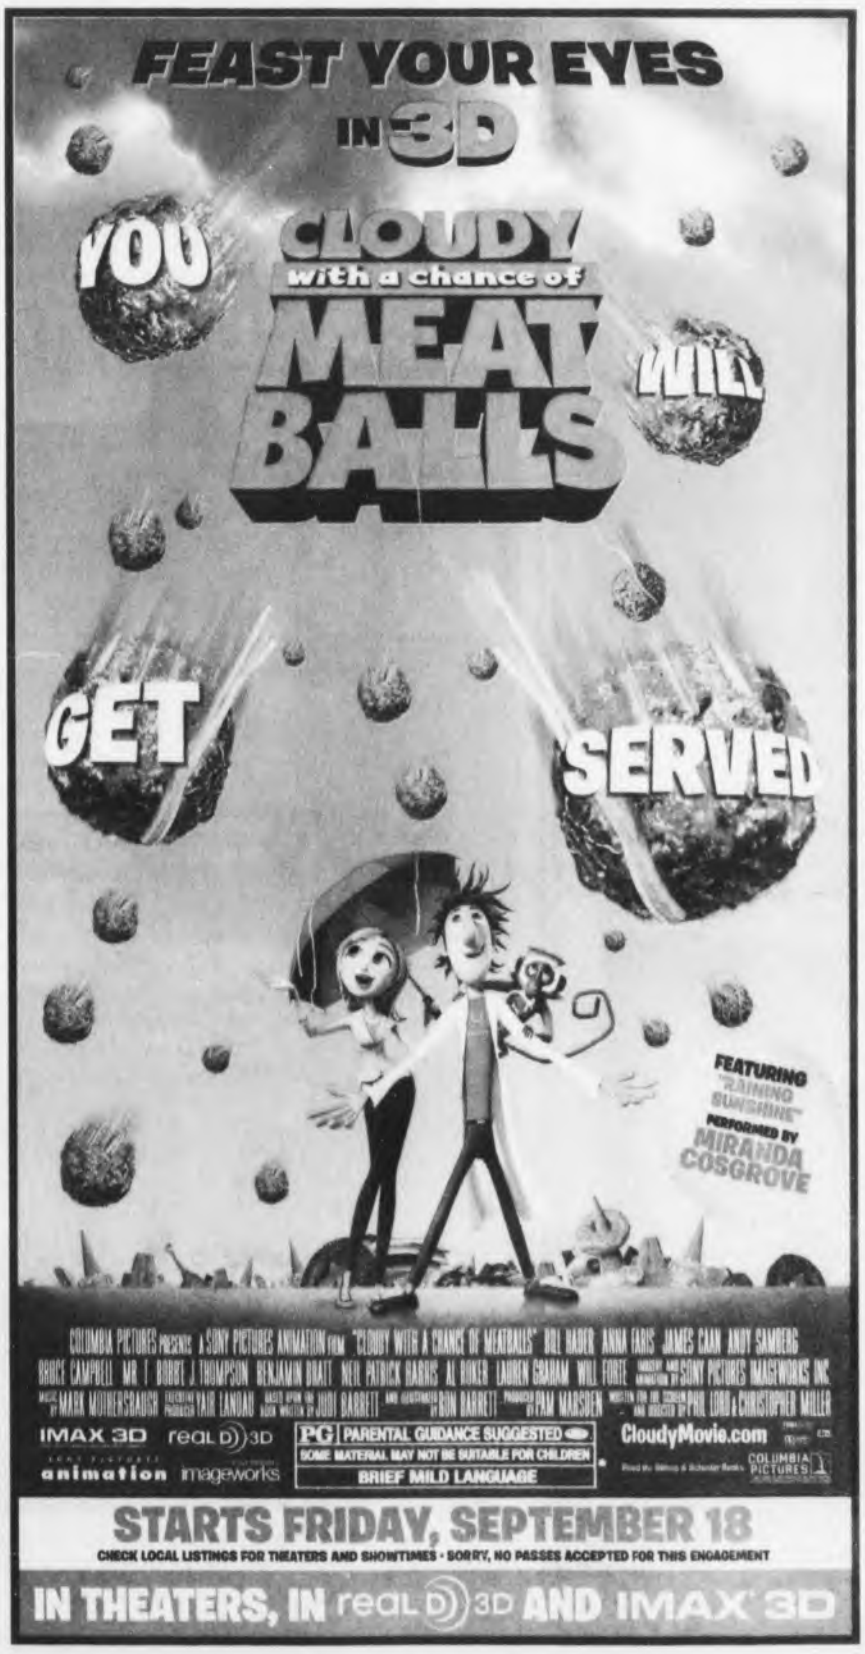
The public is invited to meet Fitness Together's director Michael Cardoza and his trainers for refreshments and a studio tour from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 23, at 790 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

Come see how Fitness Together's holistic approach to health without the crowds or competition of a gym environment may be right for you. Fitness Together Cohasset provides one-on-one, private, individualized personal training programs that include nutritional and exercise coaching. The fitness program incorporates cardiovascular training, strength training, Pilates and yoga style movements to achieve results.



For more information, call 781-383-8004.

Color Matters opens at Art Center



South Shore Art Center will present a national juried exhibition Color Matters in the Bancroft Gallery from Sept. 18 through Nov. 1. An opening reception will be held Friday, Sept. 25 from 6 to 8 pm and is open to the public, free of charge.

For more information call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
HOROSCOPE FOR WEEK OF
SEPT. 28, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Travel plans could be interrupted by the re-emergence of a workplace problem that was never quite fully resolved. Deal with it at once, and then take off on that well-deserved trip.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Aspects favor cultural activities for sensuous Bovines. Attend a concert or an art show. Better yet, create something yourself (a poem, perhaps?), and dedicate it to someone special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Respect any doubts you might now be feeling about a new situation. They could be reflecting your inner awareness that some essential information might be missing. Check it out.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's important to start the new month with as clean a slate as possible. Either complete all those unfinished tasks or pass them on to others who would be more than happy to take them on.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to cut down on expenses and tame that urge to splurge. Applying some financial discipline now could help the Big Cat ride out a possible monetary crunch later on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Money matters are dominant this week. Recheck your accounts and make sure they're up-to-date. Also, pay more attention to personal issues before they become major problems.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might be tempted to employ the same tactics as your adversary, but that could backfire. Better to use the same balanced approach that has worked for you before and could again.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A changing workplace environment could stir up confusion as well as apprehension. Best to ignore the rumors and get the facts. You could find that the changes bring positive elements.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Communication is easier this week with people ready and eager to hear what you have to say. Also, check for possible technical problems before you start your new project.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Aspects favor change for the usually traditional Goat. Opening your mind to possibilities you had ignored could lead you to make decisions you once considered improbable.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Making personal as well as professional adjustments to changing conditions might be easier with more information explaining the "hows" and "whys" of the situations in question.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) With a growing tide of positive reactions to buoy your confidence, this could be the right time to put the finishing touches to your new project and get it well and truly launched.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

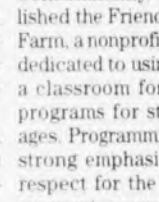
Barbara Lillian Potolicchio

HULL – Barbara Lillian (Castronovo) Potolicchio- of Hull, formerly of Cohasset, died peacefully at home surrounded by family on September 12, 2009 after a lengthy illness.

Barbara was a graduate of Greenwich High School, Greenwich, CT. and the St. Joseph Hospital School, Stamford, CT. She worked for many years as an X-Ray Technician at Driftway Radiology and South Shore Hospital. She will be sadly missed by her family and friends.

Barbara was the beloved wife of the late Joseph H. Potolicchio and the devoted mother of Dina-Leigh O'Neil and her husband John of Hingham, and Bradley J. of Weymouth. She was the cherished grandmother of Joseph and Lindsay. Dear sister of Sharron (Castronovo) Restivo and her husband Ronald, sister-in-law of Joyce P. Beadle.

A Funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset on Wednesday, September 16, 2009. Burial was private.



Donations in her memory may be made to the Norwell V.N.A. & Hospice, 91 Longwater Cir., Norwell, MA 02061 or to the Scleroderma Foundation, Attn: Donations, 300 Rosewood Suite 105, Danvers, MA 01923.

Frank Hallowell White

COHASSET – Frank Hallowell White, 77, an environmental educator and owner of Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset, died on Sunday after a courageous battle with cancer.

Frank Hallowell White

Born in 1932 in Boston, Frank White grew up on the Holly Hill Farm, a property that had been in the family for five generations. Raised by a mother who loved animals, the quiet joys of walking in the woods, and community service and a father whose talents included sculpting bronze horses, inventing tractors, sawmilling, and farming, Frank learned early on to respect the value of hard work and to appreciate the resources of the land.

As a young student, Frank attended Derby Academy in nearby Hingham. Following in his father's footsteps, his junior high and high school years were spent at Groton School, a small New England private school that stressed the importance of intellectual excellence along with a dedication to public service. At Groton, Frank distinguished himself as a three sport varsity athlete, a student leader who served as a senior prefect and an excellent student with an affinity for literature. At Harvard University, Frank majored in English, graduated magna cum laude and continued to excel in athletics. As a wingback on the Harvard Varsity Football team he threw the winning half-back option touchdown pass to win the 1954 Harvard-Yale Game, for which he received the Boston Tobacco Table's "Unsung Hero" Award.

In 1955, Frank graduated with honors and served as a class marshal. The following year he studied at Cambridge University in England after winning the prestigious Fiske scholarship.

In 1957, Frank married Jean Miner, a Radcliffe College graduate to whom he was married for 52 years.

On his return from England, Frank became an Assistant Dean of Freshman at Harvard University until he was drafted into the US Army, eventually serving in the White House signal corps.

Upon completing his army service, he entered the Harvard Graduate School of Education where he obtained a Master's degree. Realizing that he wanted to obtain experience beyond the ivory tower, Frank moved the following year to central Vermont where he taught for four years and served as Chairman of the English Department at Otter Valley Regional High School in Brandon. Returning to Groton School in 1963, Frank spent the next 10 years teaching English, coaching varsity football and basketball, and serving on the Groton Public School committee. Frank was especially proud of his establishment in 1965 of the Groton Lowell Upward Bound Program, an educational initiative designed to provide promising, low-income students with the study skills to attend college. In 1968, Frank returned to the Harvard Graduate School of Education to better understand the ways that educational institutions could be more responsive to the needs of students from a broader range of backgrounds.

In 1973, Frank became executive director of the Thompson Island Education Center. Under his leadership, the center began providing a variety of programs designed to support access to outdoor and environmental education while emphasizing diversity training for teachers and students in the Boston Public Schools. Over the course of the next 15 years, Thompson Island Education Center served as an invaluable resource for the entire Boston Public School community, providing a safe haven for students and teachers of all races to come together in an environment that promoted trust, cooperation, and communication.

Frank continued to serve in the field of education in subsequent positions at Boston Voyages in Learning and as executive director of the Cambridge Public School Volunteers.

In 1998, Frank returned to the family farm in Cohasset with the vision of making it an organic farm that could serve as a place to teach the value of sustainable farming and the natural environment. With the help of a series of dedicated farm managers, Holly Hill Farm began selling fresh organic produce from the historic 19th century barn in the farmyard and at the local farmer's market on Cohasset Common. Concomitantly, Frank established the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, a nonprofit organization dedicated to using the farm as a classroom for educational programs for students of all ages. Programming included a strong emphasis on creating respect for the natural environment, promoting sustainable agricultural practices, and collaborating with local schools. Despite living with the challenges of Chronic Lymphocytic Leukemia for many years, Frank worked tirelessly to promote the mission of the farm and to enable the Cohasset community to enjoy the beauty of the farm's fields, marshes, and woods. A watercolor artist, Frank sketched the drawings for a series of informational pamphlets about the natural habitat of the property.

In addition to his wife Jean, Frank leaves behind his son, Justin White of Bolton, MA, two daughters, Jennifer White of Belmont, MA and Emily Sullivan of Newbury, MA, four grandchildren, and two brothers, Richardson White, Jr. of Sperryville, VA and Donald White of Philadelphia, PA.

A memorial service will be held in October.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Friends of the Holly Hill Farm c/o of the Frank White Memorial Scholarship Program.

Artists from throughout the region take home ribbons in the Plymouth Guild for the Arts' 42nd Annual Juried Art Show

Dozens of artists from throughout the region became happy prizewinners last week at the Opening Gala for the Plymouth Guild for the Arts' 42nd Annual Juried Art Show, the Guild's largest juried art show.

Guild President Andrew Kusmin noted that the quality of the art submitted has risen overall as he presented the ribbons and cash prizes.

"With over 200 pieces of art in this show, there is something that will appeal to everyone," he said.

The 42nd Annual Juried Art Show can be seen in the Guild's galleries at the Plymouth Center for the Arts through Sept. 27. The art center is located at 11 North St. in downtown Plymouth.

"As well as beautifully executed landscapes and still lifes, there are many thought provoking pieces," Brenda Cobb said. Cobb led the team of volunteers who hung the show in the Guild's galleries. "Photography has become a huge category and there are many other fabulous works."

Other special awards include the Todesca award, sponsored by Susan White, and won by Daniel Hart of Cotuit with a color photograph titled Humming Bird Loving Dawn. The Lambert Award for Excellence in Photography was won by Beverly Ness for her color photograph of Plymouth titled Rear View Mirror. Best Abstract, sponsored by Susan Perry Skin Care, was won by Helene Zaniboni of Halifax for Night Reflections, a mixed-media entry. And Best Representational, sponsored by Cape Auto Body, was awarded to Pat McCarthy of Scituate for her watercolor titled Time for Lunch.

In the oil/acrylic category, sponsored by Stevens the Florist, Meg Howland of Marion won first place with Reflections at Anchor. Paul Beaulieu of Berkley won second place with A Path at Castle Hill. Honorable Mention was awarded to Robert Cipriani, Elizabeth Geissler and Sheila Thompson.

In the watercolor category, sponsored by Golden Gull Studios, Maureen Brookfield of Marshfield earned first place with Golden Pears, and Wendy Hale of Duxbury won second place with Martha! They're Pets! Honorable mention awards went to Andrew Kusmin and Virginia Wilson.

Hildene Tree* by Judith A. Christine, first place – digital

In drawing and pastel, sponsored by Ken & Peggy Page, first place went to Jody Regan of Marshfield for That MacLean Boy, with second place going to Heidi Mayo of Plymouth for Path of Least Resistance. Honorable mention was awarded to Olga Allen and Joan Dromey.

Two awards were made in printmaking, sponsored by Mayflower Bank: Carol Chisholm of Lakeville for Mesmerized (first place), and Joan Gallerani of Plymouth for Cat in the Window (second place).

Mixed-media artists shone in this year's show, as entries in this category won both Best in Show and Best Abstract. In addition, Alex Leaver of Plymouth won first place for Laundry Day in this category sponsored by the Plymouth Cultural Council.

First place in black and white photography was awarded to Heidi Harting for Dancing Fairy, and second place to Glenn Pollock of Marshfield for Ceraldo Station." Tara Woomer won honorable mention.

The black and white photography awards were sponsored by the Lamplighter Fund, while color photography was sponsored by Rockland Trust.

In the color photography division, Ronald Wilson of Plymouth was awarded first place for Erriff River, Connemara, Ireland. Second place was won by Judith Christine of Raynham for Pea Soup. Honorable mention was given to Michelle Ennis.

First place in Digital Art, sponsored by the Newfield House, went to Hildene Tree, by Judith Christine of Raynham. The second place winner was Dorothy Amore Pilla of Duxbury for The Gathering.

Three-dimensional works include two categories, Sculpture and Fine Crafts.

"I think people are really going to like the three dimensional work this year," Cobb said. "Very fun, very interesting use of materials. There's some gorgeous jewelry and a ceramic bowl that's just incredible."

Jill MacLeod of Quincy won first place in Sculpture for Miracle of Science. Second place went to Nathan Edwin Meyer of Boston for Bird Watching. The single honorable mention in sculpture went to Douglass Gray. The sculpture awards were sponsored by Fred and Clare Schwelm.

The final category, Fine Craft, sponsored by the Kusmin Gallery, included submissions in fiber, jewelry, ceramic, glass and more. The winners were Judy Rossman of Scituate, first place for Flared Collage Vessel, and Peggy Wheeler of Plymouth, second place for Golden Day. Honorable mention was awarded to Kathy Joyce and Mary-Lou Montagna.

Admission to the show is free and the gallery hours have been extended during its run: The exhibit is open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. The public is invited to visit, enjoy the art, and remember to vote for the Popular Prize, which will be awarded at the end of the show. The Popular Prize winner receives a ribbon and check for $150.

The Plymouth Center for the Arts, located at 11 North St., is open six days a week from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 4 p.m. Gallery admission is free, but there are fees for some special events. Parking is available on the street and in the public lot across from the Center. Call 508-746-7222 or go to www.plymouthguild.org for more information.

Movie review

Zellweger's belle rings true

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

My One and Only (B-)

Who doesn't love George Hamilton, the charmingly self-deprecating man with a tan? Other than ex-wife Alana Stewart, I'm betting no one.

You're likely to think even more fondly of him after seeing "My One and Only," the highly exaggerated tale of how he went from New York City schoolboy to Hollywood movie star over an eventful summer in 1953.

If it's a little too stylized and over the top, so be it, that's the way George rolls. And you see exactly where he gets it from, too, over the course of a loosey-goosey biopic that could easily have been called "All About My Mother" if Pedro Almodovar hadn't beaten him to the punch.

Yup, mother Hamilton was a Category 5 diva, a windy force of nature who chewed up everything in her path, including her philandering bandleader husband whose involvement in various side projects with beautiful vocalists sets the film's wheels literally in motion.

They're some wheels, too; attached to a gorgeous 1953 powder blue Cadillac Coupe de Ville convertible, filling in nicely as the proverbial getaway car that will whisk Mom and her two kids, George and his older half-brother, Robbie, off on a cross-country adventure.

Yes, it's a road picture; one filled with lots of familiar scenery and stereotypical people. But for the most part it works; thriving on the strength of terrific turns by Logan Lerman ("Jack & Bobby," "3:10 to Yuma") as the 15-year-old George Hamilton and especially Renee Zellweger as his fading Southern belle of a mother, Ann.

There's nothing new in their characters' love-hate relationship, but the subtle but evocative ways in which Lerman and Zellweger play it suggests otherwise.

They lend a realness to their characters that helps sustain the movie, even when it gets bogged down in weak attempts at screwball comedy and over-sentimentalized nostalgia.

What Lerman and Zellweger can't cure is the episodic structure of "My One and Only" (the title a double entendre for George's father's one hit song and George's sentiment for the woman who haphazardly raised him), as Ann grabs the kids, all of her husband's liquid assets and drives off in the Caddy without looking back.

Their subsequent travels take them to Boston, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, New Mexico and ultimately L.A. And at every stop, Ann goes shopping. Not for shoes or clothes, but for a man slightly more faithful than her current hubby, Don Devereaux (a fine Kevin Bacon), and rich enough to sustain her haughty lifestyle.

Auditioning for the position is a host of former and current sitcom stars like Steven Weber, Chris Noth, Eric McCormack and David Koechner. Their characters always eventually reveal a fatal flaw that Ann just won't tolerate. Think of her as a sort of female version of TV's Jerry Seinfeld: narcissistic, insular and possessing unrealistic expectations of the opposite sex.

Little does Ann realize, or at least not until late in the picture, that her search for gratification is what's driving away all her men, including her sons, whom she knows so little about, she doesn't even remember what school they attend.

Zellweger plays her to the hilt, too, flashing all of Ann's charms and faults with equal abandon. But what makes her performance so outstanding is that she's able to create empathy for Ann, even when she's behaving like a gold digging monster.

Standing toe to toe with her is Lerman, who is as charming as he is convincing in the role of a wise and worldly 15-year-old desperately seeking an iota of stability in his rocky family life.

Less interesting is Mark Rendall (looking like a teenage Art Garfunkel) as George's half-brother Robbie, who entertains visions of grandeur for himself, as he strives to become the next Brando or Olivier.

He's a character in every sense of the word. But he's also an occasionally offensive one, as writer Charlie Peters and director Richard Loncraine ("The Gathering Storm," "Wimbledon") mold him into little more than a gay stereotype, which might not have been so bad if it wasn't his character's only discernible trait.

The actors playing Ann's prospective beaus are equally one-dimensional and flat, with the possible exception of Koechner, who is rather touching as an heir to a St. Louis paint store empire.

He's also responsible for the film's single best scene, when his character, Bill, sits George down and tells him the best way to sustain a relationship with a woman is by keeping an imaginary sweater handy for those inevitable moments when a mate suddenly turns cold and distant.

I found myself donning one of those same sweaters whenever "My One and Only" hit a rough patch, which was often. By golly, it worked, too, because by the time George and his screwy family arrived in the City of Dreams, I was totally smitten with this slight, but charming tale of love lost and found.

Like George Hamilton himself, "My One and Only" won't win any awards or high accolades, but it will leave you feeling happy and amused, as the man with the golden tan graciously lets his bronze down long enough to reveal the boy who would become the man we so adore.

Frank Wallace

The Boston Classical Guitar Society and the Hingham Public Library announce the 2009/2010 season of classical guitar performances at the library. The free series has moved to the third Saturday afternoon of the month beginning Sept. 19 and running through April, 2010. The series is now re-branded as "Saturday Sounds Special." All performances begin promptly at 3 p.m. with seating for the first 80 arrivals. Guitarist, composer and baritone Frank Wallace will open the series on Sept. 19. Frank Wallace has been recognized for his extraordinary talent not only as a player of the classical guitar and its precursors, but also as a master of self-accompanied song. Wallace's program will feature Villa-Lobos, Mexican composer Ernesto Garcia de Leon and his own original compositions.

BIG WIN

Cohasset players celebrate their 34-21 win at Hingham last Friday. The game was the first regular season match between the neighboring towns. The Skippers were led by Dana Valentine's 222 rushing yards. Cohasset will have their hands full tonight when Scituate visits to open the new turf field. For more, see sports.

Pay cut confusion

Paraprofessionals get news as school opens

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At the beginning of the school year, 35 Cohasset school employees were notified by a memo that the way they had been paid in the past was changing.

What they were going to be paid, how they were going to be paid, and what benefits they were going to receive were going to be different from what they had received last year or in previous years.

This small group of school employees called paraprofessionals (or sometimes instructional aides) work at all levels of the school in various capacities. Many work in the classroom one-on-one with special needs students, others do clerical work and still others supervise recess at the elementary schools.

Paraprofessionals are one of three non-union groups, or employees at will, working in the school district. Bus drivers and two central office secretaries are also not protected by a union contract.

The issue of the paraprofessionals' pay and benefit change as well as the ensuing confusion among the affected school

Dogs make good listeners

Reading program launched at library

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the next three Saturdays, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library is going to the dogs.

Children's librarian Sharon Moody has invited local therapy dogs to the children's room to listen to young readers — and hopefully help them to gain confidence in their reading skills.

The group of friendly, well-trained dogs and their owners are members of Scituate-based non-profit Dog B.O.N.E.S. (Building Opportunities for Nurturing and Emotional Support) sit in quiet rapture while a child reads a book of his or her choosing.

"The dog isn't going to correct you on the word you pronounced incorrectly."
— Sharon Moody, children's librarian

In the last few years, across the state (and the nation) dogs of a special temperament have been making regular appearances in libraries, public schools, nursing homes and hospitals. Therapy dogs have a special job of providing therapeutic contact with the elderly, the disabled or sick, and the young. One of the therapy dogs' jobs is to listen to children read.

According to Sharon Moody, the reading therapy dog program has multiple goals — and each child or family participating could have a different reason for attending.

First and foremost from the library's point of view is to provide struggling (or shy) readers the opportunity to read out loud to a "non-judgmental" listener.

"The dog isn't going to correct you on the word you pronounced incorrectly," Moody said.

Matthew Fitzpatrick reads "How I Became A Pirate" to Molly, a golden retriever, at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Saturday.

On Friday before the first dog therapy session, Moody pulled about a dozen canine-inspired books from all levels that children could read to their new dog friends.

"It is another way to connect literature to children," Moody said.

Another reason for attending is to introduce a child who might be shy or fearful of dogs to a friendly canine.

"Those children can come with their family and sit back and observe," Moody said.

On the other side of the coin, Moody said many kids love dogs and revel in the experience in reading them their favorite book, "some families have signed up for all four weeks!"

Each reading therapy dogs session features three sets of dogs and handlers. A black lab named Chris, a German shepherd named Murphy and Golden retrievers Tucker and Molly are among the therapy dogs scheduled.

On the children's room bulletin board, Moody introduces, through pictures, some of the dogs scheduled to appear at the library. In one photo a black lab romps at the beach, in another a German shepherd sits statuesque with his favorite balls, and a Golden retriever dons a "Canine Good Citizen" apron.

"These dogs are trained to be good listeners," Moody said, and encouraged children to participate in order to help the dogs hone their listening skills.

PICTURE THIS/Lisa Sugrue

Name: Lisa Sugrue.

Occupation: Director of Fine Arts for Cohasset Public Schools.

Best day of your life: My best days are the ones spent with family and friends enjoying great conversation, food and lots of laughter!

Best vacation: The trip my husband and I took to Italy. We started our trip in Munich Germany, and took a propeller plane over the Alps to Venice and traveled from Northeast to Southern Italy. My favorite was Porto Cervo, Sardegna. The history, people, food and landscape are all amazing! It takes a journey to get there, but it's worth it!

Favorite season: I am really not the type to pick favorites. I love something about every season. I think the changes that occur in nature are beautiful, and inspire my artwork.

Favorite holiday: I love to celebrate all of the holidays. I love to decorate and prepare themed menus.

Best book: I am currently reading "In the Making, Creative Options for Contemporary Art" by Linda Weintraub. I am an illustrator and I love children's book illustrations, my all time favorite illustrator is Eric Carle.

Best movie: I love to watch Independent and Foreign films. I like creative films with claymation and animation. I like the work of Nick Park and Tim Burton.

Best TV show: I love to watch the National Geographic Channel, and I like "Anthony Bourdain, No Reservations" on the Travel Channel.

Best music, group, or artist: My favorite band is "The Smiths" and for solo artist I love James Taylor and Ben Taylor. I love to listen to storytellers.

Dumbest thing you've ever done: My friend and I were on the Vineyard two summers ago and it was raining the entire time. We went to the Island for a bike trip, and it was down pouring every day. Running out of things to do we read the local paper and we saw a Film Festival was happening in Chilmark. We took took three buses in the pouring rain to get there and we saw the film "Talking Guitars" a documentary about guitar technician Flip Scipio. At the end of the performance there was a surprise performance by Ben Taylor. We were so thrilled, so thrilled, we forgot to check when the buses stopped running to get back to Oak Bluffs.

I created a video with the same friend to get on the television show "The Amazing Race". I guess it was good we did not get picked to be on the show.

Fun fact about yourself: When I first got certified as an Art teacher I got a position teaching children's classes at the South Shore Art Center. Everyone that worked there was so supportive, and being new to teaching, I deeply appreciated the opportunity and the experience they provided me. A year later I was the recipient of the "Shirley F. Neer Award" from the Art Center. I was so honored that they selected me and it really gave me confidence as a new Educator. Last year when I started at Cohasset High School I was reading the attendance and I noticed a familiar name, I am now teaching her granddaughter. I thought that was really special.

Goal: I really want my students to be inspired. I would like them to take away something from my courses that they can apply in their lives. If they become professional artists or if they visit a gallery, museum or performance, that will have an appreciation for the Arts! Visit every Continent!

Person you'd most like to meet: Both of the people that I wish I got to meet are no longer with us. I would love to have met Isabella Stewart Gardner and Peggy Guggenheim. Their homes are also part of my list of favorite museums. Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston and Peggy Guggenheim in Venice, Italy.

Best part of Cohasset: I love the history of the Town and its wonderful traditions and that they are strong supporters of the Fine Arts.

Seasonal flu clinics

The Cohasset Health Department has begun its seasonal flu campaign with three clinics this year.

• The first clinic was held Tuesday, Sept. 22 at Town Hall.

• The second clinic will be on Tuesday, Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to noon at Town Hall.

These clinics are for seniors (65 or older) and high-risk adults (those over 21 with a chronic health condition).

• From 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Oct. 24, there will be a town-wide seasonal flu clinic for any resident 9 years of age or older.

Clinics are free of charge and open to Cohasset residents. If Medicare covers you, bring your card.

Stay tuned for further updates and news about availability of the H1N1 vaccine.

Anyone with questions should call Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210. People are encouraged to get a seasonal flu shot early this year.

Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Neighbors flood water tank talk

Safety issues at Reservoir Road at forefront

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A proposed change in an access road — from a straight-away on Pleasant Street to a curve on Reservoir Road — has a group of neighbors up in arms.

At Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting, the Water Commission sought permission to change its point-of-access to the Bear Hill water tank from a long-held easement to a piece of town-owned property.

More than a dozen residents, mainly from Pleasant Street and Reservoir Road area, came out to speak out against the proposed placement of the access road.

Much of their concern centered on what they said was an already dangerous area created by the curve in Reservoir Road and the nearly constant flow of children to and from school and after-school activities.

"That corner is a high risk corner with 30 to 40 kids crossing twice a day," said Elsa Miller of 60 Reservoir Road, whose home is directly across from the proposed access road. There were also concerns about vehicular safety.

Since 1889 the Water Department has used a dirt lane off Pleasant Street to access its property on Bear Hill. Before the water tank was built in the mid-1960s, a reservoir sat on top of the hill. The access road is diagonally located across the property at 100 Pleasant St. Within the last year the owner of 100 Pleasant St. decided to develop the property into three houses.

The issue of access needs to be resolved soon because the 100 Pleasant St. developer needs to relocate the road to another part of his property or pay for the construction of new access road off Reservoir.

"That corner is a high risk corner with 30 to 40 kids crossing twice a day."

— Elsa Miller, 60 Reservoir Road

In order to accommodate the new homes, the owner is entitled by state law to relocate the easement within the property. Once the new homes are built, the moved access road will pass by six houses.

In the proposed easement off Reservoir Road, the access road passed by one residence and cut off the length of the access road in half, Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt said. The Water Commission needs Board of Selectmen permission to utilize the town-owned property for the access road.

Several residents made allegations that the Water Commission was moving the easement at the behest of the developer. Both Pratt and the developer, Cohasset resident Richard Stevens, denied that was true.

"The developer doesn't have the problem, we do. The (current) easement goes through residential yards. We have the chance to use (the town's) own piece of land for an easier and safer route…it just makes sense," Pratt said.

Dick Stevens said he was willing to move the easement within the property as long as it worked for the water department and his planned development, "I am not a party to moving the access road to Reservoir Road."

The Water Commission said the access road is utilized by a water department pick-up truck two or three times a week. Every decade or so there needs to be some maintenance work done on the water tank which would lead to a short-term spike in truck traffic, Pratt said.

Some of the neighbors said they felt misled after the Water Commission voted to withdraw a Town Meeting warrant article from last fall's Special Town Meeting concerning the access road to the Bear Hill water tank. Others questioned the cost benefit of moving the road.

"(The current access road) has and will continue to work…unless there's a compelling reason to move it," said Marty Corry of 81 Pleasant St.

With the neighbors' expressed concerns about children's' safety, Selectman Fred Koed suggested the town look at installing a sidewalk with a steel guardrail at the curve in Reservoir Road.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he was looking for a "compelling reason to make the change" and was not sure there was enough of a reason. "In light of the fact so many neighbors oppose it I'm not sure you gain enough…leave it, just leave it."

Selectman Ted Carr said the board and the town needed to look at the broader issues brought to light by this discussion – safety in that area.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said the light traffic from the access road would likely not affect public safety, but there were greater issues going on in the area. He suggested the water department access be limited to school hours as not to impact the comings and goings of schoolchildren.

Pratt suggested the creation of a working sub-committee that could come up with some constructive ideas to resolve the issues of the area.

Carlson said the Selectmen would take the idea under advisement and the board could discuss it (and possibly appoint members) at its next meeting.

Granddaughter charged with stealing grandmother's checks

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 21-year-old Scituate woman is facing charges after Stop & Shop reported she was trying to use a check that belonged to her grandmother, also of Scituate.

The 72-year-old grandmother had alerted Stop & Shop that someone had forged a check of hers and used it at the store. She asked them to keep an eye out, police said. The grandmother knew that she had not been to Stop & Shop recently.

Stop & Shop alerted its staff. The following day, a clerk at the supermarket saw the grandmother's name on a customer's check. Stop & Shop called the police. The incident was reported at 9:06 a.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 15).

When police arrived they found the 21-year-old with one of her grandmother's checks. She was trying to buy food, drinks, and gift cards and was seeking cash back, police said.

She was arrested and charged with larceny under $250 (purchases); uttering a false check; and receiving stolen property (check).

She was trying to buy food, drinks, and gift cards and was seeking cash back, police said.

Rock thrown

A cell caller reported that a rock had been thrown at his windshield in the vicinity of the Village Greenery on Route 3A. Police investigated and could not find anything. It is not clear if the rock was thrown or was kicked up in traffic, police said. The incident was reported at 8:05 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 15).

Alfa Romeo

An Italian man driving a red 1986 Alfa Romeo was stopped after running the red light by King Street and Stop & Shop, police said. The incident occurred at 11:47 a.m., on Tuesday (Sept. 15).

The officer stopped the motorist after he ran the light; the man was visiting family in Hull and was here on an Italian visa.

He was not properly licensed and could not prove he had an Italian license, police said. U.S. visitors are required to have a driver's license from their country of origin and also have their passport with them showing when they entered the country, police said. The car was towed and the man is being summonsed for unlicensed operation and for failure to stop at a red light.

Broken glass

A 54-year-old Black Rock Road resident called police last week after he discovered several youth had broken the windows to his greenhouse/shed, police said. Three boys were involved; two are 13 years old and one is 12.

One of the 13-year-olds stayed behind when they were discovered, the other two ran away, police said. All live in the Forest Avenue area.

The resident told police he heard some glass being smashed and went to investigate at about 3:20 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 18).

Police called the parents of the three boys. The victim is providing an estimate of the damage so restitution can be made.

Double domestic

Police responded to a domestic incident on Route 3A near Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza at about 9:30 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 18). Upon arrival police found a 46-year-old Quincy man who was apparently heavily intoxicated and who had urinated on himself standing by the side of the road. He reported that his 44-year-old girlfriend, also of Quincy, had run him over after hitting him with the car door.

Police said the two had apparently argued on their way back from the Cape. The man asked her to let him out of the 2003 Ford Explorer. After he exited, she allegedly pulled away allowing the car door to strike him; he was knocked down and she allegedly ran over his leg. The man was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was treated and released, police said. Police put out a BOLO (Be On the Lookout) for the Explorer but it did not turn up.

Further investigation revealed the woman still had an active restraining order out for the alleged victim. Apparently the couple were trying to patch things up when the argument ensued.

Only a judge can remove a restraining order. So the boyfriend is being summonsed to court for violating a restraining order and the girlfriend is being summonsed for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (car).

Cyclist hit

Police responded to 911 calls that a man on a bicycle had been struck by a car on Hull Street at 2:40 p.m., Saturday (Sept. 19). A 60-year-old Hull man, driving a 2002 Ford Thunderbird southbound, told police he was blinded by the sun when he took a left to pull into a driveway and did not see the man on the bicycle riding by. The bike was headed north.

The car knocked the 42-year-old Hingham man off the bike. The man on the bike was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The driver of the Thunderbird was cited for failure to yield to an oncoming bicycle. Police diverted traffic for 20 minutes from the area while investigating the accident.

Treat's Pond coming to a head

Selectmen to discuss future of easement issue in two weeks

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Selectmen are inching closer to an agreement with several property owners in order to legally access the Treat's Pond drainage outfall at Sandy Cove.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said the town had conversations with the six property owners in the late summer and are waiting for the residents to come back with a new document.

While the majority of discussions up to late summer had centered on the town gaining an "easement" to access the beach, Carlson said the residents floated instead providing a license agreement.

Whether it is an easement or a license, Carlson said the town is still looking to reach an amenable agreement with involved property owners.

Signing an agreement to gain access is important because without a legally and physically clear way to access the beach, the town cannot clear out the drainage outfall on Sandy Cove. Atlantic Avenue residents, who routinely get flooded during heavy rain, have said in previous meetings that clearing the outfall is presently the only way to alleviate the flooding.

The town's easement issue first came into focus in June 2008 when the Sandy Cove property owners and the town could not come to a consensus on what rights were granted in a 1964 easement given to the town by Elizabeth Bigelow.

Both selectmen Ted Carr and Karen Quigley said the issue was one of public safety because when there is severe flooding it renders several residences difficult to access.

The town has been in negotiations with the group of Sandy Cove property owners since early 2009.

According to Town Counsel Lou Ross who attended Monday's meeting there is a distinct difference legally speaking between an easement and a license.

"An easement is an investment in real property," and recorded in the Registry of Deeds, said Town Counsel Lou Ross. "A license is technically a privilege, it doesn't need a town meeting vote…and is revocable at will."

Ross said typically license agreements are done on an interim basis. It can be written into the document that the license is not revocable at will and if it was then the town could pursue a breach of contract suit, Ross said. The town has yet to review a draft of the license document.

The current draft of the easement agreement indicates the easement agreement would be for five years.

Ross said a license might be preferable in some cases because it gives property owners the right to terminate the agreement and there is no encumbrance on the property.

> "We are very reasonable people and we're very open to a reasonable agreement."
> — Selectman Ted Carr

Selectman Carr said it has been made clear to the property owners what the town is looking for in the agreement and what elements need to be included in order for the town to sign.

"We are very reasonable people and we're very open to a reasonable agreement," Carr said.

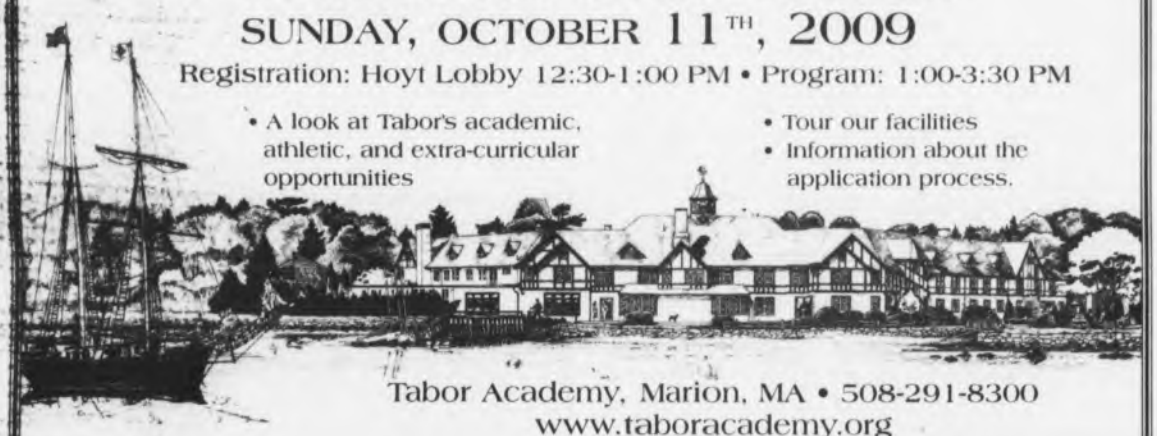
Selectman Quigley was in favor of giving a deadline to the residents, "the (involved Sandy Cove property owners) have abused our good will…maybe we have lost sight of the impact on people who are flooded and their good will. This could go on forever."

However, Chairman Carlson said the board should "take (the property owners) at their word and give them another week." The issue will be up for discussion at the next scheduled Selectmen's meeting on Monday, Oct. 5.

When Quigley pressed, Carlson said, "I don't like to throw out threats, let's say we're meeting to discuss this issue in two weeks."

"At some point this board needs to show some leadership in this issue (instead of letting the property owners lead the way)," Quigley said.

Town Meeting voted this past spring to give the Board of Selectmen the authority to accept an easement agreement from the six families whose property the easement would cross.



At least two selectmen mentioned the upcoming deadline for warrant articles to be included on the Special Town Meeting warrant (the Special Town Meeting warrant goes to press around Oct. 23), but did not elaborate on what an article would request of Town Meeting.

Peter Whittemore of Elm Court spoke against the town signing a license agreement, "Town Meeting voted to negotiate an easement, not a license. In general, they are looking for a long-term solution…the town needs to say we need an easement (agreement)."

Whittemore also criticized the board for its lack of openness on this issue, something he said was promised to the voters.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who is a resident of Sandy Cove, recused himself from the discussion and sat in the audience during Monday's discussion. Speaking as a private citizen, Dormitzer said the Selectmen needed to invite the people involved, "this profoundly affects them…(without them) it is not a meaningful debate."

Arrest

A 44-year-old Abington man, who comes from Brazil, was arrested after a traffic stop for having no brake lights at about 5:13 p.m., Saturday (Sept. 19) at the intersection of Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street.

The man, who was driving a 2002 Dodge Neon, did not have a Massachusetts license after having been in the U.S. for quite a while, police said. He also did not have identification with him, police said. His car was towed.

He was charged with unlicensed operation and faulty equipment (brake light).

Summons

A 44-year-old Weymouth man, who comes from Brazil, is being summonsed to court for driving without a license following a traffic stop for seeping at 11:04 p.m., Saturday (Sept. 19) on Lamberts Lane. The man, who was driving a 1997 Toyota Corolla, had identification with him but did not have a Massachusetts license as required.

A passenger, who was properly licensed, took over driving the car and it was not towed, police said.

Missing kayak

Police searched the area after an Atlantic Avenue resident called at about 9:11 p.m. on Sunday (Sept. 20) that his kayak had fallen off the roof of his vehicle. He discovered it was missing after just retuning home and thought it might be somewhere along Atlantic Avenue. Police could not find the kayak.

Meeting on making property more sustainable

What does all the talk about "sustainability" really mean and how can people start practicing it? The old practices of large, chemical-dependent, irrigated lawns and storm water running into the sewer drains have left weakened ecosystems, drained water reservoirs and polluted waterways. What are the alternatives? Amy Martin, landscape designer and environmental advocate, will give a lecture on easy steps to make one's property more sustainable for the future, including information on organic gardening and lawn care, creating planting plans with native plants for healthy ecosystems and managing rain water with rain barrels and rain gardens.

The talk will take place at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, Sept. 30, in Bates Hall at Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave.

Paraprofessionals' pay cut news delivery faulted employees came to light when Stephanie Noble, a full-time, sixth-grade social studies teacher at Cohasset Middle School, spoke before the School Committee on Wednesday (Sept. 16).

Leading up to the meeting Noble had contacted two School Committee members, chairman Adrienne MacCarthy and member Paul Schubert, to discuss the issue.

On Sept. 16 directly before the School Committee voted to go into executive session, which are discussions closed to the public for select and specific reasons, Noble asked to speak. Knowing what Noble was to speak about MacCarthy said she would rather Noble give her comments after the committee returned to open session. MacCarthy said three of the five School Committee members were not aware of the issue and would not know what Noble was talking about.

Noble, who said she had been told by MacCarthy earlier via phone that she would be allowed to speak before the executive session, agreed to wait and stepped outside the room for roughly 45 minutes. Around 10:30p.m., the committee returned to open session and invited Noble to speak.

From the outset, Noble said she understood what it meant to be an employee at will and that hard decisions must be made in the face of financial pressure.

However, she said the manner in which the paraprofessionals were notified of this pay change — a memo sent on their first day of work, Sept. 2 — and the response they got when they tried to get answers lacked a sense of compassion and responsibility.

"I believe as a community we value our town's employees. However, compassion, value and respect must be seen in our actions as tangible examples of our commitment to each other. The situation surrounding the paraprofessionals calls into question all I believe in regard to how we as a community operate," Noble said.

Noble said the paraprofessionals were facing a pay cut and a loss of benefits, "these people, most of them classroom aides who have devoted years of service to our district's most vulnerable students, were given a memo on Sept. 2 notifying them that their salary was being decreased and that their anticipated paycheck due on Sept. 3 would not be forthcoming."

"The situation surrounding the paraprofessionals calls into question all I believe in regard to how we as a community operate."

— Stephanie Noble, teacher and Cohasset resident

She said the paraprofessionals sought answers and clarifications from principals and the superintendent and "(they) were met with evasiveness, or worse, silence."

"The lack of thoughtfulness in how this difficult financial decision was carried out has resulted in very real hardship for the paraprofessionals," Noble said. "Being financially tough should never mean showing such a grievous lack of respect for those who are so valued by their colleagues and the community."

At the close of her comments, Noble walked out of the room and did not wait to hear the School Committee's response.

At the meeting, chairman MacCarthy acknowledged there was some misunderstanding among the paraprofessional community. The committee directed Superintendent Denise Walsh and school business manager Dave DeGennaro to put together a concise informational sheet for the paraprofessionals.

Walsh said she and DeGennaro would schedule a meeting to explain the changes.

School Committee member Helene Lieb said, "there was no warning" for the paraprofessionals and the situation had bad timing.

Vice chair Alfred Slanetz said the schools has the responsibility to be fiscally responsible, "we can't pay them $3000, $4000 extra."

Slanetz indicated the paraprofessionals signed a contract where it outlined what they would be paid per hour for 180 days, "we are paying as outlined."

'Payroll adjustment'

Had Noble not addressed the School Committee in an open session, Superintendent Walsh said in an interview this week she would not have brought the issue before the School Committee. In cases of union negotiations, changing an employee at will's hourly rate or employee lay offs, she is obligated to discuss with the School Committee.

In this case, where the situation was a "payroll adjustment," she said she had the authority to act.

In an interview on the day after Wednesday's meeting, Superintendent Walsh said paraprofessionals are year-to-year employees and are hired each September. Because of fluctuations in the special education numbers it is not known with absolute certainty how many paraprofessionals will be needed, she said.

"We may have an idea on the numbers…and at the end of the (school) year (paraprofessionals) are given reasonable assurance they will be returning," Walsh said.

Each September the paraprofessionals sign a new contract for the year, Walsh said.

Walsh said the paraprofessionals were "not really receiving a salary cut." Sometime, before her tenure as superintendent, the paraprofessionals had moved in payroll from an hourly-based pay to salary-based and somehow the salary rate was not reflecting the actual hours worked.

"They didn't match," Walsh said. "Where the problem came in was the paraprofessionals were being paid for 210 days, but they were really working 180 instructional days."

This year the paraprofessionals did receive a 2 percent increase to their hourly rate. She described the issue as a "payroll adjustment."

According to MacCarthy, the School Committee chairman, in particular the paraprofessionals who have worked for years in the district were the most affected.

"If you were paid for 210 days and are not only being paid for 180 days that reflects a cut," MacCarthy said.

While the school could receive some savings through changing the way the paraprofessionals are paid, Walsh said the decision was not based on the school's budget. Walsh said the school department discovered the payroll inconsistency at the very end of August when they were doing the final hiring for paraprofessionals, which led to the memo notification on Sept. 2.

According to the second memo distributed to the paraprofessionals outlining their pay and benefits for this year, the full-time paraprofessionals will be paid this year for 180 days of work, six hours per day, at a set hourly wage ranging from $9.63 (for an activity aide at step 1) to $16.02 (for an instructional aide at step 5).

Full-time employees will receive seven sick leave days per year and can request up to two personal days per year with prior approval from the superintendent. Part-time employees receive a pro-rated number of sick days and no personal leave days. Paraprofessionals are not entitled to paid vacation days or paid holidays.

Walsh acknowledged the employees' confusion and said it was a matter of making the changes and impact clear to the employees.

"It's not their fault, it's ours," Walsh said. "I am sorry. It is a very difficult situation when you have to change someone's payroll and it has to be very clear why…in fairness to them I'm not sure that was ever really done."

MacCarthy also acknowledged the situation was something that needs to be addresses, "(the paraprofessionals) are due that respect."

When asked if the situation could have been handled in a better fashion, MacCarthy said if the school department had had the "gift of time" then they would have done more.

"It would have been much more professional to have a meeting up front," MacCarthy said. "It's unfortunate and I do understand that anger (in the way they were notified)."

The informational meeting with the paraprofessionals was held on Thursday (Sept. 24) after the Mariner went to press.

Parking issue not curbed

There will be a fourth discussion on the various parking issues around town at the next Selectmen's meeting. Some Selectmen still had some questions and concerns on a few of the police department's recommended parking signage items.

At Cunningham Bridge, which is a popular fishing spot, Selectman Fred Koed said he thought there should be at least one parking space for someone to fish. There is a small pull-off area near Cunningham Bridge where many park. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested there be a sign placed in that area, but indicate there was no parking from 9p.m. to 6a.m.

"People park there no matter what we do," Dormitzer said.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley suggested they contact the abutters to see if there were any issues they were not aware of. Dormitzer agreed to make the phone calls and report back.

Selectmen will also consult the small businesses on S. Main Street in the village on their parking needs.

Other outstanding parking items include signage on Margin Street near the town dock. Selectmen will also consult the small businesses on S. Main Street in the village on their parking needs.

The Selectmen did vote to place "tow zone" on signs in the lower portion of Government Island, but would not have "tow zone" on signs in the upper portion of Government Island used primarily for functions at the Lightkeepers Residence.

Elder Affairs director on board

Coral Grande takes over CEA helm

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

New Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande is hitting the ground running.

Being the new face in town, Grande is busy getting to know everyone from seniors, to volunteers, to town officials, and to the community at large.

Grande comes to Cohasset with 36 years of experience in the field of elder services.

Her interest and love of working with seniors was nurtured through her relationships with her four grandparents. In fact, her first job was working at her paternal grandparents' funeral home as a greeter.

Later she worked in a retirement community, senior centers and other positions where she worked closely with seniors.

"(Working with elders) was just a natural thing for me to do," Grande said.

Grande spent the last 14 years building up the senior center in Gloucester as their director of elder affairs. Last spring, she became a casualty of the town's financial crisis, which forced the town to cut her position and several other department heads.

In her 14 years in Gloucester she said she and her staff built the senior center from having 900 seniors coming to the center annually to just under 4,000 participants. Losing her position in Gloucester was especially difficult, she said, because of all the strides the department had made over the years.

However, Grande is more than excited to be on the South Shore and in Cohasset and is looking forward to building up the programming and senior center in a similar fashion.

So far, her experience in Cohasset has been positive – she arrived to her first day of work to an organized desk and fresh cut flowers – but she recognizes there will be challenges ahead.

"The entire town has to be invested in the idea, the promise of a senior center. It needs to be a town project, not a senior project."

— Coral Grande, Director of Elder Affairs

"I don't expect smooth sailing all the time — not by a long shot — but I do believe if you have good people working in the same direction, toward the same goals, you really can overcome any hurdle," Grande said. "Cohasset has all the ingredients — the leadership, the resources, the education, the background — all we have to do is bring it all together and make it work for the seniors."

One of the big challenges ahead is the effort to build a new senior center. As her first step she aims to send out a town-wide survey to get an idea of what the community is looking for in a new building.

"The entire town has to be invested in the idea, the promise of a senior center. It needs to be a town project, not a senior project," Grande said.

Creating a space at the current location or at a future location that the community wants and is proud of is one of her primary goals. Grande would like to invite different organizations to the center to let them experience firsthand what the senior center offers.

"Nothing is going to happen overnight, but it will happen," Grande said.

Grande is in the process of looking at the programs currently offered at the center and what works and doesn't work. The overriding goal, Grande said, is to provide programs, services, and activities to help seniors remain in their home independently and keep them connected to the community.

She hopes to harness ideas, expertise and energy of the community to expand the offerings at elder affairs. She said seniors have expressed interest in more exercise, art, music and computer programs.

Grande was quick to acknowledge the hard work of the staff that kept the department up and running after the unexpected passing of much loved director of elder affairs, Linda Elworthy.

"They kept right on going…it says a lot about the fabric of elder affairs as a group and the individual characteristics of the people who work here," Grande said.

Over the next few months Grande will begin to get used to calling Cohasset home. She has rented a house in Cohasset and is looking forward to significantly reducing her commuting time from two hours coming across the city from the North Shore to five minutes.

"I can't say enough of the people of Cohasset, the staff, the boards, the volunteers, the seniors. It's terrific," said Grande with a big smile.

Way to go, Morgan!

HELLO, FALL

Hello Cohasset. I hope everyone is enjoying the weather and the start of fall. I am not looking forward to anymore cold nights or winter so keep crossing our fingers and hope it is mild. The kids around town seem to all be adjusting well to school. Make sure to encourage some outdoor time after school and time for all to still be a kid!

FIRST PLACE

Morgan Langenhagen of Cohasset has been racing her Optimist this summer and meeting with the success of her grandfather, Chuck Langenhagen, who was fleet champion in the Ensign fleet and her father, Conrad, who has recently been a fleet champion in the Rhodes 19 fleet. All three represented Hingham Yacht Club.

Morgan won 1st place in the Green fleet of the Make-A-Wish regatta at Cottage Park Yacht Club while also winning over her more experienced competitors in the White, Blue, and Red fleets. She placed 2nd in the Hingham Bay Junior Regatta and won the Thomas Curtis award for outstanding performance and demonstrating the Corinthian sailing spirit. Advancing to her first White fleet regatta, the Birch-Cotter Memorial at the Lincoln Maritime Center, she placed first. At Hingham Yacht Club she won the Tuesday night series for Optimists and was awarded the Vice Commodore's Trophy.

Keep it up Morgan!

Moody has been thinking about doing this type of program for some time. Last spring, she started to collect information from other libraries and schools that had run programs with therapy dogs.

Dogs and their handlers were set up in three different sections of the library — the story room, the large meeting room and the reading alcove within the children's room.

The dog therapy dogs will be at the library from 10:30a.m. to 12:30p.m on Saturdays Sept. 26, Oct. 3 and Oct. 10. Residents are asked to make a 15-minute appointment with the dog of their choice. Space is limited. Appointments can be made by calling the children's room at 781-383-1348 x3 or by visiting Mrs. Moody in the library.

About Dog B.O.N.E.S.

Dog B.O.N.E.S. was started out of a Scituate home in 2002. Jeanne Brouillette and her Golden retriever Bentley became a therapy dog team through another organization. When she and Bentley started getting more requests for appearances than they could get handle, she decided to start Dog B.O.N.E.S., a non-profit dedicated to providing well-trained, affectionate, obedient, registered and insured therapy dog teams to local organizations.

Within a year of its start, Dog B.O.N.E.S. had over 100 members. Over the past seven years, membership and interest in dog therapy has skyrocketed, said Brouillette. Now, they have more than 500 registered dog therapy teams located all over Massachusetts.

"Our dogs are all family-owned pets that are extremely wonderful. They have to be at least four months of age, an obedient dog, very friendly, and up to date on shots," Brouillette said. "We have all kinds of dogs from Chihuahuas to Great danes."

A workshop, "Introduction to Therapy Dogs," is a pre-requisite so dog owners get a clear picture of what's involved.

"It also gives us a chance to get a good handle that the dogs are what they say they are and don't have any fear or aggression," Brouillette said.

Serving as a reading therapy dog involves a higher level of training and certification because of the close contact with children. The dogs have to be willing to sit still and do well with children.

"Each dog brings something different to the visit," Brouillette said. There are several dogs in the organization with disabilities (deaf, blind, use wheels to get around) who visit with humans of like disabilities. "The kids really identify with the dogs."

That being said, Brouillette said the unsung heroes of therapy dogs are the handlers, "they end up being the chauffeur and the dog gets all the attention, but they are a special group of people, too."

Wheels of government

The wheels of Cohasset government are grinding slowly.

To be clear, we are not talking about the day-to-day work of the Town Manager, Police Chief, Fire Chief and other department heads and town employees.

We are referring to the decision-making of our elected officials, particularly the Board of Selectmen, which has, in our view, ground to a near halt.

It is kind of ironic judging from our current times. In Washington, President Obama is in a rush to accomplish as much as possible in the shortest amount of time. Many Americans wish he would slow down and give members of Congress at least enough time to read the major legislation before they vote on it!

However, in Cohasset our "executive branch" does not have the same sense of urgency.

We wish they would speed up a bit and make some decisions.

Take parking for example. Soon our Selectmen will discuss parking and signage changes for the fourth time. They had a written memo from the police department suggesting changes to parking signage around town. Then, they heard personally from the Police Chief. This week, they had a written summary of parking recommendations prepared by the police department. They discussed the issue of establishing a "tow zone" at Government Island at length. Yet, still not all the parking recommendations have been given a 'yea' or 'nay.'

We're all for being thorough, but really?

Our Planning Board Chairman Al Moore is famous for saying to beware of "unintended consequences." He has been around long enough to understand well that quick decisions that are not thoroughly vetted can have long-range effects that were not anticipated.

But we think three meetings on parking is enough. Let's move forward and if there are unintended consequences then revisit the issue at that time!

The Selectmen should make decisions that they believe are in the best interest of the town as a whole. Sometimes those decisions will be unpopular with someone, a group of people, or even the majority, but as the leaders of our town we expect them to be decisive.

During their meetings, we also ask our Selectmen to do a better job of summarizing where they have been, where they are, and where they are going.

The Mariner tries to be the eyes and ears of the public – but is makes our job difficult (and therefore, our readers won't have the straight scoop), if we cannot hear or do not understand what is being discussed.

It is challenging when we start to write stories and have to scratch our heads wondering what happened during the meeting.

We are not shy and we ask questions, but in meetings that are chock full of topics – we could use some clarity at various points.

Former Selectman Gary Vanderweil was an expert at summarizing and directing discussion. Could Gary provide a primer for the current board?

Viewers are also tuning into Selectmen's meetings as they always have done in our town. Therefore, clarity might be good for them, too. We don't think Selectmen want to lose ratings either on TV or with our readers.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Harbor Committee, Oct. 13, 7 p.m.
Library Trustees, Oct. 8, 7 p.m. at the library.
Recreation Commission, Oct. 6 at 6:30 p.m.,
Selectmen, Sept. 28, 7 p.m. and Oct. 5, at 7 p.m.
School Committee, Oct. 7 at 7 p.m. at the high school; Sept. 25 at 10 a.m., also at the high school.
Sewer Commission, Sept. 26, 9 a.m. meeting, 10 a.m. public hearing, Town Hall auditorium.
ZBA, Oct. 7, 7:35 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Delay on Hull recycling

Town Manager Bill Griffin reported the Town of Hull has not sold close to the minimum number of permits in order to start up the cooperative effort at the Recycling Transfer Facility in Cohasset. About 100 permits have been sold in Hull; the minimum number of participants needed is 300. Griffin said the deadline has been extended to (today) Friday, Sept. 25.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Public disrespect for our president

TO THE EDITOR:

During the 51 years we have lived in Cohasset and sent our four children through the school system and during which my husband Dave Whipple was active in the School Facilities Committee and served a term on the School Committee, I have always boasted to outsiders how great it is to live in a town where people of all walks of life with different religions and political allegiances get along and work together for the good of the Town.

All of a sudden we are put to shame by publicly disrespecting the President of the United States. I can't imagine a worse lesson for impressionable young schoolchildren than this demonstration of intolerance so uncharacteristic of Cohasset.

Cohasset reaction to speech overstated

TO THE EDITOR:

Reading in last week's Cohasset Mariner the responses to Superintendent Walsh's decision not to air President Obama's speech, I am astonished. Words like "shocked" and "deeply saddened" and phrases like our children "were robbed of an inspirational and historic opportunity" and "this is an outrage" remind me of the tirades delivered on TV and talk radio (think Glenn Beck, Rush Limbaugh). One letter even invoked parts of psychiatrist Kubler-Ross' five stages of grief after the death of a loved one: "Once the denial was over and my anger began to fade, and the grief rolled in..." Are these emotions of rage and grief over the "loss" of a speech in any way comparable to the feelings of Annie Le's family or Jeffrey Curley's parents?

I heard/saw President Obama talking to American school children. It was, indeed, a fine speech, reminiscent of the ones given by President Reagan and President George H. W. Bush. There was no mention of the detailed written assignment on "how to help" the president. Perhaps if that "lesson plan" had not been included in the original speech, parents would not have objected.

Obama propaganda

TO THE EDITOR

I applaud The Cohasset School Department for having the courage not to use the schools to promote President Obama's propaganda. This administration is apparently engaged in compiling a massive database on all students in the nation. If this effort succeeds, then it will be easy to spread the failed system of socialism throughout the country.

Class schedules meant to be broken

TO THE EDITOR

The Superintendent of Cohasset Schools does not respect the office of the President of the United States. If she did, she would have known that a talk to students of the value of education is a proper thing to do. Several previous Presidents have spoken to the students with no controversy. It seems to me that the superintendent is not a "student of history."

Class schedules are meant to be broken sometimes.

Perplexed by apparent outrage

COMMENTARY

JOHN MASTROMARINO

The Superintendent was right to consider all aspects of this speech/infomercial as well as the pros and cons of adjusting the school schedule...

I would like to respond to the previously cited "controversy" reported within these pages last week surrounding the decision by the Cohasset Superintendent of Schools to forego airing the speech by President Obama to our schoolchildren. I submit the following points of view:

1. With all due respect, not everyone in this community, indeed this country, prays at the altar of Barak Obama. To many, this President's attempts, past and present, to include (by decree, if necessary) the government in virtually every aspect of our daily lives is troubling. Increasingly, Americans are rightly concerned with his overriding view that big government is there to "solve" all our problems; real or imagined. The Superintendent was right to consider all aspects of this speech/infomercial as well as the pros and cons of adjusting the school schedule and agenda for what was clearly a low impact political event.

2. The speech itself was uncontroversial, and delivered with the President's usual style and grace. Yet, the message was quite ordinary with nothing remotely profound, clever, or interesting; and it will deservingly go down in the annals of Presidential speeches as "ho hum." As such, our student/teacher's time was far better spent on more productive and lasting pursuits of educating our students.

3. I wholeheartedly agree with the point made on these pages last week that there should be a level of respect for the Office of the President; regardless of your political affiliation. Yet, I was perplexed by the apparent outrage by this rather insignificant slight to President Obama, when there was no similar protest on the regular slander, disrespect, and hate speech that was so routinely directed toward the last administration. Go figure.

4. Finally, for those who are saddened, distraught, or even clinically depressed as a result of missing President Obama's speech, take heart. He has given 268 speeches in the last 238 days; just wait a few hours and catch the next one.

Big meeting Saturday on sewer system

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project Testing – The project is currently conducting forward flow testing of the new sewer system. Previously, the system was pressure tested to make sure that there are no leaks. But in a forward flow test the new piping must be able to carry fluids as well as hold pressure. There is an interesting difference between pressure testing and a forward flow testing. Pressure testing is done under static pressure conditions, i.e. when there is no flow.

Don't forget about the BIG meeting this Saturday at 10 a.m. at Town Hall for residents in the new sewer service area to find out about the system...

Forward flow testing makes sure that fluid will, in fact, flow through the pipes. If there is an obstruction, for example, dirt or debris left in the pipe, the pipe would pass a pressure test, but may not pass a flow test. So, you can see that forward flow testing is very important prior to opening the system for use.

Important Meeting Reminder — Don't forget about the BIG meeting this Saturday at 10 a.m. at Town Hall for residents in the new sewer service area to find out about the system and how to connect your home. Don't miss it. This is your chance to get all of your questions answered by the Sewer Commission, the engineers, the drain layers and the pump distributor. The Water Commission will also be present to talk about your opportunity to upgrade water service at the same time you add sewer. In fact, it may be possible, under some conditions, to put water and sewer in the same trench saving considerable expense.

One of the most frequent questions that we receive here at our cubbyhole in Town Hall is, "When will I be able to connect to the sewer." We can't tell you when you will be able to connect, but the Project Engineer has shared the sequence in which various parts of the Little Harbor area will be connected.

Figure 1 shows an overlay of the area served by the new sewer system with various geographical areas designated as "A" through "G." These letters represent the sequence in which homes in each geographic area will be able to connect to the sewer. But, please keep in mind, this sequence may be subject to change.

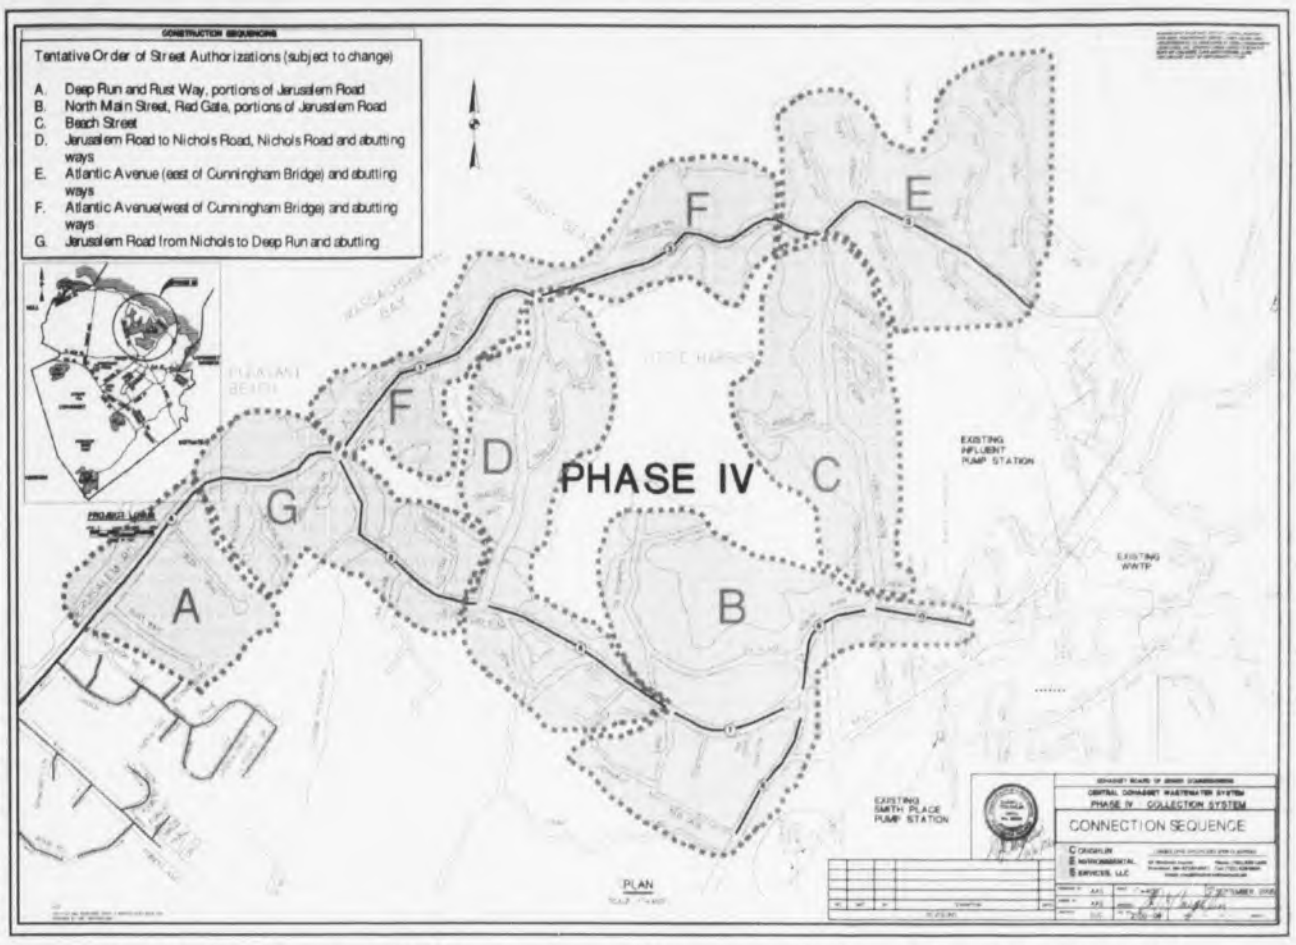

Figure 1 shows an overlay of the area served by the new sewer system with various geographical areas designated as "A" through "G."

So, for example, Deep Run and Rust Way and the intervening portion of Jerusalem Road will be the first to be permitted to connect. In fact, by prior arrangement with the Town of Hull, the sewage from this area will initially be directed toward the Hull sewer plant. There is a valve in Jerusalem Road that will permit the Cohasset Sewer Department to ultimately direct their effluent to either Cohasset or Hull at their discretion. The next area in the connection sequence will be the center of the village, which includes N. Main, Highland Ave., Red Gate Lane and the part of Jerusalem Road closest to N. Main Street.

The connection sequence is pretty much dictated by the way the piping connection to the plant is structured. Those closest to the plant along the sewer distribution line will be connected first. Those further along the line will be later in the connection sequence.

Little Harbor Paving – Currently, in addition to additional work on North Main Street and the Common area we are prepping Joy Place and Gammons Road for paving. On Joy and Gammons various shutoff valves need their final adjustment and places where the old asphalt has seriously deteriorated need to be filled. We are currently doing this work. However, mid-week we found out that there may be an obstruction somewhere on the sewer main on Gammons Road. This needs to be located and repaired before paving can commence. With any luck we hope to pave Joy Place and Gammons Road shortly.

September update on Lengyel student achievements

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

For me the beginning of another school year would be a real respite if not for the two solid hours it takes to get everyone out of the house in the morning.

So far it's been a good school year for the Lengyels. No expulsions yet, and Principal deChiara called to say she's already gotten to know Emily really well. I wish I had that kind of visibility at work sometimes.

My daughter Mary is now in sixth grade, which was a bit of a trial for my first daughter, so in August Mary and I started rehearsing for middle school, acting out different scenarios. She would say something like, "I'm a bit lost in this new school, seeing as the school is unfamiliar and new. Can you help me, Mr. or Mrs. X?" And I would say, "No." Then she would say, "I can't quite figure out how this cafeteria works, because it's a new cafeteria for me and I'd have to be a psychic to already know how it works. And psychics would have to be real. But they aren't, and I'm not. So can you help me?" And I'd come back with, "No. And you're lame."

Then she would say, "Excuse me, but I'm really stressed out because I'm going through about eight major transitions simultaneously, the adults here seem aggressively uninterested in attempting to make this experience tolerable, I feel isolated and inept, and I'm starting to hate school for the first time ever."

"You definitely should not commit suicide," I'd say.

"What?! I wasn't talking or even thinking about that. I'm eleven."

"Well, it's high time you and your friends did start thinking about it. It's messy and it's wrong. It often involves hanging."

"Okay, okay, no suicide. Fine. Now, can you just please help me understand —"

"No, but I do want you to read this book on the Holocaust. It has a vulnerable young girl in it like yourself who is treated with the most inhuman cruelty."

"And by empathizing with this girl I'll be better able to cope with the challenges of my own adolescence?"

"Are you still here, dimwit? You're late for flaggel class in room 232nfd-93."

And so on. We performed these exercises every day for a month until her skin was as thick as alligator hide, and it still didn't help. There's simply no force in a person's life more powerful than middle school. We'd all be better off working in the mills for a few years, then coming back when it's time to start dressing for the Freshman Prom.

All that said, Mary is genuinely excited to be a new foreign language student. Her assignment last night was to ask my wife and me how many foreign words we know, since we each took four years of French in High School. My wife remembered three nouns and two verbs, but I certainly wasn't going to be outdone. I came up with three verbs and five nouns, one of which was "American chop suey," but Mary can't tell French from Japanese anyway so I figured I was safe.

For me the beginning of another school year would be a real respite if not for the two solid hours it takes to get everyone out of the house in the morning. First there's the three different breakfasts, timed to each departure. Then we've got three different snacks, three different lunches containing three different snacks of their own, three different lunch boxes or bags, and three different backpacks. If you do the math, this gives me 728 chances to screw it up, and at 6:30am I can barely handle anything more complex than a hot shower. When on that rare occasion it does all somehow come together, watching that last bus pull off down the road is like watching the shuttle Atlantis leaving the launch pad.

Emily is in a nut-free, gluten-free, casein-free, egg-free class room, so her snack is extra complicated. I take a fresh wax paper bag, make sure there is no food in it, irradiate it to be absolutely certain nothing organic is in there, write "No Food" on the outside, zip it into a special lined pocket in her backpack, then suck out all the air using an industrial vacuum sealer. If she returns home looking at all nourished I know she's been snacking on the biology experiments again, and threaten to send her the next day without any empty bag.

My oldest daughter is in High School now, which means we have to start realizing just how pitifully insignificant her college fund is. I've already told her she needs to decide which she likes better: room or board. Personally I think the food at my college was overrated, so I've suggested she take the room and simply pack a bunch of trail mix.

Anyway, more important is that she decide between The College of Saint Thomas The Frugal and Our Lady of the Adjustable Rate Loan Academy. And become a nun. Supposedly you're a shoo-in at these places if you're a nun who plays Division 1 lacrosse.

HEALTH NOTES

Health Fair is Tuesday

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Cohasset Heath Fair will take place from 1 to 5 p.m., on Tuesday, Sept. 29, at Second Congregational Church. All Cohasset residents are welcome. Each year, our dedicated staff searches out the most effective and useful techniques for maintaining your personal health in the face of changing health conditions. Here, health, fitness and personal care professionals and advisers gather to provide free of charge advice, assistance and counseling for the citizens of Cohasset. Those gathered at Second Congregational Church in Bates Hall this year are dedicated to providing help. No high pressure or fancy displays and advertising; just plenty of ideas that may improve your personal situation.

Free screenings will include blood pressure, vision, cholesterol and blood sugar, oral cancer, osteoporosis (bone mineral density) chiropractic; prostate cancer screening and mental health screenings. There will be demonstrations of family emergency and disaster planning, holistic health methods including Reiki, nutrition, health food and massage therapy. We will have a representative from the Children's Melanoma Foundation to teach families about sun safety. South Shore Hospital will be on hand to fit youth bicycle helmets and perform car seat checks. Youth bicycle helmets will be given free of charge to all participants.

Featured will be:

- Blood Pressure Clinic.
- Cholesterol (total and HDL), Blood Sugar, PSA by Health Watch.
- Eat Well All the best Natural Foods- David Bigley.
- Medication Screening by Scituate Pharmacy.
- Osteoporosis – Norwell VNA.
- Oral Cancer Screening – Dr. Robin Lawrence
- PSA Testing: For those with prostate worries, we have a limited number of kits for conducting tests for prostate specific antigen, simple painless and effective.
- Vision - Cataract and Glaucoma Screening by Dr. Richard Strecker of Strecker Eye Center.
- Skin Analyzer – Melanoma Education Foundation.
- Children's Melanoma Prevention Foundation.
- Nutrition with Paula Pozniak.
- Massage Therapy – Nantasket Therapeutic Massage and Wellness Associates.
- Reiki by Linnell Reed.
- Chiropractic Care – Scituate Harbor Chiropractic.
- Holistic Health and Acupuncture.
- Mental Health; Sleep and Anxiety Screening by Peggy S. Chapman, RN, CS.
- Brain Fitness. The Board of Health seeks to expand the selection of brain fitness games available at the Paul Pratt Library and place them on a more professional and useful basis. We will investigate a number of sources for such games, however a final decision awaits the results of inquiries we have made to providers of such games. Meanwhile, we will have a laptop at the Board of Health table upon which will be installed some sample games that the BoH and Library are considering. You are welcome to try them.
- Emergency Preparedness Information Swing by to enter Raffle for free Emergency Preparedness Kits

Snacks and beverages will be provided by Stop & Shop, Shaw's, coffee from Dunkin' Donuts, ice coffee from Starbucks and Atlantic Bagel. The Health Fair is supported by donations from Pilgrim Bank, Cohasset Rotary Club and Goodwin Graphics.

We hope to see you at the fair next Tuesday.

For more information call registered nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210 or Tara Tradd 383-4116.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Delahunt adrift in Caribbean and at home

Opinion by Ray Kasperowicz, Republican Candidate for 10th Congressional District.

Our Congressman Bill Delahunt, had a busy summer interviewing Uighurs (Chinese Moslems recently released from Guantanamo) in Bermuda. Now he's back in Washington working his magic for our District. On Sept. 17th, he voted to maintain funding for ACORN, Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now. His vote defied the commonsense and sound basic instincts shared by probably 90 percent or more of citizens in the 10th District.

Despite compelling questions raised in the recent video sting by two young adults posing as a pimp and a prostitute, and the two-year public awareness of the likely illegal voter registration activities of Acorn across the country, the Congressman continues to see no evil.

He was one of only 75 other confused Congressmen to sustain funding; 345 of his fellow Congressmen were able to come to the obvious decision to suspend further funding.

Today, when tax dollars are particularly precious, taxpaying citizens need to feel that they can trust Washington to use those dollars judiciously. Based on the recent conduct of Congress, that citizen confidence is gone. It must be restored. I am convinced that Congress will have that confidence restored in 2010 through a startling overhaul of its membership.

'All' were not served by decision

COMMENTARY

JACKIE FITTS

Jackie Fitts provided the Mariner with a copy of her letter to the School Committee for publication.

I was not able to attend tonight's (Sept. 16) meeting but saw it on TV.

I'm glad the concerns were aired because they're tremendously important, as anyone who follows current events knows. Hopefully faculty will show the video as they see fit, even though that immediate sense of live communication between the President and the students of America won't happen. (I'm still wondering — did the teachers not have permission to do this in the first place — did they even need permission?) Showing it late is unfortunate, as some of you noted, because the spontaneity and sense of being part of something larger than the classroom is gone. Now it's turned into a school 'lesson' when before it was participatory.

I have a comment I'd like you, my representatives, to consider about the use of the word "all", the concept of having to air "all views." This point and the precedent it sets got lost at the end of the discussion.

The superintendent stressed part of her reasoning for not participating in the event was her obligation to honor "all our parents...". Does this mean she felt obliged to honor parents she actually knew of — or thought might exist — who didn't want their kids to hear the President? This was not a circumstance in which she needed to provide an opposing view! Does not the school believe that the words of a President (any president) would be OK?

A science teacher once told me she considered it an important part of her professional duties to provide a good explanation for why she is not teaching creationism. She actually welcomed the opportunity to discuss this. If anyone should be able to engage on this, she believed, it should be her.

Dr. Walsh indicated it would have been presumptuous to show the speech because some might not like it, and she thought this would not be respecting "all".

She did so with care backed by sure knowledge, as a teacher, as a scientist. I am sure, had our superintendent and committee allowed the school to participate in this national event, you would all have been able to provide a cogent argument to any complaint, starting, perhaps, by saying "It's the President of the U.S. — we're a public school, no reason not to hear from the President!"

"The president of the United States has asked us to facilitate his outreach to students. And in that vein, we have decided to honor the request," Wong told CNN. "We'll trust in his judgment." Wellesley superintendent Bella Wong, decided on a class-by-class basis, leaving the decision in the hands of individual teachers.

Dr. Walsh indicated it would have been presumptuous to show the speech because some might not like it, and she thought this would not be respecting "all".

There are times when thinking "all', being inclusive, makes sense, but here the sentiment is stretched way too far and makes the issue even more clumsy. This sets a precedent for the school: in the quest to "fairly include all" — don't we raise and validate fringe, even dangerous opinions?

Do people who dislike President Obama and caused this foment have to be honored by our school to the extent our school opted out?

He was elected — it's his 'pulpit', his turn. This implies that the school should always give an 'opt out' for any dissenting view. Does she see an obligation to protect every viewpoint? Are all views equal?

Imagine sending a notice to families announcing:

"We're going to show a movie a bout evolution on Friday" with or without an opt-out checkbox!

Imagine a school not having the confidence in anything it teaches: evolution, history, literature, sociology, health — by giving parents such a choice!

"Just to let you know, parents, the Army recruiters will be giving out t-shirts to our kids at lunch, you can opt out..." It gives credence to the fact that maybe this IS dangerous! ..... or "Just to let you know the Gay-Straight Alliance is putting on an assembly"... If the school is suspicious maybe I should be too, I'm not so sure about this... ... or "There's a hunting safety program..... you can let your children opt out if you want".....or "We're having a speaker from a Palestinian group.... you can opt out if you want..." or "Eli Wiesel is speaking.... you can opt out your children (we have heard some don't believe in the Holocaust and we want to avoid controversy...). "We just wanted to let you know to cover ourselves and honor your point of view."

These examples might sound extreme but they're really not — many a school system has dealt with them; the effort to de-legitimize President Obama is pretty extreme in itself. Educators should be able — and prepared in this weird world — to stand behind something like this.

This is a huge national issue, it was huge a week before the speech, and I am very sad to think our community which I thought to be enlightened and open, has had this happen. I hope it sets the course straighter for the future.

The best words I heard from the committee tonight (Sept. 16), and the superintendent, were "academic freedom". If this wise decision to simply let teachers teach had been made before the speech and teachers were encouraged or invited to simply show the speech for the sake of participating in the event, it wouldn't have been so awkward.

Poor judgment, lack of courage

COMMENTARY

HOWIE ALTHOLZ

Supt. Denise Walsh made a bad decision not to air President Obama's 15-minute back-to-school message about hard work and responsibility to students across the country. The national dustup over the speech was tinged with fear and anger. And let's face it hints of race. It would be naive to think that despite our enormous progress, we don't have a way to go on issues of racism, gender, etc. To acknowledge our flaws and move forward together is our strength.

However that's not what this issue is about in Cohasset. It's about poor judgment, a lack of courage and leadership in responding to that 'chatter'.

The decision arose from a very flawed process, parents, teachers and even School Committee members were out of the loop, and the Superintendent claimed that she didn't have enough time to seek input from the school committee. But there was a Committee meeting days before the speech and Ms Walsh never brought it up.

Made worse now, from misguided PR efforts full of misleading facts, and conflicting statements.

As I watch emails go back and forth which many of us are sharing, there is a large group, trying to figure out what happened and make it right, for our kids and community. There is widespread disappointment and outrage.

One exchange that stands out was from a McCain supporter who said simply, 'this is crazy, he's the president, with a positive back to school message for our kids". In fact John McCain himself said essentially the same thing.

Following is an account of the Sept. 16 School Committee meeting and more. Any email referenced is available.

There is also a Public Records Request to the Administration for more info.

From the much larger discussion group, about 5 of us attended the meeting. It had a murky start when Committee Member Slanetz declared that, 'Supt Walsh is a Democrat', as if that mattered. The whole point is that it is not about 'party affiliation'. It's about free speech, academic freedom for teachers, and respect for the President. No need to establish your credentials. The only 'cred' we need, are credible answers about what you did, why, and how you're going to fix it. Still waiting.

This could have been easily corrected. Take responsibility. How refreshing and teachable a moment for our kids, to simply have said, "I didn't really think it through. I was intimidated by all the inflammatory rhetoric... I'm sorry. I will fix it and move on...

Instead, the Superintendent made this about herself, her authority, and control. Add an enabling School Committee leadership and you've got a big mess, which for no good reason they drag on and on.

The Committee needs to assert their role as the eyes and ears of the community...oversight, not in the service of the Superintendent. Though all their hearts are in the right place, it was only Helen Lieb who was willing to take a definitive stand. One TV viewer characterized it as, "a dysfunctional family trying to protect their difficult aunt"...

The decision arose from a very flawed process, parents, teachers and even School Committee members were out of the loop...

Ms. Walsh talked about how she didn't have time to prepare... think things through...not enough guidance from the federal government... Yet, thousands of schools throughout the country managed. It was one of the most talked about speeches and civic/ educational events ever. All major elements vetted and discussed weeks in advance.

The Committee came to a consensus (reported in last week's Mariner) to at least allow teachers to show it, and simply notify parents... no longer any imposed 'opt-out' clause. That was clear to all of us there and who watched at home. Board members including the Chair were quoted as accepting that understanding.

Even if you take at face value, that unique among thousands of schools, Ms. Walsh lacked sufficient info, notice, guidance, etc., why would she now, knowing the content, and great experiences of kids everywhere, still cling to a mandatory op-out clause. Micro-managing the teachers' lesson plans? We have amazing committed teachers in our system and this is no way to treat them, a climate of fear and control, as has been reported.

A teacher who attended the meeting, tried to show the speech, based on the clear direction the School Committee gave Ms. Walsh to let teachers exercise their academic freedom. One of her attempts experienced 'technical difficulties', and was bumped, one was shown, and the rest cancelled right as kids were expecting to see it. Adding to their tension and sending a very bad message.

Now Supt Walsh wants to 'blame it on the State'... A Sept. 18 email from Ms. MacCarthy with Ms. Walsh's cc'd, says, "the option provision was a recommendation from the DOE...", That turns out to be not true. We obtained the letter the State sent and it contains no such thing. We spoke with the people who wrote that letter, and set the policy, of, 'total local control', no restrictions, no recommendations regarding option provisions. The letter was enthusiastic about the speech, it's positive message calling it historic. It simply asks to "respect any parent who requested their child not see it".

Here's more email spin:

- 9/9 from Supt Walsh: didn't run it but, "encouraged parents and staff to visit our Website"... anybody hear about that?
- 9/10 from Ms. MacCarthy: "Superintendent reviewed the early release of materials and found it was speech/message better heard with parents present"
- Walsh 9/8: Couldn't run it, "quite a full day of instruction planned" (speech was during lunch!?)
- 9/9 Principal Antolini: "Regarding the decision, there really wasn't one, no one asked for one to be made"
- 9/9 Antolini: not shown, 'stiff competition from lunch'
- 9/15 parents write to 5 High School social studies teachers to understand what happened, all afraid to answer, citing new 'special policies' about speaking, it passed to 3 or 4 people none can give an answer, Mr. Antolini responds and copies ALL High School AND Middle School teachers with a clear message: that Supt. Walsh wants to manage communications...

As insulting as this was to students, the President and community, think for a moment what this meant to minority students living in town, families of which we heard from, or Metco students. At the height of a justified moment of intense pride... Our school says 'sorry, he's President and it may be special to you, but not in our community', what is the message?

Doing what's right instead of expedient isn't always easy but at least you can stand tall without excuses. Leadership is about more than budget crunching, statistics and PR, it's about courage, integrity and, well... leadership.

Haunted Happenings Oct. 17

It is still unclear whether the Town Hall or other buildings in town are haunted, but the Cohasset Historical Society is going to do their best to set the record straight.

As a precursor to Halloween, the Cohasset Historical Society has put together a daylong event on Saturday, Oct. 17. Pat Martin is organizing the "Haunted Happenings in Cohasset."

"We're combining historical and paranormal elements found at Town Hall and other places in Cohasset," Martin said. For one ticket price, $15 for adults, $8 for students, there are events all day long.

"There are many things hinted at being haunted and historical," Martin said.

The Central Cemetery, all three Historical Society buildings, and the Town Hall (and its basement jail cells) will be featured. Psychic readings and a past life regression specialist will be on hand during the day as well.

The event will culminate with a live paranormal investigation at the Maritime Museum (where the ghost of Samuel Bates is rumored to live) and a sharing of ghost stories and refreshments at the Paul Pratt Building.

Cohasset Schools respect all views

COMMENTARY

SLANETZ, MACCARTHY, SCHUBERT & FLIBOTTE

In fact, contrary to the stated intent of the people making these accusations, such accusations are encouraging political and racial divisiveness and disrespect.

Editor's note: Alfred Slanetz provided the Mariner with this letter signed by himself and three other members of the School Committee.

We are writing to set the record straight regarding a decision, which was made by our Superintendent regarding a recent speech for students made by President Obama on the opening of school. We all agree that President Obama's back to school speech was inspirational and positive and eloquently communicated. We further agree that his election, inauguration are historical events and his policy accomplishments in banking, foreign policy, healthcare, and energy are admirable. In fact, Obama's Inauguration was presented live in the Cohasset High School Auditorium and all teachers were encouraged to have their students watch it. Many other Presidents have also made speeches to students on the first day of school though usually at one local school. What was different about this speech is that it was the first to be nationally televised live directly to schools. Because of this, the Department of Education in each state advised Superintendents to decide whether to show it or not and to give parents the opportunity to opt out. Like many Superintendents across the country, our Superintendent decided not to show it live to the entire school, rather to encourage teachers to use their academic freedom to incorporate the speech into their lesson plans and to actively process and discuss the address. Because of the State's recommendation and because a public school must be respectful of the views of all families, she decided that parents should be notified and given the choice to opt out.

There are some who have said that the full School Committee should have made this decision rather than the Superintendent. We feel strongly that the School Committee role is to set policy and develop a budget, and that as CEO of our schools, the Superintendent is empowered to make operational and tactical decisions within the policies. To us, a decision whether or not to air one 15-minute speech is clearly an operational decision and, as the memo regarding the Back to School speech was addressed to Superintendents, the State reinforced our view. In the greater scheme of things, the decision of how to disseminate a speech is a management decision. Nonethe-less, because we are in a democracy, we listened to the views of people who were critical of the decision during public comment period of our last meeting (Sept. 16th), even though at some points that was very difficult. The conversation at times became heated and it was hard to have a civil discourse. We have also considered opinions of appreciation and disagreement in various phone calls and emails before coming to the conclusion to support the decision that was outlined above. A consensus was reached that each teacher should exercise their academic freedom and, after some discussion, that we needed to follow the guidelines that were set forth by the State with regards to respecting the request of any parent who asks that their child not participate.

There have been some who have made accusations that this decision was politically motivated, racially motivated, that we were disrespectful of the President. Such a misrepresentation of intent is dangerous and has been used throughout history to perpetuate divisiveness and hatred. In fact, contrary to the stated intent of the people making these accusations, such accusations are encouraging political and racial divisiveness and disrespect.

Every member of our School Committee and our Administration make decisions based upon the principles that all children are entitled to the best free and appropriate public education which we can provide. We respect each individual's ideas, accomplishments, and contributions to society. We are agnostic with regard to political affiliation, race, gender, and sexual orientation. We respect and highly regard the President and other leaders who are trying to make the world a better place and try to live by their example. While we do not know him personally, based upon his example, we are sure that President Obama would share our dismay with the tactics and behavior of our critics. We believe that the time has come to move forward in a constructive fashion to continue the pursuit of excellence in our schools.

Freedom not to listen

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset has many fine attributes, including the amusement afforded by the occasional inanities of some of its denizens. For instance, the outrage expressed by a few residents because the school superintendent failed to expose all children to a speech by the current President in which he trotted out an eloquent exposition of all possible bromides on education. Surely there will be a few hundred more opportunities for the credulous to be enthralled by his rhetoric, so surely there was no pressing need to subject a captive audience of all children to it. To suggest that the students were cheated of a rare opportunity is ridiculous.

It would be a bad precedent, setting the stage for mandatory exposure of our children to whatever each future President wants to promote. Not exactly how democracy is supposed to work. The President at least had the political savvy not to request mandatory exposure; that was left to his overheated acolytes.

I don't recall any demand, in the past, for universal exposure of students to the speechifying of a President of the either political party. That the speech was expected to be, and proved to be, confined to education is no excuse for demanding universal and involuntary exposure to it.

Maybe we shouldn't be amused, but be dismayed, that a basic principle of democracy was ignored – the freedom to listen to, or not to listen to, whatever politician we choose, whatever the subject.

Apologize and air President's address

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm not sure what's worse – the sad fact that, due to a deeply flawed and absurdly timid decision-making process, our children were deprived of the historic and meaningful experience of witnessing an address written expressly for and delivered directly to them by the President of the United States — or the disingenuousness, highly questionable judgment and unwillingness to accept responsibility for a mistake that has been demonstrated by our Superintendent, Principals and School Committee.

Not only did they employ an inscrutable, unjustifiable and opaque process to come to their determination – but they legitimized the manufactured controversy surrounding this event and placed Cohasset squarely in the reprehensible fray of those attempting to de-legitimize our President. And — to add insult to injury — they continue to defend and rationalize their indefensible and wholly unreasonable position.

The defend-and-rationalize effort includes two embarrassing and ridiculous ideas — to air the President's speech couched in an utterly unrelated lesson plan, such as one on public speaking or in Spanish class, translating the speech into Spanish — to suggest that the President's speech should not stand alone as having value and authenticity. The other offensive notion provides an opt-out for parents — implying that there might be something about the messenger or his message that your kids shouldn't hear.

If only those mentioned above had taken the President's message to heart — personal responsibility, learning from our mistakes, and using those mistakes as a teaching tool to enable us to do better the next time, they would seriously consider the request by parents in attendance at last Wednesday's Committee meeting — to apologize for a badly made and damaging decision; to air the address to our children based on its own considerable merit; and not to offer an offensive opt out. In so doing, they would send the clear message to our children and community that their decision to not show the President's address was wrong and regrettable, that they have the sense of civic duty and maturity to admit it, and the desire to right a wrong.

Step up to the accountability plate, Dr. Walsh and members of our School Committee — and do the right thing by our students, community and nation — apologize and air the President's address to our students.

Forum for veterans set for Oct. 24

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services and community veterans service organizations will host a forum for veterans, dependents and surviving spouses at St. Anthony Parish hall, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 24. All Cohasset residents are welcome.

The forum will help assure that all who are entitled to assistance are aware of the local, state and federal programs designed to assist those in need. It is hoped that those who attend will ask questions and communicate what they learn to local veterans and their families as well as their extended friends and relatives. Emphasis will be placed on giving attendees the opportunity to participate.

Individual letters will be sent to all Cohasset veterans who have registered in the annual census. However, the census makes no provision for identifying surviving spouses. The forum will highlight information sometimes unknown to surviving spouses, answer questions and help if needed and possible.

Sub-committee discusses maintenance plan

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The turf field requires a grooming for every 90 hours of field use (roughly every month) and a regular schedule of disinfectant/cleaning.

There is much excitement around Cohasset at the opening of the Alumni Field synthetic turf field this weekend.

Cohasset High Skippers football team takes on the Scituate Sailors tonight (Friday, Sept. 25) under the lights of Alumni Field. A short dedication and thank you ceremony will precede kick-off.

Yet, with any new and expensive town asset comes the question of how to maintain it and utilize it fairly and equitably.

That was the issue taken up at a School Committee facility fee sub-committee meeting on Wednesday night. With the turf field's grand opening less than 48 hours away, various town officials and community members gathered to hammer out the details pertinent to the care and scheduling of the field.

For the many years Alumni Field was a grass field the Department of Public Works (DPW) did the majority of the maintenance work on the field. Now that the majority of the area does not need mowing or the constant attention a grass field demands, some suggested the maintenance be taken on by another entity.

Facilities manager Brian Adams said he would like to see the maintenance and care of the field be overseen by a single department.

"Ideally I'd go through the facilities department, in a perfect world that's the way it should go," Adams said. However, he was concerned his department could not handle the extra work within its current budget.

Adams and others had consulted with other high schools with turf field to see what maintenance is required and who was responsible.

The turf field requires a grooming for every 90 hours of field use (roughly every month) and a regular schedule of disinfectant/cleaning. Yet, there were other incidental chores — setting up for a game, cleaning up after an event, opening and closing the facility. Pembroke has a full-time position that takes care of everything field-related.

"There is not set form across the state as to how it's done," said George McGoldrick, president of the Cohasset Sports Partnership.

Both School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy and Superintendent Denise Walsh asked Adams, Athletic Director Ron Ford and the DPW get together and put together a draft plan for the care of the field.

"This could be an opportunity to grow the facilities department. With one million in resources out in that field, we don't want someone to say we didn't maintain (that asset)," Walsh said.

Through the building and field use fees set out by the School Committee last spring, the hope is to cover the expenses associated with the maintenance of the synthetic turf field.

Under the new recreation field policy, there are several tiers but non-profit youth group/booster user groups are charged $10 per head; $5 goes into the general fund or $5 goes to recreation revolving fund for field maintenance.

Custodial fees, energy surcharge, Alumni Field lights are all additional charges when applicable to the event or game. At least for the first year, Ford will handle the scheduling of the turf field.

With the needs set out, the fee schedule clear and a maintenance proposal being worked on, School Committee member Paul Schubert said he did not expect the facilities sub-committee to need to meet for the next few months.

"It should be on auto-pilot," Schubert said.

Turf Field ribbon cutting Sept. 25

The new turf field at the Clark Chatterton Athletic complex will officially be opened on Friday night Sept. 25 at 6:30 before the High School football game. Come join town and school officials along with members of the Cohasset Sports Partnership, the Cohasset Booster groups and student athletes young and old as the field is officially opened with a ribbon cutting.

Arrive early to see the refinished track and the new field. Stay and watch the Skippers take on neighboring rival Scituate in a battle of gridiron greats. Kickoff is at 7 p.m. It's no longer Got Turf? It's Got Turf !

Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club invites the public to take part in its walk to support cancer research. The walk will take place at 10 a.m., on Sunday, Sept. 27, on Minot Beach, beginning and ending at the entrance across from Bailey's Causeway.

All donations should be made by check to Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. At least a $10 donation per family is requested. Beth Golden and Kim Carvette will be on hand to collect and send checks to Dana-Farber. For more information, call Golden at 617-312-5572.

Green Buildings holds open houses

See how your neighbors are reducing their energy bills and carbon footprint through the power of the sun, wind, and smart building design from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 3, the Northeast Sustainable Energy Association is welcoming the public to visit the homes of Chartis and Ned Tebbetts at 9 Jerusalem Road Drive, Andrew Willard at 37 Stockbridge St., and Mike Bliss at 76 Summer St. The public is also encouraged to visit other local sustainable homes and buildings throughout Massachusetts and the Northeast to see clean renewable energy at work.

The Green Buildings open house is presented in conjunction with the American Solar Energy Society's National Solar Tour. Homeowners and facility managers will be showing visitors the latest in renewable energy technologies, sustainable building materials, and energy efficient appliances. Visit: www.nesea.org.

Pumpkin Patch is coming!

Cohasset's seventh annual Pumpkin Patch will be open 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., from Oct. 10 through Halloween, at Wheelwright Park. On weekends, tractor rides and face painting will be available. The Pumpkin Patch is completely staffed by volunteers, and between 170 to 190 volunteers will work at the Patch.

All profits from this fundraiser will go to directly support the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project.

Favors interim appointment

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

I voted to authorize the Governor to appoint a person to serve until a permanent successor has been elected at the January 2010 special election.

Regardless of your political affiliation, I think we can all agree that on Aug. 25, the citizens of Massachusetts lost a powerful and effective leader in Sen. Edward Kennedy. Over the next few months, leading up to the Jan. 19 special election, voters will face the challenge of choosing a person to succeed Sen. Kennedy. I have consistently advocated that the people should choose their next Senator by a "quick" election. The election date has been set and I will not vote to change this.

However, the contentious and unprecedented challenges we now face as a Commonwealth have brought a vigorous debate over whether a person ought to be appointed to temporarily fill the vacant seat until a successor is elected by the people on Jan. 19. I have been contacted by many residents of the Third Plymouth District who have called, written or sent e-mails expressing their opinions on both sides of this issue. I appreciate the valuable feedback which I have received from both supporters and opponents of the legislation. I believe both sides make valid arguments.

Some suggest that it is hypocritical to change the law. However, the current bill does not simply revert us to the pre-2004 law. Before the 2004 change, the Governor could appoint someone to serve until the next general election, which could be up to two years later. The change in 2004 stated that the special election must be held within 160 days of the vacancy. However, that law had no mechanism to fill the vacancy during that 160-day period, the current bill simply corrects this flaw. In 2004, if Sen. Kerry was elected President, he would have remained in Washington to advocate on behalf of Massachusetts, a luxury we unfortunately do not have today. Also, some have suggested that since Sen. Kennedy missed many votes while fighting his illness, we have already been under represented. I disagree. The Senate is built on seniority, relationships and great staff work. There is no doubt in my mind that Sen. Kennedy, and his staff, did more in the last four months than any temporary interim Senator could in the next four.

Massachusetts in 2009 is not the same Massachusetts as in 2004. This year, an actual vacancy does exist, and that loss will affect federally funded local projects in a very real way. For example, under Sen. Kennedy's leadership, the state received $50 million for the National Guard and other military services, funding for wind turbines in Hull and money for the redevelopment of the former Weymouth Naval Air Base. According to our Congressional delegation, these funds are at risk without full Senate support — funds that will be voted on before Jan. 19. Furthermore, under federal rule, Sen. Kennedy's office must stop helping Massachusetts residents and close. If an interim Senator is appointed, the office will remain open to assist residents until January. Our Congressional Delegation has indicated that 2009 has seen unprecedented requests for assistance from residents.

After much thought, deliberation and feedback from my constituents, I have concluded that it is in the best interests of my district, and the entire Commonwealth, to ensure that Massachusetts maintains full representation in Congress by having two U.S. Senators doing the people's business in Washington. I voted to authorize the Governor to appoint a person to serve until a permanent successor has been elected at the January 2010 special election. My preference would be to ban that person from seeking the office; however it seems clear from recent federal case law, that doing so is unconstitutional. However, I voted for a resolution calling on the Governor to exact from this person a promise not to run. My steadfast belief is that a permanent successor must be chosen by the voters at a "quick" statewide election — a belief rooted in respect for the Constitutional powers and the power of the electorate.

By passing this legislation, Massachusetts will join 47 other states that currently allow for an immediate appointment to fill U.S. Senate vacancies. Some follow this with a "quick" special election. Only three states do not allow for full representation, Massachusetts is one of them. This needs to be corrected.

Furthermore, this vote does not represent a vote for or against any one bill or issue. It represents a commitment to delivering consistent and efficient constituent services and federal funding for local projects in Massachusetts.

Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and one precinct in Scituate.

School-based vaccinations for H1N1

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said the school system has been getting guidance on a daily basis about the H1N1 (swine flu) and expected vaccination later this fall.

Recently, school administration, the Board of Health, principals, school nurses sat in on a two-hour statewide conference call about preparation and planning for H1N1.

"I want to let the (school) committee know we feel comfortable with plans in place," Walsh said. H1N1 vaccinations are expected to be distributed in October, but as of right there is no clear date.

Walsh said school-based H1N1 vaccinations will be given at the Middle-High School later this fall (dates to be determined). Consent forms will be distributed to parents once more in known on the timing.

The town will also run family flu clinics for residents over age 3 in the evening and/or weekend. There will be no school-based flu vaccination clinics for the Osgood or Deer Hill Schools.

The town has ordered 900 doses of the H1N1 vaccine. Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin said.

Residents are asked to be vigilant about washing their hands, coughing into their elbow and staying home from school or work when sick, Goodwin said.

More information about the flu can be found at www.mass.gov/flu.

CHS Class of '99 reunion

The Cohasset High School Class of 1999 10 year reunion will take place from 7:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., on Friday Nov. 27, at the Red Lion Inn Cave. This is an opportunity for everyone to share memories from their years at CHS. Admission to the reunion is free. Music and appetizers will be provided and there will be a cash bar so bring money to purchase drinks.

For more information, e-mail Jill Magner at cohasset99@gmail.com or Alyssa McNamara Reed at pumkinpumper@gmail.com.

Minot Light letter of interest

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously this week to send a letter of interest to the US General Services Administration in regards to their disposition of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse.

"It doesn't bind (the town) and it keeps our chips in the game, so to speak," said Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson on Monday.

The Town of Cohasset in recent weeks has met with interested parties in Scituate to discuss the possibility of partnering in the effort to preserve Minot Light.

Cohasset's Dana Valentine and Will Lynner celebrate a big play as Hingham players fall in their wake during the Skippers' 34-21 win at Hingham, Friday.

Sailors to help open new field

By William Wassersug

There's no shortage of big games for the Cohasset football team this season, even before the games that count (South Shore League games) begin.

Last week it was Hingham in the first regular season game between the teams.

Friday, the Skippers host Scituate in another big one.

While the Scituate game is a non-league match, there is much at stake – mostly bragging rights between two very good teams located just minutes away from each other on Route 3A.

There's also the fact that the game marks the first game on Cohasset's new turf field.

Originally that honor was going to be for Quincy, but the field wasn't ready so that game moved to Quincy's Veterans Memorial Stadium and left the opener to Scituate.

Again, this game matches two teams that have been playing very good football.

Friday vs. Scituate 7 p.m. kickoff

Scituate opened the season with a 32-0 win over Carver and followed with a 30-6 win at Medfield.

Football

For Cohasset, the Skippers opened with a 39-0 win at Quincy, led by Dana Valentine's 148 yards and three touchdowns.

The encore was a thrilling 34-21 win over Hingham.

Valentine led the way in that one as well, with 222 yards on the ground.

"Valentine has carried them in the I formation," Scituate coach Herb Devine said. "We'll have to stop him. That's hard to do. He's athletic, powerful and a strong runner. If you try to tackle him with one guy you won't stop him. You have to tackle as a team. If one guy is trying to stop him alone it's going to be a long night."

Devine was scouting the Hingham game up close.

He said after a while the scouting part turned into something else.

"As a coach you're scouting the game," he said. "But after a time you start enjoying it. I was enjoying watching Valentine. He's as good a back as we'll see all year."

Unfortunately for Scituate, Valentine isn't the only thing the Sailors have to beware of.

"When you think Cohasset, you think Valentine," Devine said. "But they really have a bal-

Skippers run over Harbormen

It was only a ten minute bus ride from Hingham High School back to Cohasset, but for this ride, the Skippers probably wouldn't have minded a longer jaunt.

Utilizing just about everything they had, both offensively and defensively, they scored a 34-21 win over Hingham on Friday afternoon at Hingham High School.

In the first regular season meeting between the neighboring teams Cohasset's depth, along with another big game by Dana Valentine, gave the team an edge down the stretch.

Valentine ran for 222 yards and quarterback Jeff Cavanaro tossed a pair of touchdown passes, one to to Brendan Doonan and another to Dean Driscoll and ran for another as the Skippers rolled.

Football

On the other side of the ball, the defense was overwhelming early on and late in the game when it had a lead to protect.

"I have to give the defense credit," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They were wearing their hitting shoes. They took the fight to Hingham. This is a team that wants to punish people."

The Skippers defensive attack may have changed the game when it knocked Hingham starting quarterback Jake Quinn out of the game in the first quarter, leaving the helm to backup Harry Rein, who played well, especially in the first half when he led the Harbormen to a 14-7 lead on a pair of touchdown passes to Robert Maguire.

The Skippers caught an early break when an apparent interception return by Hingham's Brendan Butler for a touchdown was called back.

Whether it was an inadvertent whistle or Cavanaro's knee hit the ground before he tried to throw the ball away and tossed it right to Butler was still a question long after the game. Tapes were inconclusive, according to Afanasiw.

Either way, he wasn't complaining.

Hingham still got the ball back on the fourth down play, but were forced to punt three plays later.

"That interception would have been huge," Afanasiw said. "That was a huge momentum swing. We

Girls soccer on an even keel

Lady Skippers 2-2 and looking to improve

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Unlike many teams that have some time to work out some kinks and figure things out before getting into league play, the Cohasset girls soccer team jumped right into the fray this season, taking on the South Shore League right from the start.

After losing four starters, three who are now playing Div. 1 college soccer, things are not too bad.

"We are sitting at 2-2 in the South Shore League with no nonleague games played yet," Cohasset coach Deb Beal said. "We will face Notre Dame Academy, Plymouth North and Duxbury before we wrap up our season."

Beal said the team is working hard to continually improve.

"So far so good," she said. "We are as expected, struggling in some areas but when I say struggling I do not by any means mean overwhelmed. We have some kids shuffling around right now as my JV coach Christine Taggart and I are trying to find the 11 best players to do the work. Luckily I have lots of selections and many kids who are doing great things on the field."

"They are an ambitious and hard working group of student athletes and figuring out lineups and creating game-like situations is challenging but as we grow tighter as a team the little things will all fall into place,"
Coach Deb Beal

Cohasset started with a long road trip.

" We opened with Harwich which is never an easy bus ride, and its always frightening to me as to how we are going to respond to traveling for close to 80 minutes and having 20 minutes to warm-up," Beal said. " Well, needless to say we were ready as we cruised by them 5-2. It was our first game and I saw my kids working hard and creating space and opportunities. Rachel Fredey led the way with two goals that afternoon along with Caroline Fein, Dominique Rioux and Christine Coner adding one apiece."

Things got tougher in the next game.

"After Harwich it was back to business as we had Norwell after the weekend," Beal said about the Clippers, who have been dominating everyone this season. "We had some work to do after that game. We seemed ready to play and fired up but gave up a goal less than one minute into the match and it was really tough to overcome that. I don't feel that they were a better team than us and I think the kids feel the same way. It was early in the season and we had some regrouping to do. We are working through some things and I think when we meet them again it will be a better showing on our part."

Girls' Soccer

After Norwell, Cohasset had another trip.

"There was no rest as two days later we traveled to East Bridgewater to face off against the newly moved to Division 2 Vikings," Beal said. "We will not have to face them come tournament time this year as they have moved up a division."

That is good news to Beal.

"EB's field is one of the worst in the league," she said. "It has grass, dirt, and very uneven terrain. It's truly a home field advantage. Certainly not making excuses but we didn't come out ready to play. The field was wet and we were slow. EB was a physical game that took us too long to adjust to and we put ourselves in a situation where someone had to score and we couldn't do it, we had plenty of opportunities just no one finished it off."

The rough game has the veteran coach back at the drawing board.

" I am not by any means discouraged," she said. "I am confident we will find our path and we will follow it. We traveled to Carver Tuesday night and took advantage of the beautiful night and field. We came out ready to play and took an early lead off goals by Christine Coner and Mackenzie Hart. After continuing our attack and gaining a four-goal lead with the addition of two goals by Caroline Fein I was able to adjust our lineup and try some individuals in some new formations in a game situation. That really helps. I am still trying to develop our most efficient defensive plan whether we go four in the back or just a flat three."

Again, Beal said filling the roles of her departed players has been a challenge.

"Our central midfield is a spot that needs some development," she said, adding that occasionally her players may think and overanalyze things. "The girls do a great job but I think we are well on our way to success if we can transition and disperse the ball more efficiently. Our forwards have done a really nice job creating opportunities for themselves and now if I can just get them to piece it all together, the hard work will be done. I fear that sometimes they just forget how simple the game is and how easy it could be if they 'just played'".

Beal is confident her team will come together and will be a force come playoff time. She's also excited about playing on the school's new turf field, which opens Friday night with a football game.

"They are an ambitious and hard working group of student athletes and figuring out lineups and creating game-like situations is challenging but as we grow tighter as a team the little things will all fall into place," Beal said. "Once we get our feet on the ground of our new turf field I think you'll see the style of play we have been practicing really start to blossom as we take advantage of the surface and the space. I am so thrilled to have a turf field and I know the kids are really getting excited to get on it and practice."

The most important things are beyond the wins and losses.

"The seniors are doing a wonderful job including everyone in team activities and making sure all the players are comfortable and having fun," she said. "Fun is what it is all about and it does make our coaching job much easier when the kids are excited to be there and productive in practice.

Cohasset is at Mashpee on Tuesday.

Breaks go both ways for field hockey

Unlucky bounce in Harwich, huge goal in Scituate dictate outcomes

The Cohasset varsity field hockey team suffered a tough 1-0 loss to Harwich at home last Thursday in a game with two closely matched teams.

"The two teams were closely matched which made for an exciting game," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "The Cohasset defense anchored by senior captain Lucy Noble, and juniors Sarah Mavilia and Emily Toomey played heroically, containing the powerful Harwich offense. Unfortunately, with only a few seconds left in the first half, Harwich got a lucky bounce that ended up in the goal. Cohasset waged an aggressive offense against Harwich, but was unable to score."

It didn't take long to recover.

With no time to dwell on the Harwich outcome, Cohasset went on to win a thrilling 1-0 match against Scituate the next day in Scituate.

Field Hockey

"Although the power and intensity of the Cohasset midfielders Izzy Franklin, Kelsey Erler and Sage Stebbins largely contributed to Cohasset's offensive domination of the game, the score remained 0-0 with only a minute remaining," Giuliano recounted. "In the final minute of the game Cohasset made one more push toward the goal. Forward Caitlin DeAngelis received a pass at the Scituate 30 yard-line and then connected with forward Olivia Murphy who redirected the ball into the goal with only five seconds remaining in the game."

On Tuesday, Sept. 22, Cohasset played Mashpee to a 0 - 0 tie in Mashpee.

"The Mashpee goalie proved to be a force to be reckoned with and, despite having 20 shots on goal, Cohasset was unable to score," Giuliano said. "Again, the Cohasset defense was instrumental in keeping Mashpee out of the scoring circle, holding them to only five shots on goal through the game."

The JV beat Mashpee 2-1 with both goals from sophomore midfielder Christie Fitzgerald

Cohasset Junior Varsity also won 6 - 1 against the Norwell freshman team on Wednesday.

Midfielder Amber Silvia had a hat trick in addition to goals by Christie Fitzgerald, Kylie Coffman, and Charlotte O'Callaghan.

Border war resumes Friday in Cohasset

anced attack. They're disciplined. They have two good receivers (Brendan Doonan and Dean Driscoll). They're very disciplined. You really can't stop them. You have to contain them, slow them down."

Offensively, Devine said the key will be to grind out drives and keep Cohasset's offense off the field.

"We have to grind out first downs and establish our own running game," he said. "We have to get as many first downs as we can get. We have to pick up three, four or five yards a pop and keep their offense off the field. That's what we'll have to do to be successful."

In the first two games, Scituate has relied on a balanced attack led by first-year quarterback Tyler Park, who has tossed four touchdowns and has yet to throw an interception.

Cohasset knows they're in for a battle as well.

"This will not be an easy task," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "They're a very good team. They're very well coached and they have a lot of athletes. They've really progressed over the last two years."

Afanasiw said his team will look to Valentine, but the game won't be dictated by one player.

"Every week we try to be as balanced as we can be. We take what the other team is giving and see what we can do with it. If they're putting ten men on the line of scrimmage, we don't run the ball."

Afanasiw said the excitement level of the game has been upped with the opening of the school's new turf field.

"It has been so tantalizing," he said. "Our practice field overlooks the game field. The kids have seen it in all different stages. Now they see the field done, but can't use itbecause the track wasn't finished. The kids are antsy, the coaches are antsy. Everyone is just excited to get out there."

As for the bragging rights, it isn't just proximity.

"These kids play youth football together," Afanasiw said. "They play other sports against each other. They play some (Legion baseball for one) together. The kids know who everyone is. I think it makes it a little more enjoyable."

For Scituate, Devine said his squad has played well, and hopes to keep it up.

"Against Medfield we had a good game plan," he said. "We knew what we wanted to do. We saw a few things on film that we wanted to take advantage of. We were able to do that. We got a 17-0 first quarter lead and consistently had good field position. We executed well."

In the Carver game, Scituate had a few early issues, leading just 6-0 at the half before taking control in the second half.

"Guys were doing the wrong things, making mistakes in the first half," Devine said. "We cleaned it up in the second half."

Devine agreed that his team is excited.

"I think it's something the kids are looking forward to," he said. "The kids all know each other, both teams have been successful. Many of the kids played youth football together. After we play them the kids are rooting for Cohasset to win. This is a good rivalry. We're looking forward to it."

could have been down 14-0 and that would have been a tough situation."

Trailing 14-7 with 4:22 left in the first half, Cohasset tied the game with a 35-yard touchdown run by Valentine, who found room on the right side and took it home.

The Skippers struck again on their next drive, going 85 yards for a touchdown on a 22-yard pass from Cavanaro to Doonan with 13 seconds left in the half.

Doonan and Driscoll hooked up on a 15-yarder with 6:51 left in the third quarter for a 27-14 lead.

Hingham wasn't giving up though.

The Harbormen were forced to punt on their next possession, but forced a fumble on the play, setting up a first down at the Cohasset 25.

Three plays and two Cohasset penalties later, Anthony Cappella punched through for a three-yard score that cut the lead to 27-21 with Rein's kick.

Cohasset put the game away with 2:11 left on a five-yard touchdown run by Flibotte on a short drive that started at the Hingham 14 after the Harbormen turned the ball over on downs.

The game was a special one for both sides, and both teams came in on the heels of one-sided victories.

"We've been waiting for this game," Valentine said. "We've always scrimmaged them, but this time, being real, it was magnified by ten times. Everyone was fired up for this game."

Valentine and Anafasiw had plenty of credit to go around, and both felt Cohasset may have had the edge late in the game through depth.

"They have a lot of athletes who play both sides," Valentine said. "We don't have as many guys who play both sides. I think our defense punished their quarterback and ball carriers.

Afanasiw said the same.

"They had guys playing both sides," he said. "Our guys were fresher at the end."

Valentine enjoyed the game, his second big one of the season.

"It was fun," he said. "Everyone did a great job. The offensive line did a great job. Without them, I'm nothing. I was just running hard, keeping my shoulders low and my eyes up."

Mother of 2 Loses 45 Pounds in 4 Months!

BEFORE

"I lost 45 lbs in 4 months! If I can do it anyone can! I started going to Get In Shape For Women not because I was eager to join a gym, but because I needed to do something. I was 100 pounds overweight and embarrassed to be so out of shape. After watching the "Biggest Loser" on the couch it hit me. I didn't need another "eat less" diet. I needed to get outside of my comfort zone and start exercising. I was terrified because I have never been to a gym or exercised before. Regardless I picked up the phone and made the call. That was the hardest part.

As soon as you walk through the door at Get In Shape For Women you're not alone. You have the support and guidance of a personal trainer. The trainers work with you no matter what your fitness level is. They push you to do things that you never thought you could do. If you've ever seen the show "The Biggest Loser" that is how the contestants lost their weight. They exercised in a group with a personal trainer. That's what you get at Get In Shape For Women. I have never lost weight this fast before. In addition to losing 45 lbs I've also lost over 8% body fat and dropped four pant sizes. The results are amazing! I can't recommend it enough.

SCHOOLS

AP Scholar awards add up at CHS

About 18 percent of the 1.6 million students worldwide who took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to also earn an AP Scholar Award.

Forty-two students at Cohasset High School have earned AP Scholar awards in recognition of their achievement on AP Exams.

The College Board's Advanced Placement Program provides motivated and academically prepared students with the opportunity to take college-level courses while still in high school, and to earn college credit, advanced placement, or both, for successful performance on the AP Exams. About 18 percent of the 1.6 million students worldwide who took AP Exams performed at a sufficiently high level to also earn an AP Scholar Award.

At Cohasset High School:

Fifteen students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams. These students are Marcus Barrett, Lennart Brown, Jennifer Cahill, Melissa Castro, Jonathan Choi, Brittany Dunn, Jessica Fitts, Margaret Goodwin, Fiona McBride, Kristen Monaco, David Oddleifson, Erika Orner, Charles Sceery, Graham Sinclaire and David Toomey.

Nine students qualified for the AP Scholar with Honor Award by earning an average grade of at least 3.25 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on four or more of these exams. These students are Christine Coner, James Earle, Cameron Lucitt, Amanda Masotta, Alyssa Mullin, Megan Richardson, Dominique Rioux, Stephanie Smith and Timothy Treese.

Eighteen students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Exams with grades of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are Lauren Allen, Madeline Altholtz, Andrew Bell, Johanna Brophy, Melissa Campedelli, Jamie Canavan, Paige Collins, Aisling Kearns, Terrence MacCormack, Caitlin Mahoney, Margaret McGoldrick, Rachel McMorris, Austin Meyers, Kate O'Callaghan, Conor Ofsthun, Christopher O'Grady, Ian Porter and William Wise.

Through 37 different college-level courses and exams, AP provides students with the opportunity to earn college credit or advanced placement and stand out in the college admissions process. Each exam is developed by a committee of college and university faculty and AP teachers, ensuring that exams are aligned with the same high standards expected by college faculty at some of the nation's leading liberal arts and research institutions. AP is accepted by more than 3,600 colleges and universities worldwide for college credit, advanced placement, or both on the basis of successful AP Exam grades. This includes more than 90 percent of four-year institutions in the United States. The College Board is a not-for-profit membership organization whose mission is to connect students to college success and opportunity.

Meet and Greet for Dr. Messina

The Parent Advisory Council and Cohasset PSO invites all parents and staff to join them to "Meet and Greet" the new director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina. This is an opportunity for the Cohasset community to meet Messina and learn about her experience, background and philosophy regarding student services in Cohasset.

The Meet and Greet will take pace at 7:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Oct. 6, in the Osgood School Library, located behind Deer Hill School.

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

What made Monday so special? It was the first chicken Parmesan day at lunch for the 2009-2010 school year!

Hello, hello. Sorry I missed you all last week. I was busy preparing for surgery but that's all done with now so I am back writing Life at CHS after a weeklong hiatus. But I'm not paid to write about me so I'll get back on track and write about what's going on in Cohasset High School (which I'm also not paid to write about).

Update on the student council and their plans for this year; the very dedicated members of the student council this year have been meeting weekly in order to prepare for spirit week, the homecoming pep rally, and the homecoming dance. This year's student council members are refusing to settle for your average homecoming week.

The student council has already come up with a themed homecoming dance, called "Glow Jam". Trust me when I say it, "Glow Jam" will be the most exciting dance in all of Cohasset High School's history. The details are not yet set in stone but I will fill all you loyal readers in once they are. Let's just say it will be a "lights out" kind of event…

My fellow student council members and I are also looking to spice up the pep rally as it has been lacking what is known as "fun" in the last few years. Again, changes are coming, but not yet set in stone. The spirit week themed days are also looking to be incredible. Sorry, I can't reveal these yet either because they have all not been agreed upon.

I would just like to point out that the student council is only composed of 12 brilliant minds. Suggestions from all the other brilliant minds out there are greatly appreciated because 12 people can only be so creative. Please, I encourage any of you with an idea to share it with me or anyone else on the student council in order to make this the best year possible.

Perhaps one of the most exciting days of the year was on Monday the 21st…okay maybe its not that exciting for your average person, but for me the day was exhilarating. What made Monday so special? It was the first chicken Parmesan day at lunch for the 2009-2010 school year! SO exciting right?!? Oh my goodness the way the cheese folds over the tender chicken only to be smothered by the delicious red sauce…absolutely scrumptious!...Wow…excuse me for that little outburst there. That was my alter-ego Chicken ParmeSEAN talking…very unprofessional. Probably won't happen again…I think…

Let's talk sports. While we're at it, let's talk holidays too because it seems to be that every Friday is now Valentine's Day. Nope, not St. Valentine's Day, but Dana Valentine's Day. Only two games into the season, my fellow senior, Dana, has split the Quincy's opposing defense and shredded Hingham's field apart running for 222 yards against the Harbormen. This is no solo effort though, as the Skippers defense has been phenomenal, in particular, their brick wall of a defensive line. Also, Jeff Cavanaro has done an outstanding job commanding the offence at Quarterback.

On to European Football, or Soccer as we Americans call it. Boy's soccer is on a roll after a few seriously ridiculous Andrew Littauer headers on net. After a rough 0-3 start, the Skipper boys soccer is currently on a 3-game win streak defeating, in order, East Bridgewater, Cape Cod Academy, and Carver. Girls soccer is also having a great season, only having one slip up against their rival, Norwell.

Field Hockey is having somewhat of a rough start starting out under the .500 mark again. They were robbed of a victory against Harwich after a few poor calls from the referees during the game. I've been told they will redeem the loss, so watch out all you other field hockey teams…

That's all I got for this week. I hope my long article made up for me missing last week's article. Although there hasn't been an abundance of events in the school, out on the fields Cohasset High students have been busy. Go out and continue to support them as both girls and boys soccer take on Hull and the football team looks to knock out Scituate. It is very important you go to the football game because it is the first game on the new turf field. It will be epic. It's been a really good start to the year in CHS and things can't get much better.

Check the paper next week to see whether I am smart enough to remember I have to write this article again. Peace out.

Sean MacCarthy used to love playing with crutches but hates them now that he has to use them all day, every day.

Buttonwood hosts Beary Special Story Time

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host a Beary Special Story Time to celebrate the release of "Return to the Hundred Acre Wood," the first sequel ever to be approved by the Trustees of the Pooh Properties, at 1 p.m., on Sunday, Oct. 4, at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset.

"Return to the Hundred Acre Wood" by David Benedictus is a companion volume to the classic "Winnie-the-Pooh" and "The House at Pooh Corner." Children are invited to bring their favorite teddy bear and settle in to listen to a new story about Winnie the Pooh, enjoy bear-shaped treats and join in Pooh Bear activities.

Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 for more information.

MamaSteph at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books & Toys will join bookstores across the country by hosting a special story time to read "The Very Hungry Caterpillar." Jumpstart, a national early education organization, has designated Oct. 8 "Read for the Record" day. The goal is to break the record for the number of people reading the same book on the same day. The purpose is to direct people's attention to at-risk young readers.

Buttonwood will present Mama Steph, musician, songwriter and children's musical entertainer, at 4 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 8, to read "The Very Hungry Caterpillar" and entertain children with her songs and musical program. Additional activities will include a craft and refreshments.

Read for the Record is a national campaign organized by Jumpstart, in partnership with Person Foundation, to focus attention on reading and service, and support Jumpstart's year-round work in America's preschools. Join Mama Steph at Buttonwood and help break the record for the largest shared reading experience ever.

For more information, call Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset, at 781-383-2665.

RECREATION NOTES

Fall wrestling clinic starts Sept. 29

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Wrestling Clinic – Cohasset Recreation Department will host a fall wrestling clinic for students in grades four through eight in the wrestling room at Cohasset High School. The clinic will take place Tuesday nights, for eight weeks, from Sept. 29 through Nov. 17, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Fee is $60. Register online at cohassetrec.com.

SAT Math Review – Princeton Review certified Bob Beatty, a retired Scituate High School teacher, will do a 10-hour, seven-session math review based on content of the SATs. The course will cover the makeup of the test, techniques on how to score higher from not doing all the problems, when to guess or skip the problem and how many problems can be left blank and still get a 600. Topics of all algebra, geometry and algebra 2 will also be covered as well as discussing the new sections of the test, which include functions, sets and sequences. All materials will be supplied. Course will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Mondays, Sept. 28 through Nov. 2, from 6 to 8 p.m. Fee is $150 and includes all materials.

Computer Explorers – Meets Tuesdays at Cohasset Recreation Center

Engineering: Those who like building with Legos will enjoy this class. Students use LEGO materials to build simple and complex machines as they learn about structures, forces, gear math, simple machines and motorized projects. Using teamwork and a series of challenges, groups will work together to create motorized systems and advanced challenges.

Digital Movie Making: Are you the next Steven Spielberg? Students will create their own Indiana Jones movie using special digital movie making cameras and software. As directors and producers participants will work in teams to create a story and script, build various Indiana Jones Lego scenes and film a movie. Graphic editing techniques and stop motion animation will be used, background noise and music will be added, and the movie will be shown at a private screening on the last day of class to share with family and friends. All students will get a copy of their movie on a CD-ROM upon completion of class.

Engineering 1: Sept. 22 through Oct. 27, 3:45 to 4:30 p.m., for ages 9 through 12. Cost of the six-week class is $90.

Digital Movie Making: Sept. 22 through Nov. 10, 4:45 to 5:30 p.m., for ages 7 through 9. Cost of the nine-week class is $125.

Engineering 2: Nov. 3 through Dec. 8, 3:45 to 4:30 p.m. For ages 9 through 12. Cost for the six-week class is $90.

Junior Engineering: Nov. 17 through Dec. 22, 4:45 to 5:30 p.m. For ages 7 through 9. Cost of the six-week class is $90.

Cross Country Running Club – Meets on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at Milliken Field for an hour of running related stations. Runners will be trained for 1 mile competitive meets against local running groups. All levels of interested runners are welcome. For boys and girls grades three through five. Parent volunteers are welcome. Call Kelly Grech if interested in volunteering at 781-383-0349. Tuesdays and Thursdays, Sept. 22 through Oct. 29, 4 to 5 p.m. Fee is $60.

Kids Just Love Crafts – Join others for a jam filled program of ooey, gooey arts and crafts, stories and songs. Watch your 2 to 4 year-old child make a mess and have some fun as they create crafts that can be treasured for a lifetime. Space is limited to 10 children with a parent. Session 1: Sept. 24 through Oct. 29; Session 2: Nov. 5 through Dec. 17; Session 3: Jan. 7 through Feb. 11; Session 4: March 4 through April 8; Session 5: April 29 through June 3. Takes place at the Cohasset Recreation Center on Thursdays, from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Fee is $60.

Fencing – Hand, eye and foot coordination, concentration, and jousting skills will be taught. Fun and safe with equipment provided. Sneakers, T-shirt and sweatpants should be worn. Class instructor will be Jim Mullarkey, a championship fencer, who has been teaching for years throughout the South Shore. For ages 7 and older. Class will take place at Cohasset Recreation Center on Fridays, Sept. 25 through Dec. 4, from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. – Beginners; 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., Intermediate. Fee for the 10-week program is $125.

Top-Rope Rock Climbing – Students, ages 8 and older, can have fun while learning techniques and how to use equipment necessary to climb with confidence. Taught by professional guides, top-roping helps students develop new skills and confidence. All equipment provided. Location: Quarry Hills, Quincy (transportation not included). Dates: Tuesdays, Sept. 29 through Oct. 27, 4 to 5:30 p.m. Cost of the five-week program is $95.

CPR Certification & AED – American Heart Association CPR courses instructed by members of the Cohasset Fire Department; CPR instruction includes adult, child and infant CPR two-year certification card. The class will take place at Cohasset Town Hall, Wednesday, Oct. 7, from 6 to 10 p.m. Fee is $45.

No-School Fun-on Oct. 9:

Drum Circle: Ed Sorrentino is a certified drum circle facilitator. Drum Circles are a fun way to bring interactive music-making into one's world using a variety of "real" percussion instruments. No previous musical experience is required; everyone will enjoy this activity while experiencing "in the moment" music making. Meets 10 to 11 a.m. All ages welcome. Fee is $12.

Frisbee Workshop: Two time world freestyle champion and professional saucer tosser Todd Brodeur will have the youngster's imaginations soaring as he performs an instructive Frisbee workshop. Children will learn to do many tricks, throws and catches. Meets 1 to 2:30 p.m. For ages 7 and up. Fee is $12.

Kitchen Kids

Creative Cupcakes – Join Kitchen Kids and create amazing cupcakes from the book "Hello Cupcake." Each student will bring home a plate full of creative cupcakes. This class brings art and food together in a fun new way. Grades one through five Sundays 12:30 to 2 p.m. First Session Oct. 18 to Nov. 1 Second Session: Nov. 8 to Nov. 22. Fee: $75.

Piano Instruction – Instant Piano for Hopelessly Busy People-one night only-Monday, Oct. 19, 6:30 to 10 p.m. People can learn enough in this one workshop to play almost any song on the piano with two hands. Then go on to perfect your technique at home using a home-study CD and workbook provided by the instructor. Fee is$64. Takes place at Cohasset Town Hall.

How to Play Piano By Ear – One night only-Monday, Oct. 26, 6:30 to 10 p.m. Students will learn how to play songs off the radio, and learn how to transpose and improve overall musicianship. Open to musicians, not just piano players, who have a basic understanding of chord theory. Beginners should take Instant Piano For Hopelessly Busy People as a prerequisite. Guided by the course workbook and included CD, developed by the founder of this workshop, people can continue to perfect technique at their own pace. Fee is $64. Takes place at Cohasset Town Hall.

Babysitter Training Course – This one-day, three-hour course is designed to assist fifth through eighth graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Instructor: Kim Cleary, nurse and mom. Each class is limited to 18 pre-registered students. Takes place at Paul Pratt Library, Saturday, Oct. 24, or Saturday, Nov. 2, from 9 a.m. to noon. Fee is $18.

TRIPS

Fishing Trip – Sunday fishing trip to Wompatuck State Park, and yes, they're scheduled around NFL games. Children and parents are invited to spend a few peaceful hours casting their worries away and connecting with nature. No fee, however participants must register in advance as space is limited. Bring your own equipment, contact us if this is not possible. Held at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham entrance, Sunday, Oct. 4, from 8 a.m. to noon. Free of charge.

New York, New York – Spend a day shopping and touring New York City. Open to ages 18 and older. Children younger than 18 must be accompanied by an adult. Invite friends and enjoy a day you plan in the Big Apple. Deluxe motor coach leaves Town Hall at 6 a.m. sharp and arrives in NYC about 10:30 a.m. Midtown drop off near Rockefeller Center and pick up in the same area at 7 p.m. sharp. Limited enrollment. Pick-up location at Cohasset Town Hall parking lot. Transportation by Coach Bus. Dates: Saturday, Oct. 17, or Saturday, Dec. 5. Fee is $49.

A Taste Full of FUN in Milford, N.H. – Start by touring the Swan Chocolates factory, learn about high-quality chocolate making, and finally indulge oneself in the special chocolate fountain dipping station and taste a bit of heaven. Continue on to Giorgio's Restaurant for lunch in this lovely New Hampshire village. The trip culminates with a tour of the Anheuser-Bush brewery, where it all began 150 years ago. Visit the beautiful landscaping and the famous Clydesdale horses. Pick-up location at Cohasset Town Hall parking lot. Transportation by Coach Bus. Tuesday, Oct. 13, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Fee is $69.95.

A giant billboard proclaiming that "All are Welcome at Glastonbury Abbey" is drawing attention along Route I-93S.

Billboard for monks!

When driving south from Boston this month, your attention may be captivated by a rather unexpected sight along Route I-93S: a giant billboard proclaiming that "All are Welcome at Glastonbury Abbey."

Located in Hingham, Glastonbury Abbey is a community of Benedictine monks devoted to its mission of prayer and hospitality. Founded in 1954, the monks of Glastonbury Abbey made a commitment to be present in Hingham and try their best to live out their Benedictine life together. St. Benedict stressed the importance of hospitality in his Rule, and the monks have been happy to "receive guests as Christ" – to welcome the many men and women who join them in prayer and retreat. The Abbey joyfully welcomes people of all spiritual traditions to join the monks at prayer five times each day and to participate in retreats.

Glastonbury Abbey provides a place where men and women can enrich themselves spiritually. The Abbey is a place of welcome, prayer, and peace in a time fraught with spiritual and economic uncertainty. The beautiful and peaceful grounds provide visitors a setting in which to find an oasis away from the pressures and frenetic pace of contemporary life.

The Abbey's monastic leader, Father Mark Serna, says: "All of the major religious traditions stress the importance of regular periods of quiet and silence in order to remain grounded in our humanity and to open the heart for an experience of transcendence."

Besides being a source of spiritual enrichment, Glastonbury Abbey is also a center of educational, cultural, and community outreach. The wooded grounds and facilities are used by numerous community service organizations (including 12-step recovery programs, the Quincy Community Action Group, the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, and others), as well as spiritual retreatants and those wishing to explore monastic life as a vocation. The monks and volunteers are committed to good works; they prepare and serve food to the residents of Father Bill's Place in Quincy, and host monthly "Sunday Suppers" for local needy men and women.

Glastonbury Abbey is also home for ecumenical and interfaith dialogue through its popular lecture series, "Listening to Other Voices", which is offered free to the public. These enriching lectures are held in the gracious Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, which was built in 2001 to extend the monks' ministry of hospitality. The first lecture, on October 15th, features Liz Walker. Ms. Walker will speak from scripture, from her personal journey from celebrity television newscaster to ordained minister, and from her observation of enslaved woman and children in Darfur, Sudan and those who assist them.

The billboard space was donated by Van Wagner Communications, the photography by Creative Vision Photography, and the design by Susan Mavilia in the hopes of increasing awareness and use of the Abbey. The Monks encourage all to experience a Benedictine approach to life – to sit quietly, ponder, pray, and be renewed. All are welcome.

American Legion to host golf tournament

George H. Mealy Post 118 American Legion in Cohasset will host a golf tournament on Monday, Oct. 5 with a 1 p.m. shot gun start. Cost is $150 per person and includes a round of golf, use of cart and dinner. A complimentary buffet lunch will be available in the clubhouse starting at noon

Dinner only without golf will be available for $40 per couple.

Horoscope

SALOMES'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF OCT. 5, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An upcoming trip could create some problems with your schedule unless you tie up as many loose ends as possible before you head out the door. Ask a friend or colleague to help you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Being eager to start a new project is fine. However, moving ahead without knowing what actually will be expected of you could cause a problem down the line. Ask some questions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Getting through some recent challenges in good shape might give you a false sense of security. Don't relax your guard. You need to be prepared for what else could happen.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Caution is still advised, even though you think you're as prepared as you need to be. Keep in mind that change is in your aspect, and you should expect the unexpected.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Lion's gift of persuasion helps you get your points across, even to some of your most negative naysayers. An old friend might seek you out for some advice.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Being sure of your convictions is fine. But leave some room for dissenting opinions. You might learn something that could help you avoid a possible problem later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Getting good legal advice on what your rights actually are is the first step toward resolving that pesky problem so that it doesn't re-emerge at a later date. Good luck.

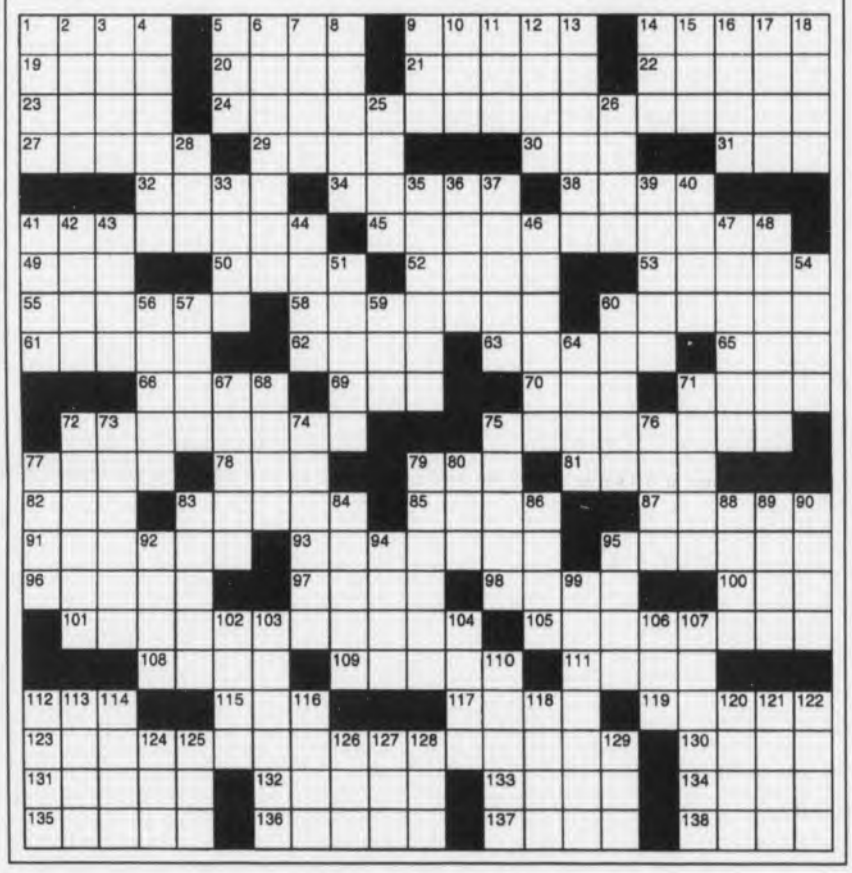
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Longtime relationships work well this week, whether they're personal or professional. It's also a good time to invite new friends and colleagues into your life.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to do the research that will help you uncover those irrefutable facts that can back you up on your new venture when you most need it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Change is an important factor in your aspect this week and could affect something you might have thought was immune to any sort of adjustment or "alteration."

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Being asked to share someone's deeply personal confidence might be flattering, but accepting could be unwise. Decline gracefully but firmly.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) As wise as you are, you could still be misled by someone who seems to be sincere but might not be. Take more time to assess the situation before making any commitments.



(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You like to face challenges that others might try to avoid, and by so doing, you set an example of courage for all.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: Welcome to St. Stephen's Church!

"The Gods we worship write their names on our faces; be sure of that. And a man will worship something — have no doubt about that, either. He may think that his tribute is paid in secret in the dark recesses of his heart — but it will out. That which dominates will determine his life and character. Therefore, it behooves us to be careful what we worship, for what we are worshipping we are becoming." — Ralph Waldo Emerson

OBITUARIES

Barry I. Getto

COHASSET – Barry I. Getto, age 71 of Cohasset, suddenly on September 18, 2009.

Barry was a US Army Veteran, Korea. He was an avid outdoor sportsman, including hunting and fishing. His favorite place was the Bob Marshall Wilderness in Montana. Barry was president and owner of Howes Leather Co., Inc. of Boston, MA.

Barry was the husband of Carla A. (Wesala) and the father of Steven, Alex and Timothy. He is also survived by four grandchildren. He was the brother of the late Gerald of PA. and the nephew of Barbara Barli of Detroit, Michigan. Barry was the son of the late Joseph and Ann (Zalo) Getto.

A Funeral Mass was celebrated on Wednesday in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Interment Private. Visiting hours were at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset.

If desired donations in his memory may be made to The Scituate Animal Shelter, 780 CJC Hwy, Scituate, MA 02066 or to the Brigham & Women's Hospital, Oncology Dept. or Trauma Dept, 75 Francis St. Boston, MA. 02115.

Douglas Saleski

HILTON HEAD, SC – Douglas Russell Saleski, 48, of Hilton Head Island, formerly of Cohasset and Marshfield, died in his sleep unexpectedly at home on Hilton Head Island, S.C. on Sunday, September 13, 2009.

He is survived by his beloved wife, Kathryn (Salerno), and his devoted and loving daughters, Lea of Hilton Head and Jennifer Brooks of Montclair, VA, son-in-law, Michael and granddaughter, Samantha. Also surviving are his parents, Diane and Kenneth Saleski of Scituate, MA, brother Stephen and his wife, Lauren of Hingham, MA and sister, Nancy, of Weymouth, MA. Doug was the son-in-law of Nick and Trudy Salerno of Cohasset and brother-in-law of Brian, Tim, Chris, Matt, and Greg Salerno, Tish Sokolowski, and Jenny DiBona and their spouses. His many nieces and nephews simply adored "Uncle Doug".

Following graduation from Cohasset High School, he established a very successful cleaning business and in subsequent years branched out with other consumer services.

Doug enjoyed spending time with family and friends, and traveling in their RV using Hilton Head as a base. Their many travels included a cross-country journey and a trip to Mexico. The fellowship of other RVers was a highlight of their excursions. Their familiarity and enjoyment of Hilton Head Island prompted their move to that community where Doug was self-employed. His easygoing manner and personality helped him and his family develop many friends.

A Memorial Mass will be celebrated at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset on Saturday, September 26 at 10 a.m. There are no calling hours. A reception will immediately follow in St. Anthony's Parish Center.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Heroes on Horseback, P.O. Box 3678, Bluffton, SC 29910.

Joseph S. Humphreys

SUFFIELD CT – Joseph Stephen Humphreys, 62, of Suffield, CT, passed away on Sept 16 following a brief battle with lung cancer. Steve was one of the special ones among us. He had a passion for life and an endless curiosity about everything. He was famous for his encyclopedic knowledge of boats, was a master seaman, tugboat captain, skilled woodworker, sheep shearer, and certified NAUI diver. But most importantly, he had a deep love for his family, loyalty to his friends, engaging sense of humor, and a remarkable ability to make a personal connection with everyone he met. Despite his aggressive cancer, he maintained these qualities to the very end.

Steve was recently employed as a marine construction manager by Terry Contracting, Riverhead, NY. Among his many previous occupations, Steve managed Sample's Shipyard in Boothbay Harbor, ME, was a stockbroker in Portland, ME, owned a seafood processing plant and wharf in Southwest Harbor, ME, was a dockbuilder in Florida, and owned a small plane charter service in Hawaii. He attended Mass. Maritime Academy, earned a BA from Suffolk Univ. and an MBA from the Univ. of ME.

Steve was born in Cohasset, MA, the beloved son of the former Joseph and Eleanor Humphreys. He leaves his wife and best friend, Dana, and their daughter, Helen, of Suffield, two daughters from a previous marriage and their husbands, Kristin and Craig Coleman of Yarmouth, ME, and Jennifer and John Rohde of Cumberland ME. The last weekend of his life was spent in pure joy fishing off a dock in Maine in the loving company of his wife, daughters and spouses and his eight grandchildren Ben, Chas, Will, Seamus, Isabelle, Xia, Lila, and Nell. Steve's loving brothers and sisters and their spouses include brother George and Linda Humphreys of San Diego, sister Mary Klein Steele of Seattle, brother Charles and Donna of Cohasset, sister Kate and Jack Mullen of Cohasset, and sister Lil and Brian Hazard of Hopedale, MA and many nieces and nephews. He was predeceased by his sister Ellie.

Memorial donations may be made to either the Kent Memorial Library, Suffield, CT, or the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset, MA.

A memorial service will be held on Sat. Sept 26, 1 pm, at First Church of Christ, 81 High St., Suffield. Nicholson & Carmon Funeral Home in Suffield has care of the arrangements.

Fall movie preview

Hollywood gets serious

By Al Alexander
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

It's been a summer full of mindless action flicks, inane Sandra Bullock rom-coms and movies based on toys, but now it's our time, the time of deep, introspective dramas, sophisticated comedies and classy art-house fare. Or at least we can hope.

Hollywood plans to release nearly 100 movies between now and Thanksgiving, and the odds are that at least a dozen of them won't be forgotten before the first snow flies.

On paper, it certainly looks exciting, with big stars like George Clooney, Daniel Day-Lewis, Hilary Swank, Nicole Kidman and, yes, a posthumous Michael Jackson doing the moonwalk one last time across the screen in your local theater.

There also will be offerings from such highly touted directors as Spike Jonze ("Where the Wild Things Are"), Rob Marshall ("Nine"), Steven Soderbergh ("The Informant!"), Wes Anderson ("The Fantastic Mr. Fox") and Joel and Ethan Coen ("A Serious Man").

The film that really has everyone excited, or at least every girl under the age of 18, is the "Twilight" sequel, "New Moon." Not only is it guaranteed to suck some blood, it's also going to be sucking a lot of money out of your kid's pocket.

With Halloween fast approaching, horror will also be plentiful on the menu, with a variety of slayer flicks ranging from comedies like Woody Harrelson's "Zombieland" to gross-out stuff like "Saw VI," to the very erotic idea of the lovely Megan Fox playing a cannibal who likes to eat men in "Jennifer's Body." Yum!

Add these to the usual lineup of animated flicks and pictures "based on a true story" and you have a pretty full slate offering something for everyone. So to get you started, here's a rundown on the films that will be heating up your autumn.

SEPT. 18

The Informant!: Matt Damon plays an agribusiness executive working undercover for FBI agent Scott Bakula in Steven Soderbergh's tongue-in-cheek look at corporate malfeasance.

Big Fan: Comedian Patton Oswalt plays a deranged New York Giants fan who is forced to re-evaluate his loyalty after one of the star players assaults him.

Cloudy with a Chance of Meatballs: An animated flick that brings to life Judy and Ron Barrett's 1982 children's book about a wannabe inventor who concocts a machine that turns water into food. Problem is, they he can't shut it off before it starts literally raining spaghetti.

Jennifer's Body: Think of this horror flick as Hannibal Lecter: The Next Generation; only instead of a middle-aged man with a hungering for human flesh, we get a 17-year-old high school girl played by Megan Fox. Yes, that Fox will hunt.

Love Happens: An adult romantic-comedy in which Jennifer Aniston plays a florist falling for a phony Tony Robbins-like self-help guru played by Aaron Eckhart.

SEPT. 25

The Invention of Lying: Ricky Gervais co-wrote and stars in a sci-fi tale about a world in which only one person is capable of not telling the truth. Yup, you guessed it, it's Gervais, and he's using his lying to his advantage in pursuing the lovely Jennifer Garner.

Fame: Remake of '80s classic for the Disney generation. Think of it as infinitesimally grittier version of "High School Musical" without that cute little Zac boy.

Surrogates: In this sci-fi thriller based on a graphic novel, Bruce Willis plays a homicide detective looking into the murders of people who have been living their lives vicariously through their robots.

OCT. 2

Whip It: If you're a male of a certain age, you fondly remember all those Saturday afternoons spent watching the brash, bodacious babes of Roller Derby. Now they have their own movie directed by Drew Barrymore, no less. She stars alongside "Juno's" Ellen Page, "SNL's" Kristen Wiig and Juliette Lewis in a story about the rumble-tumble world of controlled violence that may, or may not, have been fake but was always thrilling. The movie is an iffy proposition, of course, especially with a novice like Barrymore behind the camera. But given the year she's having after her stunning performance in "Grey Gardens," who is going to bet against her?

Capitalism: A Love Story: Michael Moore's new documentary once again champions the poor and downtrodden, only this time they don't live on Main Street. They live on Wall Street, but they draw their welfare checks from the same place: the U.S. government.

Zombieland: Woody Harrelson and the under-appreciated Jesse Eisenberg team up to slay zombies in a tongue-in-cheek horror comedy.

A Serious Man: Joel and Ethan Coen look to continue their recent hot streak with this dramedy about a man whose life is slowly falling apart.

OCT. 9

Couples Retreat: Vince Vaughn, Jason Bateman, Jon Favreau, Kristin Davis, Malin Akerman and Kristen Bell play the three couples heading to a marriage retreat on a picturesque Pacific island to confront some very ugly realities about their respective romances. Yes, it's a comedy, and yes, it's THAT Peter Billingsley (the adorable little kid from "A Christmas Story") sitting in the director's chair.

OCT. 16

Stepfather: The franchise that launched the career of "Lost" star Terry O'Quinn gets a revival courtesy of "Nip-Tuck's" Dylan Walsh, who plays the not-so-nice new daddy to "Gossip Girl's" Penn Badgely.

Where the Wild Things Are: Spike Jonze ("Being John Malkovich") brings Maurice Sandek's beloved children's story to the screen with newcomer Max Records playing Max, the precocious kid in a wolf suit who fantasizes about sailing to a far off land to rule a kingdom of horned puppet monsters (voiced by James Gandolfini and Forest Whitaker, among others). Mark Ruffalo and Catherine Keener headline as Max's parents.

OCT. 23

Amelia: Miss Earhart may still be missing, but Hilary Swank's career may be found thanks to her much talked about portrayal of the distaff flying ace. The biopic has the added appeal of being directed by Mira Nair, the woman behind "The Namesake," one of the very best films of 2007.

OCT. 30

The Box: Richard Kelly, the Boston-bred genius behind "Donnie Darko," tries to make amends for his impenetrable "Southland Tales" with this psychological thriller about a married couple (Cameron Diaz and James Marsden) who are visited by a stranger (Frank Langella) who makes an offer they wish they could refuse.

An Education: A 16-year-old British girl (Carey Mulligan, drawing Oscar buzz) falls for a much older man (Peter Sarsgaard) who may or may not be up to no good.

Matt Damon plays an agribusiness executive working undercover for FBI agent Scott Bakula in Steven Soderbergh's tongue-in-cheek look at corporate malfeasance "Informant" that came out last week.

NOV. 6

The Men Who Stare at Goats: George Clooney plays a member of a special Army unit investigating the use of telepathic and other psychic powers as a weapon. His probe eventually sends him in search of the program's missing creator, played by Jeff Bridges. Ewan McGregor and Kevin Spacey co-star in a film directed by Grant Heslov, the guy who co-wrote "Good Night, and Good Luck" with Clooney.

A Christmas Carol: Robert Zemeckis returns to the capture motion technique he used on "The Polar Express" to enliven the Dickens classic for a whole new generation. And who can resist the idea of Jim Carrey trying his hand as the immortal Ebenezer Scrooge?

Precious: The Sundance Film Festival smash finally arrives loaded with buzz both for the movie, a tale of a poor, overweight black girl from Harlem struggling with illiteracy and pregnancy, and it's star, comedian Mo'Nique, who is considered a shoo-in for an Oscar nod for her portrayal of the teen's abusive mother.

NOV. 13

The Boat that Rocked: Screenwriter Richard Curtis ("Three Weddings and a Funeral," "Love Actually") wrote and directs a loving ode to underground rock 'n' roll radio in the 1960s aided by an all-star cast led by Philip Seymour Hoffman, Emma Thompson, Kenneth Branagh and Bill Nighy.

2012: Long ago the Mayans predicted life on Earth would end in 2012. Turns out they're right. And eagerly waiting to obliterate the big blue marble is "Independence Day's" Rolland Emmerick, who has recruited John Cusack and Judi Dench to help him do it. Remember: It's only a movie.

The Fantastic Mr. Fox: The eccentric Wes Anderson ("Rushmore," "The Royal Tenenbaums") tries his hand at animation with his adaptation of the beloved Roald Dahl tale about a family of foxes trying to escape from a murderously inclined farmer. It's a tribute to the clout Mr. Anderson carries in that he's landed not just Meryl Streep to lend her voice, but George Clooney, Bill Murray and Owen Wilson.

NOV. 20

The Blind Side: The ubiquitous Sandra Bullock takes a break form playing ditzy women by tying on an apron and playing the impassioned mother of burly black teenage orphan named Michael Oher (Quinton Aaron), who eventually finds his calling as a member of the NFL's Baltimore Ravens. John Lee Hancock ("The Rookie") directs.

Planet 51: Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson lands on the 51st rock from the sun. Or at least his voice does in this animated tale about an astronaut trying to fit in with the quirky inhabitants of the far, far away planet. Serving as his guide is Justin Long.

Twilight: New Moon: The "Twilight" saga continues with heroine Bella Swan (Kristen Stewart) picking up the pieces of a broken heart inflicted by Edward, the hunky vampire played by teen heartthrob Robert Pattinson. Not to worry, waiting in the wings to help cure her ails is good friend, Jacob (Taylor Lautner). Of more concern to the franchise's legion of fans is the departure of "Twilight" director Catherine Hardwicke, who possesses a much harder edge than her replacement, Chris Weitz, best known for helming "American Pie."

NOV. 25

Nine: In what can be called a true stretch, Daniel Day-Lewis follows the lead of another two-time Oscar winner, Meryl Streep, by starring in a musical. He plays a movie director juggling the seven women in his life as he prepares to helm his ninth film. Based on Federico Fellini's classic "8fi," "Nine" is directed by Rob Marshall ("Chicago") and co-stars a bevy of beauties, including Oscar winners Penelope Cruz, Nicole Kidman and Marion Cotillard.

The Road: 2007's Oscar went to a movie based on a Cormac McCarthy novel ("No Country for Old Men"). Might lightning strike twice for the quirky author? Doubtful, but his tale about a father and son traversing a post-apocalyptic landscape certainly sounds interesting. Viggo Mortensen and Charlize Theron star.

Old Dogs: John Travolta reteams with his "Wild Hogs" director Walter Becker for a comedy about a workaholic (Robin Williams) who suddenly learns he's the father of 6-year-old twins born to an old flame he hasn't seen in years. Travolta plays his best buddy and partner in crime.

The Princess and the Frog: Rumors that traditional pen-and-ink animation is dead have been greatly exaggerated in the mind of Disney's animation chief, John Lasseter, who commissioned Ron Clements and John Musker (the guys responsible for "Aladdin" and "The Little Mermaid") to create a tale about an African-American princess (a Disney first) who turns into an amphibian after kissing a frog.

OPENING NIGHT OF THE PLYMOUTH PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA heralds the start of their 94th season with an All-Russian program. Steven Karidoyanes conducts Rachmaninoff's magnificent Second Symphony and Tchaikovsky's beautiful Violin Concerto. The guest artist is virtuoso soloist James Buswell. This celebratory event takes place in Plymouth's Memorial Hall on Saturday evening, Oct. 3. The concert begins at 8 p.m. A pre-concert talk by Conductor Karidoyanes begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are now on sale. Memorial Hall is fully accessible.

THE FIRST FAMILY FRIENDS & FIDO WALK takes place Oct. 4 to benefit The Wellness Community-Massachusetts South Shore, which provides free emotional and social support programs in a welcoming, homelike environment for people across Southeastern Massachusetts who are living with cancer and their loved ones. The walk is organized as a family fun day in 1-, 3-, or 5-mile distances, so individuals of all abilities may walk. People may bring their pets, so their whole families may participate, but a pet is not required to take part in the event. Registration begins rain or shine at 9 a.m. and the walk at 10 a.m. at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham. Pre-registration is preferred by calling 781-829-4823 or by e-mailing p.giovannini@thewellnesscommunitymass.org. Family registration can be obtained for a $50 donation and individual registration for $25. Sponsorships and volunteer opportunities also are available.

CAUSE 4 PAWS 5K RUN AND DOG WALK to benefit Quincy Animal Shelter, Oct. 4 at 10 a.m. Squantum Point Park, Marina Bay, Quincy. Registration is $20 by Sept. 26 or $25 on race day. Visit www.quincyanimalshelter.org/events.html

ATLANTIC SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA'S OPENING NIGHT takes place Saturday, Oct. 24 at Duxbury Performing Arts Center, 73 Alden St., Duxbury. Concert and art exhibit benefits NVNA and Hospice and Campus of Caring, two non-profits, which have partnered to bring hospice care, education and support to the South Shore. Limited tickets available at $75 each for the concert plus an exclusive wine and cheese reception, from 5 to 6:30 p.m., at North Hill Country Club, 47 Merry St., Duxbury, prior to the concert. Tickets for concert and art exhibition are $50. All tickets include the conductor's pre-concert lecture at 7 p.m. as well as post-concert refreshments. Ticket deadline is Oct. 16. For tickets and more information, 781-659-2342 or www.nvna.org

Hussey leaves town in good hands

Boston 'cop' bonded with Cohasset

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although he will always retain the title of "Chief" in the minds of many residents — Chief James Hussey will no longer be leading the Cohasset Police Force next week.

Hussey, who has been on a leave of absence from the Boston Police Department since accepting the Cohasset post a little more than five years ago, is returning to the BPD where he plans to retire in the not too distant future.

A Boston "cop" by training and family (his brother and father both served with the BPD), Hussey will leave his heart in Cohasset.

He recalls going to Nantasket Beach in the summers as a youth but never checking out the town next door. He was blown away when he arrived in the summer of 2004 by Cohasset's beauty and its sense of community.

"I could not believe there was this beautiful little town so close to Boston and I knew very little about it," he recalled.

Who would have thought that a "big city" police officer would fit in a town of about 7,000 where crimes, although they do occur, are not the centerpiece of police service?

Although Hussey admits to being a "city boy" with little knowledge of municipal government – his long experience in police work including dealing with internal affairs in Boston gave him the right résumé to come to a town where at the time Town Hall was in disarray and the police department, fractured.

Complementary therapies can help

Acupuncture and massage in the fight against cancer

OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Together with more conventional medicine, complementary therapies are making strides in the fight against cancer. Cancer research is beginning to recognize less traditional healing methods, at least in the Western sense of medicine, can make an impact on the quality of life for cancer patients.

Local acupuncturist Bob Thompson and massage therapist Cindy Doody provide their services to cancer patients and in almost all cases they are finding positive results. While not curing cancer, both say their specialty can help ease the pain and other symptoms associated with cancer and cancer treatment.

Cindy Doody, a licensed massage therapist and owner of Mariposa Massage and Body Therapy, has her first close experience with cancer was her grandmother battle with breast cancer. At age 17, Doody saw first hand the crippling effects of chemotherapy and the pain that makes the disease so devastating.

Later, after Doody began her career in massage therapy, she was asked by someone to come to his mother's house to give a massage. The mother was going through chemotherapy and was in a lot of pain.

"I planned to give her a nice, relaxation massage to get her mind off the pain," Doody said. As she worked on the woman she talked and talked and Doody said she could tell the experience was therapeutic for her. Over the next five months Doody came regularly to the woman's house to give her a massage until she passed away.

"I really enjoyed our time together. I think it helped her and it helped me," Doody said.

After that introduction to the power of massage during cancer treatment, Doody set out to become certified in oncology massage.

She now considers oncology massage a supplement to her regular massage and body therapy business. She accepts clients in her office in Cohasset Village or will make house calls for patients who have difficulty traveling.

"When you're diagnosed with cancer it's a whole new experience and you're hit on so many different levels – emotionally, physically, mentally," Doody said. Spending some time in a relaxing massage can help on all those levels, Doody said.

With any new client, Doody will spend time getting to know his or her conditions, and a cancer patient is no exception. She will speak to the client to get a sense of where they are medically in their treatment and their overall well-being. She listens to where they are in their treatment and can adjust accordingly.

"Understanding medically where the client is, really listening, is important," Doody said, adding massage therapy can yield a positive experience in all phases of treatment of the disease.

According to the American Cancer Society website, studies of massage for cancer patients suggest

Early detection is the key

Mass. doctors say too many women not fighting breast cancer through early screenings

By Kelsey Abbruzzese
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Doctors and breast cancer advocates across Massachusetts are lauding recent advancements in treating the disease – new drugs, new chemotherapy treatments, new screening and biopsy techniques.

But even with the large number of advocates and an emphasis on awareness, they say some women are still falling through the cracks. Whether it's cultural issues, socioeconomic levels, or plain fear, doctors say they are still puzzled about how to reach certain women about the necessity of screening and showing up for appointments.

For many of those women, it's hard to concentrate on mammograms when worrying about how to put food on the table.

Dr. Jane Mendez, a breast surgeon at Boston Medical Center, said the problem is especially prevalent with her patients. As Michael Stone, the center's head of surgical oncology, said, paying $15 to park for an appointment is a major obstacle for their patients.

"They're so worried about surviving that going to get a mammogram is not priority by any stretch of the imagination," Mendez said. "We tend to see it at later stages. It might be so advanced that we treat with chemotherapy prior to surgery. In some, it's already way too late and that's metastasized."

Why we're pink

So what's with the pink newspaper today?

Every GateHouse newspaper in Massachusetts is painting the town pink today in support of the American Cancer Society and its efforts to increase awareness during October, which is Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

In this issue you will find stories about the state of research and treatment for breast cancer, as well as profiles of breast cancer survivors.

We've also included information about Sunday's Making Strides for Breast Cancer fundraising walk in Boston and information about where to find more about breast cancer detection and treatment.

Pink is the "official" color for breast cancer awareness, and many of the advertisers in this edition are flying their colors in support of the cause.

A portion of the advertising revenue and part of the cover price of every pink newspaper sold on newsstands today will be donated by GateHouse Media to the American Cancer Society.

We will be publishing more stories throughout the month to raise awareness and tell the stories of the men and women affected by breast cancer and the survivors and their families who are working to find a cure.

PICTURE THIS/Ben Mafera

Name: Ben Mafera.

Occupation: General Music Teacher-Deer Hill and Osgood Schools.

Best day of your life: 8/2/09- The day I was married to my lovely wife Sarah.

Best vacation: The honeymoon we took after the wedding...a 4 day cruise to Key West and Cozumel.

Favorite season: Spring.

Favorite holiday: 4th of July.

Favorite junk food: Nachos are my favorite guilty pleasure.

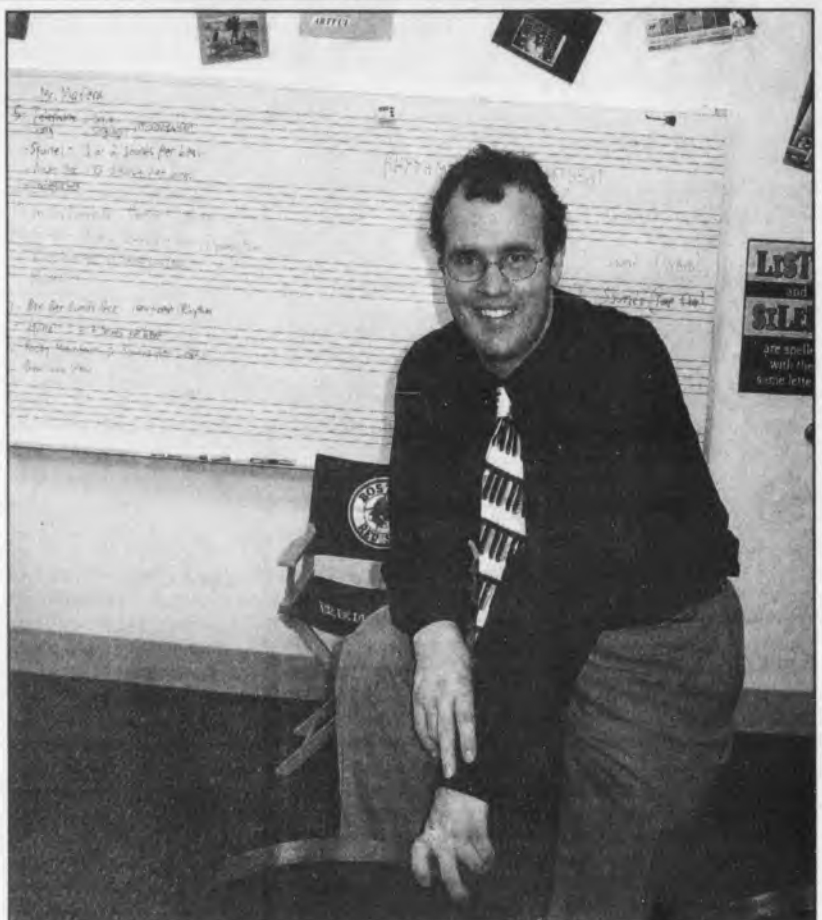
Best book: "Blue Like Jazz," by Donald Miller.

Best movie: The "Shawshank Redemption."

Best TV show: I don't watch much TV.

Best music, group, or artist: I have many tastes, but classically speaking, my favorites are Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, and Debussy. As far as modern music, my favorites are Billy Joel and John Mellencamp.

Pet peeve: People who cut you off at a merge. It drives me nuts.



Goal: To spread the gift of song to every child that walks in my class.

Person you'd most like to meet: Fritz Wunderlich. He was an amazing German tenor. I would have loved to have met and sung with him.

Best part of Cohasset: Feng Shui Restaurant. I have a semi-addiction to Chinese food. Feng Shui has great food.

Biggest worry: I try not to worry. I just take each day as it comes.

Fun fact about yourself: In addition to my teaching duties, I am a classically trained operatic tenor, and I have sung in many world class facilities including The Wang Center, Symphony Hall, Jordan Hall, and Verbrugghen Hall (Sydney, Australia).

Tax deferral

The Board of Assessors brought forth two articles proposing changes to tax deferral bylaws. First, Town Meeting will be asked to approve an increase in the gross receipts that seniors may have in order to be eligible to defer property taxes from $40,000 to $49,000. Currently, two seniors are taking advantage of tax deferral.

Second, Town Meeting will be requested to expand the bylaw governing military tax deferrals to those serving in the National Guard and the reservists. Those in the National Guard and the reservists called to duty will be able to defer payment of their property taxes until 180 days after they return from service. A tax deferral bylaw is already on the books for active military personnel.

Cohasset emergency workers prepare to move a Plymouth man who was hurt in an industrial accident from the rear of the Cohasset ambulance to a waiting Boston Medflight helicopter at Milliken Field on Wednesday afternoon.

Worker seriously injured after fall

Police officers arriving on scene reported that a 50-year-old man fell approximately 25 feet from scaffolding onto pavement and sustained severe traumatic injuries to his head.

On Wednesday, Sept. 30, at about 11:23 am, the Cohasset Emergency Dispatch Center received a 9-1-1 call from 82 Border St. reporting that a construction worker fell from scaffolding. Emergency personnel from the Cohasset Police and Fire Department were immediately dispatched.

Police officers arriving on scene reported that a 50-year-old man fell approximately 25 feet from scaffolding onto pavement and sustained severe traumatic injuries to his head. Cohasset Fire Department Paramedics arrived on scene and provided care to the victim. The Plymouth man was subsequently airlifted to the Brigham and Woman's Hospital Trauma Center in Boston by Boston Medflight. He is in critical condition, police said.

The investigation has been turned over to the Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). OSHA investigators from the Braintree office responded to the scene and are coordinating with Cohasset Police Detectives. The 82 Border St. location is a marine industrial complex that is owned by Cohasset Gulph LLC.

Cohasset man charged with drug trafficking

By Benjamin Brown

Scituate Police Detective Lt. Michael Stewart was one of the first officials on the scene Sept. 22 after the department had received tips about a suspicious house on Pondview Avenue Extension.

"We first received suspicious activity reports in the weeks prior," said Stewart.

Soon after arriving at the house with fellow Det. Robert Rappold, Stewart said he could smell the marijuana before he even got to the door.

"They weren't too good at odor elimination," he said.

As it turned out, the federal Drug Enforcement Administration had also received complaints regarding the house. As a result, Scituate police teamed up with the DEA to form a case before investigating the house fully.

"The DEA had also received complaints, so we ended up rockin' a case together," Stewart said.

Scituate Police, along with DEA officials and members of the Quincy Police Department, returned to the house the next day, Sept. 23. Stewart said officials entered the house with the help of the building owner, and allegedly found marijuana plants being grown throughout the house. The plants and equipment allegedly filled two bedrooms and a bathroom.

Store lockers broken into

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Stolen items include credit cards, driver's licenses, a digital camera, backpack, school I.D.s, and ATM cards.

Police are investigating the break-in of employee lockers at Stop & Shop and checking with other towns for similar incidents.

Last weekend Stop & Shop reported that a man had entered employee lockers and stole multiple items including credit cards, driver's licenses, a digital camera, backpack, school I.D.s, and ATM cards.

Detectives are involved and are reviewing surveillance tapes. Police said Quincy has had a similar crime.

OUI/car crash

A 24-year-old Cohasset man is facing drunk driving charges following a single-car accident at 3:09 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 25) on Border Street.

Police said the man, who was operating a 1998 Buick Century, hit a utility pole. His passenger, also a 24-year-old Cohasset man, was transported to the hospital with minor injuries.

Police said the driver failed several field sobriety tests and based on that and his driving, police determined he was under the influence of alcohol and arrested him. He was bailed later that morning. The Buick was totaled, police said.

Raccoons

Police received a call last week at 12:19 a.m. from a South Main Street resident complaining about raccoons on his roof. At his request a patrol car went to the house and shone its light on the roof scaring the raccoons that took off.

MV crashes

• At 7:08 a.m. on Monday (Sept. 21) a 2006 Ford pickup driven by a 28-year-old Scituate man "rear-ended" a 1998 Ford Taurus, operated by a 32-year-old Hyde Park woman. The Taurus had stopped to turn left from Route 3A onto Pond Street, police said. The Taurus was towed and the Hyde Park woman was transported to the hospital with minor injuries. The Scituate man driving the pickup was cited for following too closely.

• At 12:18 p.m. on Monday (Sept. 21) a 2005 Chevy pickup driven by a 39-year-old Hingham man pulled into a parking space on Elm Street and hooked the bumper of a 1999 Saab that was unoccupied and parked on the street. The pickup pulled the bumper off, police said. The owner of the Saab, a Scituate woman, was notified about the accident. The driver of the pickup was not cited.

• At 10:47 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 26), a 1995 Ford Crown Victoria "rear-ended" a 2006 Chevrolet van that had stopped at the light on Route 3A at Pond Street. The driver of the Crown Victoria, a 19-year-old Marshfield woman, was cited for following too closely. Her car was towed; there were no injuries, police said.

Key reappears

Police advised a 51-year-old Doane Street man to have the locks changed and find a new spot for the spare key after he reported that the spare key to the house that was kept in the shed behind some paint brushes had been missing and then reappeared. The resident, who called on Monday (Sept. 21), was worried someone had been using the key.

No extradition

The dispatch center entered a plate into the computer following a motor vehicle stop last Monday (Sept. 21) that revealed the registered owner had an active Florida warrant. However, the misdemeanor warrant for shoplifting was a NOEX warrant meaning that Florida was not willing to extradite the subject so he was not arrested.

Arrest

A 22-year-old Halifax man was arrested following a traffic stop at 6:17 p.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 23) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The man, who was driving a 2000 Nissan Maxima, pulled behind some buildings on Route 3A when he saw the cruiser. The officer investigated and a registry check revealed the man had a suspended license and he was placed under arrest. His passenger was properly licensed and was able to drive the car so it was not towed. The man who was arrested had a lengthy driving record, police said.

Dog bite

A 41-year-old Osterville man who was delivering Poland Spring water to a house on Summer Street apparently startled the family dog and the yellow Labrador bit him on the right leg, breaking the skin and causing bleeding. Cohasset paramedics treated the deliveryman. The animal control officer issued a quarantine for the dog which did not appear to have any history of biting, police said.

Scituate police seized 70 marijuana plants from a Scituate home. Along with the plants, officials allegedly found equipment used to test and regulate the growing conditions.

Police arrested 48-year-old Scott R. Garland of 105 Ripley Road in Cohasset and charged him with two counts of distributing a Class D drug, subsequent offense; and trafficking in marijuana.

According to Stewart, the plants officers allegedly found were capable of bringing in thousands of dollars.

"These weren't just seeds they planted," he said. "They were cloned plants made from the highest quality."

Stewart estimates that each of the 70 plants could have produced at least $3,000 worth of marijuana.

Along with the plants, officials allegedly found equipment used to test and regulate the growing conditions.

"We run into growers on a fairly regular basis, but this was capable of producing high-end marijuana that would go for at least $3, 000 a pound."

Scituate Police Detective Lt. Michael Stewart

"They had grow lights, a whole ton of nutrients, a setup that controlled food for the plants," said Stewart.

The police also allegedly discovered measuring equipment used to test the pH level and water temperature, along with a complicated exhaust system.

While the Scituate Police have experience with marijuana growers, Stewart said few have been as potentially lucrative as this.

"We run into growers on a fairly regular basis, but this was capable of producing high-end marijuana that would go for at least $3, 000 a pound," he said.

Stewart said police believe this was the first trial out of the house, and were able to intercept the plants and equipment before any had been sold.

Village parking changes approved

Town Manager Bill Griffin and Selectmen chair Paul Carlson met with Darilynn Evans, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, and Bill Ducharme, manager of Tedeschi's last week to discuss parking habits.

The discussion centered on how to balance short- and long-term parking in the village. The majority of the parking spaces in the village are two-hour spaces, but there is a group of 30-minute spaces and 15-minute spaces in the general area of Tedeschi's and French Memories.

In the end, it was the recommendation to have four 30-minute parking spaces enforced all day. Right now, the 30-minute spaces are only enforced from 6 to 11p.m.

Griffin said the 30-minute time limit would allow someone the time to do multiple things in the village (go to the bank, pick up dry cleaning, pick up milk at Tedeschi's, grab a coffee).

The Selectmen voted 5-0 in favor of making the signage change.

Seasonal flu clinics Oct. 6 & 24

The Cohasset Health Department has begun its seasonal flu campaign with clinics this year.

• The next clinic will be on Tuesday, Oct. 6 from 10 a.m. to noon at Town Hall.

This clinic is for seniors (65 or older) and high-risk adults (those over 21 with a chronic health condition).

• From 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday, Oct. 24, there will be a town-wide seasonal flu clinic for any resident 9 years of age or older.

Clinics are free of charge and open to Cohasset residents. If Medicare covers you, bring your card.

Stay tuned for further updates and news about availability of the H1N1 vaccine.

Anyone with questions should call Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210. People are encouraged to get a seasonal flu shot early this year.

H1N1 versus seasonal flu

How is H1N1 flu different from seasonal flu?

• Seasonal flu is caused by different flu viruses than H1N1 flu.

• Seasonal flu occurs every year, most often during the winter and early spring.

• Because H1N1 is a new virus, our bodies have not built up any resistance to it. That is why so many people may get sick.

• Pandemic flu, like H1N1 flu, occurs once every 30 years or so.

• Seasonal flu most severely affects people 65 years and older.

• H1N1 is currently being seen more often in children and young adults between the ages of 5 and 24 years old.

• A vaccine is available every year to help prevent seasonal flu.

• H1N1 vaccine is expected to be available this month.

Health Care Providers and hospitals have the highest priority for receiving the H1N1 vaccine, parents are encouraged to get their children immunized by their Pediatrician/Primary Care Professional. If and when H1N1 vaccine is received the Cohasset Board of Health will hold a school-based clinic for students at the Middle/High School. If there is additional vaccine available a Family Based H1N1 Flu Clinic will be held at the Osgood School.

New library technology

Join the staff at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Monday, Oct. 5 at 11 a.m. and learn how easy it is to check out library materials independently on the library's new self-checkout station! Bill Muenkel from 3M will be there to train the public on how to use this new radio frequency identification (RFID) technology.

During the past year, the library began implementing this technology which improves the speed and accuracy of most circulation and shelving functions, facilitating good customer service and minimizing loss of materials. Using a self-checkout system and RFID, customers can independently check out multiple items at once and pay fees and fines independently with cash or credit cards.

Safety Committee

An ah-hoc committee has been set up to discuss the safety issues in the Pleasant St./Old Pasture Road/Reservoir Road. The proposal of moving an access road to Reservoir Road brought to light the safety issues plaguing a curve in Reservoir Road where many kids travel to and from school.

"The primary issue is how to make this a safer intersection," said Selectmen chair Paul Carlson.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he didn't know why the selectmen were having this committee – "we should have just taken a vote." But pressed that there needed to be a little more definition to the committee and what the selectmen want as a recommendation.

There was some discussion on whether the committee was focused on the safety issues, or with the access road proposal.

"It's the safety issue as it is now, what exists independent of the easement," said Carlson. However, both the safety issues and easement issues could come up for discussion.

Members of the committee will include Selectmen Ted Carr and Karen Quigley, Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt, Police Lieutenant and safety officer Bill Quigley, Fire Chief Robert Silvia, High School Assistant Principal Dr. Mike Gill, Osgood principal Janet Sheehan, Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara and neighborhood resident Elsa Miller and one other neighborhood resident to be determined.

Medication

A 44-year-old Scituate woman driving a blue F-150 Ford pickup was apparently having a reaction to medication and was driving erratically along Route 3A around 2:50 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 24). Several 911 calls reported the pickup being "all over the road." Police determined the woman was not under the influence of alcohol and appeared to be having a reaction to some medication. Her pickup truck was towed and a family member was contacted to drive her home.

Motorcycle

A 17-year-old Hingham teen is being summonsed for unlicensed operation of a motorcycle after he was stopped for speeding on a 1989 Kawasaki at about 7:20 p.m. on Thursday (Sept. 24).

Police determined he did not have a motorcycle license. He was also cited for speeding.

Red light

A 28-year-old Rockland man driving a 1999 Honda Accord that ran the red light at Beechwood and Route 3A is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation, police said. The incident happened at 6 p.m. on Friday (Sept. 25).

Police stopped the car and a registry check revealed the driver was unlicensed. The car was towed.

Kids on roof

Police responded to a call from maintenance at Deer Hill School about kids on the roof at 2:35 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 26). Upon arrival police found two kids on the roof with tennis rackets. They had climbed up apparently to retrieve a ball. The officers warned them next time to let an adult know and not to climb onto the roof.

Took off

Teens reported walking down the street with a ladder and headed toward the soccer field shed on Milliken Field took off when police arrived on Saturday at 11:04 p.m. Police did not find a ladder and the kids ran off.

Cook Estate breaks ground

27-home community begins site work

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The shovels are in the ground and site work has commenced on the Sohier Street property known as the Cook Estate.

The 27 single-family home condominium development — that has been years in the making — will have some homes ready for move-in by next summer.

Over the next two months the entire site will begin to take the shape of the ultimate development — the roads will be put in, the property re-sculpted, utilities put down, drainage prepared.

"It's quite a job," said Tom Hamilton, president of Dean and Hamilton. Cohasset-based real estate company Dean and Hamilton has the exclusive listing of the Cook Estate.

Abbott Real Estate and Development received special permit approval from the Planning Board in fall 2007, won an appeal and now — at long last — broken ground on the project.

The project got its financial backing over the summer from Cambridge Savings Bank. Jim McAuliffe, one of the principals at Abbott Development, said the construction loan was the first loan to be given to a residential, for- sale new construction development in the state this calendar year.

The reason, he said, was the community and growing buyer interest in the project.

"It all comes back to the community, to Cohasset. These are well-priced homes, we have a number of reservations and real strong interest," McAuliffe said.

The Cook Estate is offering two styles of homes; similar to other already built Abbott Development projects in Mattapoisett and Plymouth. The single family, two-bedroom homes will be between 2,400 and 2,900 square feet and from the outside, their designs will be compatible.

"We have five reservations that are being converted into purchase and sale agreements as we speak," Hamilton said. The to-be-constructed homes are priced between $785,000 and $999,000.

"We've already seen an increase in interest and traffic since we started moving dirt around," said Bob Durant, Abbott project manager for the Cook Estate.

Homes will not be built until a purchase and sale agreement is executed, but Abbott is hoping for a full-built out within two years. The first foundations will be poured around Thanksgiving.

The former Cook Estate home, currently the only structure on the property, will be demolished next week. Attempts to re-locate the 5,200 square foot cape-style house fell through. In the spring, the Cohasset Housing Partnership looked into moving the house to a town-owned piece of property for a re-purpose as a senior center. Hamilton said another organization based in Western Massachusetts showed some interest, but the organization's timeline did not match up with the construction.

Hamilton said interest in the property and future homes has been steady throughout the summer. Representatives from Dean and Hamilton have been on hand every Sunday from 2:30 to 4p.m. to show prospective buyers around the property. They will continue to show the property even with the start of construction.

"Many people came over the summer and liked what they saw, but wanted to wait to make sure the project got financial backing and shovels in the grounds," Hamilton said.

The prospective buyers — and those few who have made reservations — are a diverse group, Hamilton said. The Cook Estate is not an age-restricted community, but most of the prospective buyers are age 40 and up, many who have grown children and are looking to downsize.

"It's people who want to be part of an active community and take advantage of everything a community like Cohasset offers," Hamilton said, adding the future owners are looking forward to the "turnkey" operation of a condo association.

When prospective buyers come they get to see the property, and if still interested, they are brought back to Dean and Hamilton to see the array of site and floor plans. Exact models of the two styles of homes can be viewed at Abbott's other developments in Plymouth and Mattapoisett.

"We're moving ahead and feeling good about the pre-sales," Hamilton said. Abbott Real Estate and Development purchased the 19-acre property located off Sohier Street in 2006. They received a special permit from the Planning Board under the town's residential cluster development bylaw. The residential cluster development district allows for homes to be built closer together with open space on the edges. Despite the "cluster" of homes, there will be no more units built than would be allowed under normal subdivision.

The Planning Board approved the project in fall 2007, but the decision was appealed. The owner of the abutting property where Stop & Shop is located, Donald Stazko, appealed the Planning Board's approval of the project on the grounds the increased runoff from the Cook Estate development would adversely affect the adjacent property. The Planning Board's decision was upheld during the appeal process allowing the project to move forward.

Abbott Development has been in business for more than a decade and has built more than 1,000 homes both for rent and for sale, including the recent Seton Highlands development at the Pinehills in Plymouth.

Although Abbott was the developer to see the project through to ground breaking, they were not the first to draw up plans for the site.

Before the Abbott developers ever entered the scene, the land was under the auspices of the town and was slated to be affordable senior housing. However, wastewater issues first forced a reduction in scope for the project (originally proposed at 95 units), and the project ultimately fell through after several plans by four different developers. The land was returned to the heirs of the Cook estate and they hired Abbott Developers in 2006.

Town-owned land, roughly nine acres, adjacent to the Cook Estate has a conservation restriction on it.

Cook easement before Special Town Meeting

The developers of the Cook Estate, Abbott Development, are seeking an easement from the town to permit water from a point source discharge pipe to flow onto town property. The easement will cover a 39,000 square foot space (approximately one acre) and its purpose is to allow the easement holder to enter town property to maintain erosion control, to prune vegetation and remove debris.

"They couldn't do anything without a Conservation Commission order of conditions," said Rich Henderson, attorney for the Cook Estate developers.

Selectman Karen Quigley questioned why the easement had to be so large and if the easement matched up with the limits placed on that piece of town property, which is under a conservation restriction.

Selectmen voted 5-0 to recommend the article for Special Town Meeting on Nov. 16 pending approval from town counsel.

FALL!

Hello Cohasset. I cannot believe it is October already but it is here. We will have a number of Fall events and October-like fairs and things to write about but I am always looking for more.

NEW ARRIVAL

Thank Heavens For Little Boys...Jen, Lansing and big sister Rebecca "Becca-Boo" Palmer are so happy with their new addition to the family. William Richard Palmer was born on Aug. 10th, 2009 at 4:21 am, weighing in at 5 pounds 11 ounces and was 19-1/4 inches long. Baby Will is a very lucky little guy indeed to have the love, warmth and caring of his family and all of his friends. Congratulations Palmers!

SHELTER BENEFIT

Enjoy an exciting afternoon of sensational Italian cuisine, fine wine, and culinary discussion at Orta Restaurant in Pembroke to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter. Orta recently received Boston Magazine's "Best New Restaurant 2009 – South" and has been featured on Channel 5's Chronicle. The Fresh from Italy Culinary Event takes place on Sunday, Nov. 1st from 1 to 4pm. What a nice afternoon this will be while helping to support the Shelter. The Culinary Event includes a question and answer discussion with chefs and co-owners Jimmy Burke and Joanie Wilson, as well as delectable hors d'oeuvres and mouth-watering Italian cuisine. Fine wine will be served throughout the event and will be accompanied by a variety of sumptuous desserts. In addition, a silent auction, door prizes, and a raffle will round out the event. Visit the "Events" page at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org to direct your questions to the Chef!

Tickets are just $50 per person and are on sale during public hours at the Scituate Animal Shelter, 780 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. For more information please visit us online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org or call 781-544-4533. A limited number of tickets will be sold.

GET MOVING

Experience the joy of moving to world music in an energetic, creative movement class designed for all bodies and ages. South Shore Hospital's Youth Health Connection is offering a six-week Women's Movement program beginning on Tuesday, October 6, 9:30-10:30 am. The program will be lead by Paula Nesoff, L.C.S.W., an experienced dancer and group facilitator experienced in inspiring movement and creativity. Classes flow from gentle warm-ups to high energy dancing, followed by a period of deep relaxation and ending with time for reflection and journaling. Registration is required. Please contact Karin Farrell at (781) 794-7849 or karin_farrell@sshosp.org. The cost for the six-week program is $75. Please bring a yoga mat & water bottle. This program is a community benefits initiative of South Shore Hospital. This sounds like a nice morning for women to have some "me" time!

STORYTIMES

The folks at Buttonwood are hosting two special story times. On Sunday Oct. 4th at 1 p.m. come celebrate the release of the new Winnie-the-Book, "Return to the Hundred Acre Woods" with a "Beary Special Story Time." Bring you favorite bear, enjoy bear shaped treats and have fun with pooh activities. Join Mama Steph on Thursday Oct. 8th at 4 p.m. to hear her read "The Very Hungry Caterpillar." Jumpstart, a national early childhood organization, selected this book for their "Read for the Record" campaign. Their goal is to break the record for the number of people reading the same book on the same day. Mama Steph will also entertain children with her wonderful songs and musical program. If you would like any information or, have any questions please call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

CLASS REUNIONS

The Cohasset High School Class of 1999 10-year reunion will be taking place on Friday Nov. 27th from 7:30 p.m.-12:30 a.m. at the Red Lion Inn Cave. This is a great opportunity for everyone to share your good old memories from your years at CHS. Admission to the reunion is free. Music and Appetizers will be provided and there will be a cash bar so bring money to purchase drinks. If you have any questions please send an email to cohasset99@gmail.com.

The Cohasset High School class of 1979 will hold its 30th class reunion Friday, Nov. 27, at the Lightkeeper's Residence. Plans are in the works and more details to follow. For more immediate information, contact Darilynn Evans at darilynn's@verizon.net, Beth Seraikas at dseraikas54@comcast.net, or Sally Sisson at salsisson@comcast.net.

ESTATE SALE

The Our World Children's Museum will be holding a Festive Harvest Time Estate Sale and are welcoming all donations of gently used items from your home that others would love to have for themselves. These items can be big or small, clothing, toys, furniture, costumes, sports equipment and more. Make sure to call for more information at 781-383-3198, or send an email to ourworldprograms@comcast.net and go online at www.ourworld-cgdm.org to see our most updated schedule and to register for our electronic newsletter.

That is the news for this week. Send in all news information no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

Pumpkin Patch proceeds to benefit Appalachia Service Project

Cohasset's seventh annual Pumpkin Patch will be open 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., from Oct. 10 through Halloween, at Wheelwright Park. On weekends, tractor rides and face painting will be available. The Pumpkin Patch is completely staffed by volunteers, and between 170 to 190 volunteers will work at the Patch.

Those who buy a pumpkin will support the more than 160 volunteers from Cohasset and beyond on a Home Repair Ministry. All profits from this fundraiser will go to directly support the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project, an ecumenical home repair ministry. Cohasset ASP sends close to 200 people to Virginia, West Virginia or Kentucky to help make homes safer and drier under the direction of Appalachia Service Project Inc. based in Johnson, Tenn.

Kicking out breast cancer

By Lizia Oliveira
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Stepping into the WEGOTSOCCER store in Foxborough, it's hard to not notice the breast cancer pink ribbons all over the place. They're stuck to the windows, counters and walls - almost everywhere.

The link between pink ribbons and soccer may seem unusual, but three years ago the store embraced the American Cancer Society's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer campaign, and it has proven to be a good relationship.

"As a company we decided to focus 100 percent of our charitable efforts toward one cause in an effort to have the greatest single effect possible," says owner Michael O'Connor.

He says that fundraising campaign presented itself as a great option for the store, "being not only local but simply a fantastic group of professionals and volunteers who help us do the best we can with the resources we have as a small company."

In each of the past three years, about 350 walkers joined the company in its efforts.

"Because we have a small number of employees, we must look outside WEGOTSOCCER to fulfill our fundraising goals," said Elizabeth Houldcroft, who works at the store.

As a Flagship Sponsor, the store spearheads efforts to raise money and to reach out the customers, vendors, and surrounding community to increase awareness of the American Cancer Society.

"Just like anywhere else, our soccer community has mothers, sisters and friends all affected by breast cancer and we hope our efforts have provided them with information and resources that they weren't knowledgeable about before," O'Connor said.

"Our efforts are geared towards creating new lifelong supporters of this cause," he said.

WEGOTSOCCER evolved as a part of Gotshalk's Clothing Company in Bridgewater. At one time, it was a small part of a bigger business. It then eventually became an independent company, which is today one of the top three soccer specialty companies in the U.S.

Making Strides walk set for Sunday

By John Hilliard
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

If you go:

Date: Sunday, Oct. 4 – Along the Charles River Esplanade
Location: Department of Conservation and Recreation Hatch Memorial Shell
When: Rolling start 8-10 a.m.
E-mail: strides_boston@cancer.org

For nearly two decades, thousands of people have walked along the banks of the River Charles in a public display of support for patients fighting breast cancer.

"It definitely runs the gamut from young to old," said Kate Rogers, the state director for communications at the American Cancer Society, of the group's Making Strides Against Breast Cancer fundraiser in Boston.

Each year, thousands of walkers — including cancer survivors, patients, along with family and friends — raise money toward breast cancer research, plus education and family support programs, she said.

"One of our goals is to reach out to those who are recently diagnosed and provide them information about their cancer," Rogers said.

The walk is scheduled for Sunday, Oct. 4, at the Esplanade Hatch Shell in Boston, with a rolling start between 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. Rogers said the walk is the largest and oldest walk of its kind, and winds a five-mile tour along the Charles River, along with an alternate, three-mile walk.

"There's no minimum fundraising requirement," she said.

About 150 similar walks are held across the country, including 21 in the New England region, according to the group.

Fundraisers help support about 3,400 communities with society programs. Last year, the society collected $3 million from the Boston walk from about 40,000 participants, and has collected $40 million since 1993, when the first breast cancer walk event began, she said.

About 81 cents of every dollar goes to society programs, according to the group's Web site.

OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Stone said cultural perceptions of cancer arise as well. Many women from Third World countries see cancer as a death sentence, he said.

"I had a patient in my office over year and half ago. She had been here for quite a few years and her husband was with her," Stone said. "I told her I thought she had breast cancer. Her husband said to me, 'Have you ever seen somebody survive breast cancer?'"

Dr. Ann Larkin, associate professor of surgery and co-director of the high-risk program at UMass Memorial in Worcester, had a similar story about a Vietnamese patient. According to the patient's interpreter, Larkin said, cancer isn't a word used because of the fear associated with it.

"The challenges are to find ways to communicate with different cultures and get across that this is not a death sentence and we can treat it," said Larkin, who said she sees many Eastern European, Brazilian, Portuguese and Asian women at her facility. "But how do you talk to a patient about breast cancer treatment if you don't use the cancer word?"

Statistics from the Centers for Disease Control show survival rates for women diagnosed with breast cancer are continuing to improve. From 1998 to 2005, the number of breast cancer deaths in women fell by 1.8 percent per year. Ronni Cohen-Boyar, executive director of the Massachusetts affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure, said 98 percent of women diagnosed with cancer confined to the breast are alive five years later.

"That's an amazing statistic," Cohen-Boyar said. "If we could get people to see that if you have to have breast cancer, you should be one of 98 percent."

Doctors and advocates say screening is one of the most important components in catching breast cancer before it spreads. New technology such as digital mammography has emerged, and high-risk patients who have abnormalities in breast tissue can receive a breast MRI.

In addition, new drugs and chemotherapy treatments make treating the disease more targeted, doctors say. For example, a drug approved in 1998 called herceptin targets a specific strain of breast cancer that was resistant to other medications.

Dr. Jane Mendez, a doctor at the Belkin Breast Center in Boston.

"For a long time, it was slash, burn and poison - surgery, radiation, and chemo," said Carol Matyka, a Boston advocate with the National Breast Cancer Coalition. "There are drugs that are much more targeted now. What we're learning now, the key is, how do we understand the right drug for the right cancer?"

Linda Kaiser, a 55-year-old Northborough survivor, said she was diagnosed with stage four breast cancer in July 2007 and a spinal tumor had paralyzed her. Doctors discovered her strain of cancer could be treated with herceptin, and Kaiser said her tumors are gone. She's now walking with a walker.

"That was actually the only treatment that I could get," she said. "Without it, I honestly don't think I'd be here because the cancer had metastasized so much."

Developing a new drug can take years, advocates say, because of research, clinical trials, and the approval process. Groups have focused on awareness and large community fundraising efforts, often backed by the 2.5 million breast cancer survivors nationwide.

The American Cancer Society in Massachusetts raised $3.4 million at its 2008 Making Strides Against Breast Cancer event, and Cohen-Boyar said Komen's Massachusetts chapter raised more than $2.54 million in the fiscal year ending March 31. But when it comes to awareness, Larkin said her middle-class and upper middle-class patients in Worcester are the ones paying attention.

"They tend to keep closer track. But frankly, they don't have as many other incredible stressers in their life," Larkin said. "A lot of the underserved population in central Massachusetts is not getting in because they fall through the cracks."

In Boston, Mendez said it's critical to pay attention to other populations. Black and Hispanic women often have worse outcomes for breast cancer than white women, and Mendez said it's important to determine whether these statistics come from biological or socioeconomic issues in order to properly treat these women.

Stone said some centers are doing their best to address access to care. Boston Medical Center now has a centralized phone system where workers gather all of a patient's medical information so only one appointment is necessary.

When it comes to fear, Dr. Barbara Stewart, an adviser to the Massachusetts chapter of the American Cancer Society, said sometimes the most effective outreach is a relative or friend.

"If they have other people in their lives to help them deal with appropriate visits and screening and really thinking it through and being informed, that's the best way to make sure if anything's there, it's found and found early," Stewart said.

And some women are sticking to treatment despite the hurdles.

Susan Farris, a Canton bookkeeper, was diagnosed last year at age 38. She hadn't been getting regular mammograms because she hadn't reached the recommended age of 40, she said, so she didn't find a lump in her breast until after lap band surgery.

After chemotherapy, radiation, and a mastectomy, Farris said she was out of work for eight months. The costs of treatment have become too much, she said, especially with her husband's hours being cut. Farris said she'll have to file for bankruptcy protection. But, she said, she never thought of forgoing treatments to save money.

"It's my health," Farris said. "I want to be around for my kids. I hate to leave them without a mom."

Staying positive with breast cancer

By Ann and John Murphy

When cancer strikes, especially breast cancer, it is like a nightmare that never should happen. It hits friends, family members, and even ourselves. We want to wake up and realize that it has gone away, like all nightmares do. But it is true, it is real; and we must deal with it.

We write today to help with the emotions of breast cancer which follow the diagnosis. Doctors have many cures for patients and survival rates are increasing every year. Yet, what about our emotions? How can we have an uplifting feeling? How do we deal with the healing?

Many breast cancer patients say that it is a positive approach to the illness that can make a wonderful difference in their recovery. We realize this is a serious illness and we also realize that caring people, good books, happy and funny movies, and all things positive in life can help to keep one's spirits up.

What we think about often influences our health and recovery. If we realize that treatment can be painful, we can try to look beyond the pain and plan an evening with a cheerful friend.

Try very hard to avoid the "gloom and doom" people out there. They will only get you down. Your happy friends are good medicine for you. Allow them to cheer you. Even if you don't feel like laughing and smiling, do it anyway. You can fool your mind into happiness by just pretending. Faking it and pretending really work! Give it a try!

John and Ann Murphy, humor and stress management trainers.

Many breast cancer patients say that it is a positive approach to the illness that can make a wonderful difference in their recovery. We realize this is a serious illness and we also realize that caring people, good books, happy and funny movies, and all things positive in life can help to keep one's spirits up.

Also look for good books to read – books that will help you stay positive. We suggest "The Healing Power of Humor," by Allen Klein; "Pain is Inevitable But Misery Is Optional So Stick A Geranium In Your Hat And Be Happy," by Barbara Johnson; and "Undress Your Stress," by Lois Levy. Perhaps you could start a book club and discuss ideas in these books with some positive friends.

Funny movies, funny television shows, and happy songs can also keep you positive during breast cancer recovery. Search them out. Watch or listen to these with family members. Sing along with the tunes. Stand up and dance with them. Say to yourself, "Every day in every way I am getting better!"

We teach these strategies in our humor workshops and we have helped many folks who have stress from illness by using fun, laughter, play, and even lots of smiling.

When we want to change our world of despair over breast cancer, we must try every day to change our thoughts. The Bible tells us that many things "come to pass" and they do not come to stay.

So, by following our doctors' treatment plan and by letting others cheer us and be there for us, we can conquer this illness. We pray for all who are valiantly fighting breast cancer. And, please remember, you can do it! Thousands have been successful and you will too!

Hingham residents Ann and John Murphy are humor and stress management trainers who for the past 15 years have been helping individuals and groups cope with stress and change by "lightening up." The Murphys are published in "The Chicken Soup For The Soul" books and have written numerous books and articles on parenting. Their e-mail address is: humortalks@aol.com.

'Lightening up' during challenging times

As humor and stress management trainers, John and Ann Murphy find ways to help people in difficult circumstances "lighten up" without diminishing the challenges they are facing. Their "24 Ways to Lighten Up" tips include:

- Smile more.
- Find new situations to laugh about.
- Clip out "significant thoughts" to share with others.
- Wear a fun button such as the one bearing the message: "Enjoy Life. This is not a dress rehearsal!"
- Keep a box of crayons and blank paper around to doodle or scribble, or just to be creative.
- Cut out cartoons from the "New Yorker." Hang them up and leave them around.
- Listen to different types of music. Sing in the car.
- Keep a book of humor handy.
- Write down or tear out a joke and share it.
- Get a coffee mug bearing a message you like.
- Set up a humor bulletin board.
- Hang around others who make you laugh. Share your funny stories with family and friends.
- Allow yourself to be more creative and to think creatively.

massage can decrease stress, anxiety, depression, pain, and fatigue. Many health care professionals recognize massage as a useful, noninvasive addition to standard medical treatment.

"Massage allows the patient to disconnect a little bit on the table. If they can feel relaxed, at peace - even for 60 minutes - that's huge," Doody said.

What she has found is over the past few years is cancer has become less of a taboo topic and many are reaching out to find ways to help a loved one.

"It used to be something you couldn't talk about it but now people want to do something," Doody said, adding most of her oncology patients are referred to her by family members or close friends.

For her, oncology massage is a way to user her skill to give back and make someone feel good. Her massages can also incorporate other Eastern therapies such as acupressure points and reiki.

"If you're sick and in pain, you're willing to try anything. Whatever works," Doody said.

In addition to Doody, fellow Mariposa colleagues Caleena Morrissey and Leslie McKeever also perform oncology massages.

Acupuncture

Bob Thompson has been practicing acupuncture for four years and operates his business, The Acupuncture Advantage of Hingham, on Derby St. in South Hingham.

Since becoming an acupuncturist he has treated a handful of oncology patients. All received acupuncture therapy in conjunction with more conventional western medicine.

"What I expect is that if a patient has stress - and if they have been diagnosed with cancer there is stress - they will have less stress after an acupuncture session," Thompson said, adding other symptoms like nausea, fatigue, hot flashes will also be less.

"What we do is help the patient have a better quality life while undergoing treatment," Thompson said. "My objective is to provide adjunct care to the care (a cancer patient) receives through their medical doctor."

Like all his acupuncture patients, Thompson will sit down with oncology patients for about 90-minutes before ever touching an acupuncture needle. He'll quiz them on their symptoms and go over their diagnosis, then "translate" it to Chinese medical diagnosis and prepare a treatment plan.

There are over 450 cataloged acupuncture points in the body, but only a handful are typically used during a treatment.

Health insurance providers are beginning to cover acupuncture treatments as a treatment method for myriad conditions.

"Patients are more likely to get covered today than they were five years ago and 15 years ago they had no chance," Thompson said.

However, Thompson said cancer patients are not coming to him in droves – he's treated only a handful – and many of them are coming after they've tried a lot of other treatment methods. But, he is noticing a shift.

"Now they are coming as an earlier resort...and part of the reason is their doctors are telling them to try it," Thompson said.

For example, the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute has the Leonard P. Zakim Center for Integrative Therapies, a department dedicated to the combining new approaches to cancer care with the trusted treatments that have been saving lives for half a century. Their services include massage therapy, acupuncture, and nutritional guidance.

Thompson said cancer researchers are just beginning to spend time and money on researching acupuncture as a form of complementary treatment for cancer. As more and more patients are trying out acupuncture therapy as a complement to their treatment, there are enough patients having positive response to merit more research.

According to the American Cancer Society website, available scientific evidence does not support claims that acupuncture is effective as a treatment for cancer, but it appears it may be useful as a complementary method for relieving some symptoms related to cancer and other conditions.

TREATMENTS FOR BREAST CANCER

Surgery: This can range from a simple lumpectomy, where only the cancerous tissue is removed, to a complete mastectomy, which removes the entire breast. Both types of surgery are often accompanied by removal of nearby lymph nodes.

Radiation therapy: This is used either after surgery or to reduce the size of a tumor. External radiation is when a machine focuses radiation from outside the body onto the area affected by the cancer. Internal radiation therapy involves placing a radioactive substance sealed in needles, wires or catheters and placed directly into or near the cancer.

Biologic therapy: This involves the use of drugs to reduce the size of some types of cancer tumors that overproduce a growth-promoting protein.

Chemotherapy: This is the use of drugs, usually over a 3 to 6 month period following surgical removal of cancer tumors, to reduce the chance of cancer spreading and to increase the cure rate.

Hormone therapy: Estrogen can affect some types of breast cancer. Hormone therapy is given to patients with specific kinds of breast cancer to reduce the chances of recurrence.

Official letters of concern and 1500 signatures for the MBTA

By Martha A. R. Bewick
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Monday, Hingham Selectman Laura Burns submitted letters on behalf of Boards of Selectmen of Hingham, Hull and Cohasset, as well as Mayor Susan Kay of Weymouth and the MBTA Advisory Board to Jeffrey Mullan, Assistant Secretary of the Executive Office of Transportation (EOT), expressing concern about the future of MBTA service on the South Shore. She also invited Mullan, who will become the next Secretary of EOT on Nov. 1, and David D'Alessandro, former John Hancock chief, who is undertaking the "stem to stern review" of the MBTA, to a tour of the Hingham Shipyard, and a briefing about the economic importance of ferries to the South Shore region. The towns share issues of general concern about MBTA service that they hope to raise in the proposed briefing.

Aboard the ferries, meanwhile, Jeanne Reynolds has collected almost 1500 signatures since August urging the MBTA to keep the commuter boat service running. Reynolds, a 20-year commuter boat rider, is a Hingham resident who works in human resources at a financial services company in Boston. She began gathering the signatures after she had asked Rep. Bradley to schedule a meeting some evening, so that the MBTA could hear from ferry commuters about the proposed service cuts. When she reviewed one recent page of signatures, she observed, "Most are from Hingham and Cohasset, but there are some from Marshfield, three from Duxbury, and here's one from Norwell, and Pembroke."

Some passengers use the ferry exclusively, and some will take both the train and the ferry, or use the Red Line, depending on their schedules.

The ferries provide better schedules for some, and reliability, which is critically important to their work. Most commuters on the boat work in the financial district, although some go to Cambridge. "Construction workers were regular riders on the 6 a.m. ferry during the Big Dig, but those jobs have gone," she noted.

Reynolds lives within walking distance to the Hingham Shipyard commuter boat. She wrote to Hingham Selectman, Laura Burns: "The proximity of the condo to the commuter boat was one of the most important considerations I used when buying in Hingham at the real estate high in the summer of 2005." She had rented apartments earlier in Cohasset and Scituate, and began riding the ferry to work in 1990, when she first moved to the South Shore.

COURTESY PHOTO

Commuter boat advocate and 20-year rider Jeanne Reynolds at the Hingham ferry terminal. Reynolds has collected 1500 signatures.

"My commute is one of the best parts of my day."
— Jeanne Reynolds, Hingham resident

From her home at Hingham Woods, she either walks to the ferry, or rides her bicycle along the Back River path and across Rte. 3A where she leaves her bicycle in the bike racks at the terminal. She has a five-minute walk from Rowes Wharf to her work. From time to time on weekends, Reynolds will use the Quincy boat and take her bicycle to Boston. "I ride all day in Boston, and along the Charles River to Harvard Square, then end up in the North End, and take the boat back to Quincy."

Reynolds added: "My commute is one of the best parts of my day. I have been purchasing a commuter boat pass since 2000 thru pay roll deduction with pretax dollars and the pass is mailed to my home. I was quite upset to hear that the money I pay gets credited to the train instead of the commuter boats. If this is true, at a higher expense & less convenience to me, I will switch to a ten-ride pass so that all my money goes to the boats."

Her concern about the disposition of commuter boat pass funds arose from comments made by Bill Spence of Massachusetts Bay Lines in the Hingham Journal, who pointed out that the ferries didn't receive credit for commuter boat pass revenues. She also observed that the ferry prices have doubled in the last 10 years.

Reynolds is averse to riding the commuter train for personal reasons, although she supports train service as a former Wellesley resident. Were the ferry services to end, she would drive to Boston to work, or to Quincy and take the Red Line. She is concerned that the MBTA is using decreased ridership as a reason to end service, and points out that there have been layoffs in the financial district, but that when the economy recovers, the ridership on the ferries will be back. "We saw a ridership dip in the 90s," she observed, "but that wasn't as significant as lately."

"We also lost some riders from Marshfield and Scituate" she noted, "because the commuter rail stations were close to their homes. But for others, the train is not as convenient, and the boat is a better option." Reynolds also recalled how effective the ferries were on 9/11. "I remember on Sept. 11, how chaotic it was at the train stations to get workers out of the city after all the office buildings were closed. At Rowes Wharf it was quite orderly as different boats just loaded and left for Hingham."

Reynolds has made friends with the ferry crews over the years, and is concerned about their jobs if the commuter boat services come to an end.

She also pointed out in her letter to Selectman Burns the importance of the ferry to the Hingham Shipyard development, now underway: "The crews on both Massachusetts Bay Lines and Boston Harbor Cruises very much appreciate my efforts to save their jobs. In my opinion, it just does not make any sense to eliminate the option of water transportation to Boston. Also, a whole development is being built at the shipyard based on the proximity to the commuter boat."

"This is a very important issue to me and many other commuter boat riders from all over the South Shore," she concluded in her letter to Selectman Burns. Reynolds will continue to gather signatures, and do what she can to save commuter boat service between the South Shore and Boston.

Information about your drinking water

The following is a notice from the Cohasset Water Department

Cohasset Water Contains High Levels of Lead — Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Even though this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct this situation.

We routinely sample water at consumers' taps for lead. The tests show lead levels in the water above the limit, or "action level," so we are required to install corrosion control treatment. This treatment helps prevent lead in the pipes from dissolving into the water. Corrosion control is installed and is being adjusted to improve results.

What should I do?

- Listed below are some steps you can take to reduce your exposure to lead:
- Call us at the number below to find out how to get your water tested for lead.
- Find out whether your pipes contain lead or lead solder.
- Run your water for 15-30 seconds or until it becomes cold before using it for drinking or cooking. This flushes any standing lead from the pipes.
- Don't cook with or drink water from the hot water tap; lead dissolves more easily into hot water.

Do not boil your water to remove lead. Excessive boiling water makes the lead more concentrated — the lead remains when the water evaporates.

What does this mean?

Typically, lead enters water supplies by leaching from lead or brass pipes and plumbing components. New lead pipes and plumbing components containing lead are no longer allowed for this reason; however, many older homes may contain lead pipes. Your water is more likely to contain high lead levels if water pipes in or leading to your home are made of lead or contain lead solder.

Your water is more likely to contain high lead levels if water pipes in or leading to your home are made of lead or contain lead solder.

Infants and children who drink water containing lead in excess of the action level could experience delays in their physical or mental development. Children could show slight deficits in attention span and learning abilities. Adults who drink this water over many years could develop kidney problems or high blood pressure.

What happened? What is being done?

In June of 2009, 5 homes in Cohasset tested above the maximum contaminant level for lead. The source of the lead is from brass or lead pipes and fixtures located in the plumbing of the home. The water that leaves the treatment plant and well station to supply the town does not contain any lead. The treatment plant has a corrosion control system in place and has made adjustments to improve results.

This is not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately.

For more information, please contact the Cohasset Water Department at 781-383-0057 or 339 King St. Cohasset, MA 02025.

Please share this information with all the other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

BEFORE

I am a 47 year old woman. I have been overweight my entire adult life. I have tried many, many times to lose weight and get in shape, my efforts failed. Sometimes I would lose some weight, but would gain it and more right back.

When I joined Get In Shape For Women my goal was to lose 40 lbs in 6 months. I met my goal in 4 months and had gone from a size 18 to a 10! I am now 5 months into the program and have maintained that weight loss, and am now a size 8! I feel great!

Get In Shape For Women is different from any other gym or weight loss program I have tried, and I have tried them all. I have always maintained a membership at one gym or another. I've had sessions with trainers at other gyms, and I still didn't get results. The trainer would take me around the gym and demonstrate use of the machines once, write a task list of the machines as a plan to follow, and then I was on my own. Eventually I would get discouraged or bored, or both and stop going. It is a completely different experience at Get In Shape For Women. The small group setting, usually 4 women with 1 trainer, is very supportive. The trainer is with me through every step of every workout motivating me to progress each session. My trainers are incredible. They educate me about strength training and cardio, not give me a task list to perform. I have never been bored. They also provide nutritional guidance – with a healthy meal plan that I was able to follow.

I have a very busy life with many time constraints. This program and the phenomenal trainers assure that I get the most out of every work out. They provide the education, direction, and motivation I need to succeed and hold me accountable for showing up and following through.

I have never been below a double-digit size in my entire adult life. As I write this letter, I am very comfortably wearing a pair of size 8 jeans. Amazing! I feel healthier, stronger, and much more energetic. Thank you, Get In Shape For Women!

Information about your drinking water

Cohasset Water Contains High Levels of Lead — Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Even though this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct this situation.

We routinely sample water at consumers' taps for lead. The tests show lead levels in the water above the limit, or "action level," so we are required to install corrosion control treatment. This treatment helps prevent lead in the pipes from dissolving into the water. Corrosion control is installed and is being adjusted to improve results.

What should I do?

- Listed below are some steps you can take to reduce your exposure to lead:
- Call us at the number below to find out how to get your water tested for lead.
- Find out whether your pipes contain lead or lead solder.
- Run your water for 15-30 seconds or until it becomes cold before using it for drinking or cooking. This flushes any standing lead from the pipes.
- Don't cook with or drink water from the hot water tap; lead dissolves more easily into hot water.

Do not boil your water to remove lead. Excessive boiling water makes the lead more concentrated — the lead remains when the water evaporates.

Get In Shape For Women is different from any other gym or weight loss program I have tried, and I have tried them all. I have always maintained a membership at one gym or another. I've had sessions with trainers at other gyms, and I still didn't get results. The trainer would take me around the gym and demonstrate use of the machines once, write a task list of the machines as a plan to follow, and then I was on my own. Eventually I would get discouraged or bored, or both and stop going. It is a completely different experience at Get In Shape For Women. The small group setting, usually 4 women with 1 trainer, is very supportive. The trainer is with me through every step of every workout motivating me to progress each session. My trainers are incredible. They educate me about strength training and cardio, not give me a task list to perform. I have never been bored. They also provide nutritional guidance – with a healthy meal plan that I was able to follow.

I have a very busy life with many time constraints. This program and the phenomenal trainers assure that I get the most out of every work out. They provide the education, direction, and motivation I need to succeed and hold me accountable for showing up and following through.

I have never been below a double-digit size in my entire adult life. As I write this letter I am very comfortably wearing a pair of size 8 jeans. Amazing! I feel healthier, stronger, and much more energetic. Thank you, Get In Shape For Women!

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Awareness of preventative health care is key

Twenty-five years ago, the word "cancer" was often spoken in a whisper, as if saying it out loud invited the disease Americans then considered a death sentence. The words "breast cancer" were barely spoken at all, as if people's minds were working like those crude Internet filters that block any phrase containing the word "breast."

That silence was deadly. Physicians have long understood that early detection was the key to successful treatment of breast cancer. To slow the growth in breast cancer fatalities, someone had to teach women to examine their breasts for suspicious lumps – and do it without blushing. Government needed to reverse the historic underfunding of breast cancer research. Women and their physicians had to be urged to submit to regular mammograms.

Those changes in behavior had to begin with increased public understanding, and thus was launched Breast Cancer Awareness Month, born 25 years ago on Oct. 1. Backers of that effort not only adopted a month, they expropriated a color. Since then, everything has been coming up pink, from lapel ribbons to cereal boxes, Major Leaguers' baseball bats - and today's Cohasset Mariner.

Increased awareness initially resulted in a higher rate of breast cancer diagnosis, but early detection has helped reduce sharply the fatality rate. From 1998 to 2005, the number of breast cancer deaths in women fell by 1.8 percent per year. Recent statistics show that 98 percent of women diagnosed with cancer confined to the breast are alive five years later.

Awareness is part of the cure, as demonstrated by the higher breast cancer rates among women who have immigrated to the U.S. Such women often believe cancer is a death sentence, not a curable illness, public health officials say, and they don't have access to good health insurance. When forced to choose between an expensive mammogram and putting food on the table, many low-income women put their own health last.

This is where the 25-year-old breast cancer awareness movement intersects with today's big public policy debate. There is room for debate over many aspects of the health care reform bills now before Congress – and the intense debate of these last few months promises to go on for months more.

But there is near universal agreement that better preventive care saves lives and saves money. While most states require insurance companies to cover diagnostic mammograms for women over 40 at a reduced rate, that doesn't help the millions of women who have no health insurance. And while some health providers and nonprofit agencies offer mammograms at discounted rates for women without health insurance, the women who need those programs most often aren't aware of them.

Health reform legislation now before Congress addresses these concerns, requiring that mammograms and other preventive health measures be covered by insurers at minimal costs to the consumer. The bills aim to dramatically reduce the number of people denied access to such tests because they lack health insurance.

There is less partisan debate over the prevention provisions in the health reform proposals because they make so much sense. The danger is that partisan pressures will kill all health reform proposals, even ones where there is wide agreement. For everyone touched by breast cancer – and that covers most everyone – the awareness promoted by pink ribbons and pink newspapers is important every October.

With national health policy hanging in the balance, our awareness this October should include how our health care system responds to breast cancer and other preventable, treatable diseases – and how it can be improved.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Revisiting new pay procedure

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank Stephanie Noble for speaking on behalf of the Instructional Aides at the Sept. 16 school committee meeting. She provided a voice for many.

In last week's article "Pay Cut Confusion" there are some points that I would like to clarify.

The article stated that the Instructional Aides have been paid for 210 days rather than 180 days. When I was hired, I was presented with an annual salary that was to be divided into 21 pay periods. This was done over 10 months, as we are not paid in the summer. An hourly rate was never discussed as part of my employment.

According to Alfred Slanetz, Instructional Aides were paid according to a contract that spelled out an hourly rate. I have never signed such a contract. We were just presented a contract to sign last week outlining this new pay procedure, after the fact. He also said we were overpaid by $3,000 - $4,000, again a statement with inaccuracies. I figured my pay decrease to be approximately $1,500 per year. Depending on how long an Instructional Aide has worked within the schools, that amount is much higher.

The bottom line is our pay was cut significantly. What is equally troubling is the manner in which the change was implemented. Letters of Intent were signed in June, and the assumption was made that our jobs and pay structure was remaining intact. Instructional Aides were not given any notice of the pay change or the fact that the pay cycle also would change. Many employees planned on receiving a pay check the first Thursday back at school (as was the practice for a very long time) and many were left shorthanded. Some of those affected have been with the schools for 10, 20and even 30 years. Given the economic times we are all living in, was consideration given to how "valued" employees are treated? Although an apology was given, it does not fix what has already been done.

The Instructional Aides met last week with Dr. Walsh and Mr. DeGennaro, Business Manager, to discuss this issue. Several points regarding the actual duties being performed by Instructional Aides and hours worked were highlighted. This provided much insight to both parties. Provided with this information, our understanding is that the pay structure is to be revisited at the next School Committee meeting. Dr. Walsh has assured us that she is planning a follow up meeting with us.

I have every bit of confidence that they will do the right thing which is to go back to the way in which we were paid, from which we understood and were told at the time we were hired, for the last several years and even decades. The School Committee should agree to grandfather paraprofessionals hired prior to this school year. New hires were in fact hired under the new terms. The Superintendent and School Committee members have the opportunity to return the dignity and value that was taken away from this very dedicated and essential group of employees.

Academic freedom and policy, not politics

TO THE EDITOR:

I was unable to attend the School Committee meeting on 9/16 but watched it on television. Although I was disappointed by the administration's decision not to show the speech live, I was pleased to see the School Committee and the Superintendent agree to allow teachers to show the taped broadcast without requiring a parent opt-out. My husband and 6th grade son watched with me, and we all heard the same thing. We watched my son's Social Studies teacher ask the School Committee several times, just for the record, to reiterate their decision to overturn the need for the opt-out provision. Later, we were surprised to learn this had been reversed by Dr. Walsh.

The day after the School Committee meeting, my son came home with a memo from his teacher, notifying parents that all 6th graders would watch the taped broadcast in class that Friday. However, it turned out that my son's group was the only one to view it – immediately after that class period, the broadcast was yanked and the teacher was told she was not allowed to show it to the rest of the students until she sent home a special letter with an opt-out provision. Since she has not done this, the situation remains in limbo.

The only explanation we've been given has to do with a very loose interpretation of a memo from the Department of Education. This memo does not recommend an opt-out or signed permission slip, and since it was issued prior to the speech it no longer seems relevant.

At this point I do not think it's productive to speculate on the motives behind the initial decision-making about whether or not to air the live broadcast. To me, this is about academic freedom and policy, not politics.

If you require special permission for students to view a speech from the President of the United States, what kind of precedent does that set? Will you require permission or opt-outs for all speakers and taped speeches from here forward? If so, that will significantly impact the education of our students. If not, then I cannot see how the argument can be upheld.

COMMENTARY

SCOTT VIERRA

For the past few weeks readers of the Mariner have been subjected to a number of animated commentaries from a few "open-minded" Cohasset residents. In them, our respected and capable superintendent of schools Denise Walsh has been lambasted because of her decision not to broadly screen President Obama's speech. Unfortunately for our superintendent, her decision differed from the wishes, and likely the political agendas of these authors. I for one applaud her for taking into consideration the wishes of all parents in Cohasset!

I have no problem with any parent who wanted their child to view the President's speech. For those that wished to see it they were given the opportunity to view it on a link. Truth be told, I'm not crazy about the idea of ANY of our Presidents directly addressing students the age of my children who are in the third grade. At least not without my being there with them. However, before casting aspersions about a vast right-wing culture of hate one would do well to remember that back in 2002 President Bush was crucified for addressing the schools and "pushing his conservative agenda."

That isn't my point here though. As a parent, I should have the right to decide what is best for my children. But, according to these authors, since they have deemed the speech worthy, all of us must comply as well. Now I have a problem. I have a problem with their view that only their opinion can be right and I need to fall into line. This has become a calling card for many on the left today in America, they know what is best, for EVERYONE.

What these authors haven't mentioned is that the initial uproar was actually about the original NEA suggested lesson plans for the schools. Both the NEA as well as the Obama Administration agreed it was inappropriate and the plans were amended. This change did have an effect on the amount of time the schools had to implement what EVERYONE would think was an appropriate message. It seems though that some find it far more useful to declare that this is really about the right-wing's simmering racism to our first black President. It's funny though how only the left keeps bringing up Obama's race.

Based on all the facts I have heard, Superintendent Walsh made what she felt was the most appropriate decision. Sadly however, it appears that the withering attacks she has had to endure are taking their toll based on the comments attributed to her in the Mariner. Now, teachers are to be "encouraged" to show the speech and an "opt out" option need not be given to parents. Remind me again, which side is creating a polarizing environment of "fear and intimidation?"

I respect your right to disagree with my views, you should do the same.

The story behind paving pause

Little Harbor Project Paving – As you might notice there has been no paving activity in recent weeks. We have spoken about the next areas to be paved, but for a variety of reasons we can never seem to get there. So, an update is in order.

We had announced that the next roads to be paved were to be Joy Place and Gammons Road. However, when the engineers went to conduct their forward flow test, the Gammons Road area didn't do so well. These lines had already passed the pressure test, which means that there were no leaks. But, this did not imply that the new sewer lines are free and clear from obstructions. The flow testing found that some areas of the pipe had very high flow rates, but other areas had low flow, by comparison. To get to the bottom of the problem required a bit of digging to isolate sections of the line so each section could be tested. This enabled the engineers to narrow down their search to a small section of pipe.

So what did they find? Somehow, during the construction process small stones found their way into the pipe. These restricted the flow, reducing the capacity of the line, and in service, could be the beginning of a line blockage. It is important to note that construction does not take place in a surgically clean area. There is dirt, stone and rain each of which can inadvertently wash into the pipes during construction. So now, it is imperative that this debris be cleared. As we write this, the engineers are determining the best strategy to "blow" the debris from the lines so that they are free and clear. Until the lines are found to be the clear, paving cannot be done on Joy and Gammons. By the way these pipes were placed in the 2004/5 time frame and have been idle since.

"OK I understand that, but why hasn't the Common area been paved?" The answer here lies in the difference between a quick job and a high quality paving job. Areas of concern, which have delayed paving, revolve around the "Y" shaped intersection at Jerusalem Road and North Main and on North Main Street to Redgate Lane as well as Redgate, itself. To achieve the best paving job it is best to do the northern portion of N. Main, Redgate and there Jerusalem "Y" along with the Common area. This minimizes the joints and gives a substantially better paving job. However, if we just add more paving on top of what is already there for the areas that were not reclaimed, the pavement will be too high and cause drainage problems.

To solve both of these problems, we need to "cold plane" the old pavement to lower the surface. (Cold planing is a process in which a small amount of the old paving is removed, usually equal to the thickness of the paving to be added. Thus, when the new paving is added the road height will be the same as it was before paving.) Cold planing the northern portion of the area is scheduled to take place on Thursday Oct. 8th. Paving these roads should commence shortly thereafter.

Now for the good news! Since it will be several weeks before the areas we have reviewed, above, can be paved we are preparing to advance the schedule of some of the areas we had planned on paving later on. These areas are Bow Street, Steep Rocks Way, the driveway at #74 Jerusalem Road, the Logan Estate driveway and the driveway to the "hollow" which is the next drive south from the Logan Estate as you go toward Main St. We are trying to have the T.L. Edwards schedule paving for next week.

Somehow, during the construction process small stones found their way into the pipe. These restricted the flow, reducing the capacity of the line, and in service, could be the beginning of a line blockage.

Town Hall Sewer Meeting last Saturday – On Saturday, Sept. 26th there was a standing room only full house to hear the Sewer Commission's presentation regarding the new sewer system connection process. Following the formal presentation there were a number of very interesting questions from the attendees. All in al, the comments from those present were quite favorable and that they found the information useful.

One of the more interesting ideas mentioned was that there is a way that a resident can replace their water line at the same time they add the new sewer at a small additional expense. You might ask, first of all, "Why would I want to do that?" That's easy. Homes in the Little Harbor area may have older water lines that are undersized by today's standards. Possibly, over a number of years a home's supply line has narrowed as a result of scale developing on the interior of the pipe. Homes may have added additional water consuming devices on your property (bathrooms, lawn irrigation, etc). Or, you may have water pressure problems. When a toilet flushes perhaps the shower pressure drops significantly. It's very possible that a new supply line may solve some of these issues. You should consult your plumber to find out.

The reason that might make this opportunity attractive is that, normally, there must be 10 feet of separation between water and sewer lines to meet code. Thus, for all intents and purposes, the water line and sewer need to be in two different trenches. But, if each pipe is encased in a second pipe, used as a sheath, the pipes can be much closer enabling them to be placed in the same trench. For those of you with rocky land, the cost of one trench will not be insignificant, but two trenches will clearly cost way more. The opportunity to do both water and sewer at the same time may be a real advantage at a small increased cost when compared with two separate supply trenches.

America the Beautiful and Single

JOHN LENGYEL

Last week I happened to open the Mariner and I couldn't help noticing a lot of Obama-related rancor. It's always heartbreaking to see this kind of white-on-white violence, so before the argument gets out of hand and someone's feelings are hurt, I'd just like to briefly explain what's going on inside everyone's respective brains.

Subconsciously each of us believes we are the parent of an adult daughter named America, and like real parents we have strong opinions about her boyfriends, past and present. For example my wife and I were initially quite taken with George, a nice guy who wore comically oversized hats but came from a good family. Stories swirled around town about his history as a drunken deadbeat head case, but he had straightened out his life by the time he met America and was in many ways a welcome change from her previous boyfriend, Bill, who was charming and very bright, yet somehow not bright enough to keep his pants on for eight straight effing years.

In contrast George was faithful and sincere, and as parents we liked that, but he struck us as a bit dim. In fact he could barely string two sentences together. We mentioned this privately to our daughter one day and she jumped to his defense, insisting that when the two of them were alone together he read hundreds of books and talked knowledgeably and articulately about many subjects. We wanted to believe her — the man had graduated from Yale after all — but honestly whenever we spent time with George he seemed totally baked.

"What is she doing with this guy?" we wondered. "She's so much smarter than he is. Well, maybe not smarter, but she works harder. No, that's not it...." We couldn't put our finger on it but deep down we felt our daughter could do a lot better. America is a knockout and she was dating Rick Ocasek.

Despite our reservations George did have his boosters in the family. Batty old Aunt Agnes was especially fond of him. "He has a good heart," she'd croak, God love her, and we had to admit he did mean well. But even the best-intentioned hamster will have a tough time operating a city bus, and sure enough when the road got rocky George began making some odd decisions. The more we questioned his judgment the more he tried to keep our daughter away from us. Years went by with hardly a phone call from either of them. In the end even Aunt Agnes was sick of George. "He's dumb as a rake," she would say. "And where are my war bonds you rotten thieves!" We miss Aunt Agnes. She's on talk radio now and getting some excellent numbers in West Virginia.

Last year when America wrote to say she'd decided to dump George we were relieved. When we met her new beau, Barack, frankly we were ecstatic. Here was a guy with all of Bill's intelligence and George's sincerity, but with none of the ethical blind spots or the controlling nature. In truth we could not believe our daughter's luck, finding Mr. Right well into her third century, and we probably went a little overboard encouraging their relationship. We offered to help cover their rent until she found another job at the U.N. We hinted that we'd love to be grandparents. We sent them an issue of Consumer Reports with all the minivan reviews highlighted. I'm sure we could have been subtler. Now she claims our pushiness has started to turn her off Barack, so we've decided not to make a big deal about Thanksgiving this year. If they come, they come. However, Christmas at the Lengyels' is not up for negotiation!

So this is the problem right now, politically and psychologically: we're all obnoxious, meddling, overprotective parents, with polarized opinions and unrealistic expectations of our daughter's salvation or doom. And our opinions are heavily colored by our feelings toward her ex.

A fair number of parents out there genuinely liked George. He was pious, he clearly loved America and wanted to protect her, and they feel she should have stayed with him despite his tendency to pray while driving and send the two of them hurtling off cliffs.

It's understandably hard for these parents to accept Obama the interloper, especially when their friends sing his praises while comparing poor George to Rick Ocasek and accusing him of nearly destroying Earth. In any case I think we all need to remember that America is on her own now and can make her own decisions. And she never goes steady for very long.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, and realizes that this whole subconscious analogy disintegrates the minute a woman is elected President, which is exactly why it would be so dangerous.

Going 'green' right here in Cohasset

Five sites on 'Sustainable' tour

COMMENTARY

KATHRYN EARLE

...The Town of Cohasset Water Treatment Plant, featuring rain barrels and other sustainable features. Come see, and be proud of our public facilities, too!

Regarding the Sustainable Cohasset Green Buildings Tour, this Saturday, Oct. 3, 10 a.m. – 3 p.m., co-sponsored by the Northeast Sustainable Energy Association (NESEA):

I'd like to encourage Cohasset and other local residents to take advantage of this Saturday's Green Buildings Tour. This year, we have five sites: four residents in Cohasset and Scituate, and Cohasset's Water Treatment Plant, have agreed to be part of the Sustainable Cohasset portion of this larger, regional tour. Some of your readers may not realize that our very own water treatment plant is the site of a number of "green" innovations! These homes and facilities – and their owners and managers – are truly inspiring members of our community. Check them out at www.NESEA.org or better yet, go meet and talk with them, this Saturday, during the tour.

Late this summer, Judeth Van Hamm of Sustainable South Shore asked people from towns all over the South Shore to initiate NESEA Green Building Open Houses in their communities.

Steve Wenner, a longtime Cohasset resident and energetic newcomer to Sustainable Cohasset, recruited the homeowners and staff of five facilities for this year's Sustainable Cohasset Green Buildings Tour:

- The Scituate home of Amy Martin and Edwin Henneken, featuring a geothermal heat pump and many green building and landscaping innovations – very inspiring;
- The Cohasset home of Andrew Willard (Chairman of the Town's Alternative Energy Commission) at 37 Stockbridge St., featuring solar hot water and several other green improvements designed to preserve the look of this 1860's house;
- The Cohasset home of Chartis Tebbetts of 9 Jerusalem Road Drive, also featuring solar panels on their roof, and raised beds for growing vegetables in their front yard;
- The Cohasset home of Charles M. Bliss of 76 Summer St., featuring a south-facing roof-based, four solar panel water-heating system;
- The Town of Cohasset Water Treatment Plant, featuring rain barrels and other sustainable features. Come see, and be proud of our public facilities, too!

There is more information about each of the homes, at the NESEA.org website. (Remember, they'll be listed under Cohasset and Scituate.) While you're at it, notice the dozens of other local area houses available for touring, this Saturday! Communities all over New England will be participating in this event; in addition to the four noted here, in Cohasset and Scituate, there are 13 more sites in Hull, Marshfield, Weymouth, South Weymouth and Plymouth – wonderful opportunities to see sustainability improvements "in action" and talk with the homeowners and site managers to learn more about why and how they made these particular changes. You can check out the details, including a few pictures, of these and dozens of others around New England at: www.nesea.org/openhouse/listings/?feature=&state=MA&submit=GO; there's even a Google map link, there, to facilitate your finding each facility, easily.

I'd like to publicly thank the four families for allowing you – members of the community – to view their "green" innovations to home and property this Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., and hope that you will be inspired to make appropriate changes to your own house, your landscaping and your life! Do it for your children and your friends' and neighbors' children.

Kathryn Earle lives at 36 Ash St.

Cohasset Green Buildings holds open house

See how your neighbors are reducing their energy bills and carbon footprint through the power of the sun, wind, and smart building design from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 3, the Northeast Sustainable Energy Association is welcoming the public to visit the homes of Chartis and Ned Tebbetts at 9 Jerusalem Road Drive, Andrew Willard at 37 Stockbridge St., and Mike Bliss at 76 Summer St. The public is also encouraged to visit other local sustainable homes and buildings throughout Massachusetts and the Northeast to see clean renewable energy at work.

The Green Buildings open house is presented in conjunction with the American Solar Energy Society's National Solar Tour. Homeowners and facility managers will be showing visitors the latest in renewable energy technologies, sustainable building materials, and energy efficient appliances. Take a local tour to learn how you, too, can save by going green.

Haunted happenings

Ghostly lore takes over Cohasset Village on Oct. 17

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Many of the items haven't been on display in years, so it is always great to have the opportunity to show off different parts of the collection."
— Lynne DeGiacomo, Historical Society

Is there something strange in your neighborhood?

Well, the Ghostbusters haven't had to be called quite yet, but Cohasset does have several historical sites with ghost stories attached.

On Saturday, Oct. 17 the Cohasset Historical Society is putting on an event to highlight all the alleged ghostly haunts of Cohasset.

Pulling out all the stops for the daylong event, the event places the Historical Societies three buildings front and center — and includes tours of two other historical locations, the Central Cemetery and the Town Hall.

"History and haunting to some it's the same, to some its different, but they are both involved in looking into the past," said Cohasset resident and event chairman Pat Martin.

The Cohasset Historical Society approached Martin about the possibility of a haunted event during the scariest month of the year, October.

"They wanted to capitalize on the paranormal interest generated in the town over the past few years," Martin said. The Cohasset Town Hall generated wide attention when a paranormal group based in Enfield, Conn. declared the town building "haunted" after a weekend long investigation.

Martin was involved in the paranormal investigations at the Cohasset Town Hall over the last two years and readily admits her love of Halloween.

Historical Society president Kathy O'Malley said under Martin's direction the event has been taken to another level. For one ticket price, $15 for adults, $8 for students, there are events all day long.

The event will begin at 10a.m. with a guided tour of the Central Cemetery and conclude with a social hour at the Pratt Building beginning at 7:30p.m.

Cohasset author Paul Fiori, who recently published a book on the Wreck of the Brig St. John, will be on hand at the Central Cemetery to talk about the significance of the Ancient Order of Hibernians Celtic Cross and the tragic event it immortalizes.

One of the highlights of the event is a live paranormal investigation to be held at the Wilson House and the Maritime Museum simultaneously from 5 to 7:30p.m.

Members from the Methuen-based Nightfall Paranormal are looking forward to being a part of the event. Nightfall Paranormal founder Gary O'Dell is bringing his paranormal team, a group of about 12, to Cohasset. "We're all excited, honored, really, we were chosen to come in out of all the other (paranormal) groups around," said O'Dell in a phone interview. Nightfall Paranormal will be the first paranormal group to investigate the museums since world-renowned ghost hunter and parapsychologist Dr. Hans Holzer came to Cohasset in 1960.

The group will help out with the tours of the Town Hall in the afternoon, then set up for a paranormal investigation in both the Wilson House and the Maritime Museum. Event attendees will be able to ask the group questions about their method and experiences.

On a recent weekend, O'Dell, who was part of the Mass Paranormal group that investigated the town hall last year, came with several members of his team to check out the Elm Street museums.

"In (the Wilson House) I got the feeling there was an entity in the building," O'Dell said. In the children's room he said he actually had to leave the room because a feeling of nausea overcame him. He believes the entity's name is "Lucy," who according to records in the museum was the name of Capt. Wilson's mother.

Those in attendance will have to see if they feel the presence of "Lucy" or another entity.

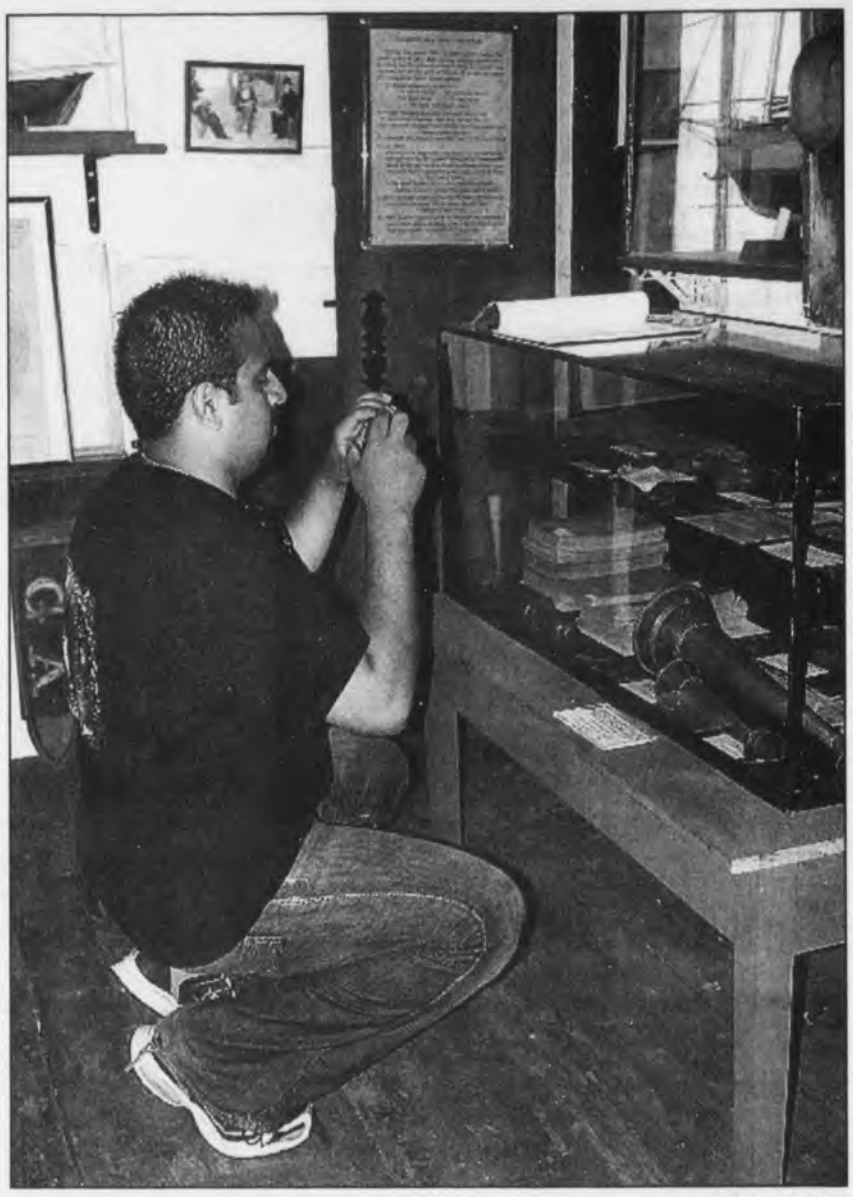
After the public leaves the museums, Nightfall Paranormal will stick around and do a full investigation until about 11p.m.

During the day from 10a.m. to 4p.m. a psychic, Dee White Dove, will be on hand to offer personalized readings to event attendees. Appointments are recommended.

From 2 to 4p.m., Katherine McGlynn, a certified hypnotist, will facilitate a group in exploring their past life or lives.

To complement the day's events, Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo is pulling out dozens of "haunted" items from the society's extensive collection. Props from the filming of "The Witches of Eastwick," grave rubbings, mourning costumes and apparel and watercolor "mourning" paintings will be among the display.

"Many of the items haven't been on display in years, so it is always great to have the opportunity to show off different parts of the collection," DeGiacomo said.



Historical Society president Kathy O'Malley is excited at how the day has come together. At the heart of the event is the fact is it will raise money for the society to continue its operations.

"Sharing these buildings and our collections is a privilege," O'Malley said.

While not everyone is a believer in paranormal entities, Martin said there is plenty of local history to learn about and see first hand.

"We welcome the skeptics and the believers. The bottom line is this is an opportunity to support the historical society, which plays a vital role in Cohasset and they could use the resources and financial help," Martin said. "There's something for everyone at this event."

Is museum host to a ghost?

Cohasset's Maritime Museum, once Samuel Bates' ship chandlery on Border Street, is reputed to have been haunted by a ghost for some years after it was moved to its current location on Elm Street in the Village. Not long after the Maritime Museum opened to the public, its curators began to hear pacing footsteps coming from the upstairs office. During a meeting of the Historical Society downstairs in the Maritime Museum, the entire board witnessed the footsteps. A ghost hunter and author, Hans Holzer visited the museum and deduced the ghost must be John Bates, the last of the Bates family to own the building. John Bates was likely unhappy with the building's move from the harbor.

It's been said that the ghost of John Bates left the museum in 1972; perhaps satisfied the museum was a worthy use of his old chandlery. Since David Wadsworth became the museum's curator in the early 1980s he has never heard the footsteps.

Over the years, the Historical Society has received numerous requests from paranormal groups to investigate the "haunting" at the Maritime Museum, but the board has never allowed a group back in — until now.

Haunted Happenings schedule of events

Haunted Happenings in Cohasset takes place Saturday, Oct. 17, to benefit The Cohasset Historical Society. The price of the one-day long ticket is $15 for adults and $8 for students and will get you into all of the events.

- 10 a.m. Take a walking history tour of Cohasset's Historical Central Cemetery and reconnect with those buried within.
- 10a.m to 4p.m. Get a personalized psychic reading by renowned psychic Dee White Dove at the Paul Pratt Building (subject to appointment availability).
- 10a.m. to 2p.m. and 4 to 8p.m. Enjoy an exhibit of Cohasset's haunted and historic past from the Historical Society's extensive collection.
- 12 noon Cohasset Town Historian David Wadsworth presents the history of Cohasset Town Hall and its history with ghosts.
- 12:30 to 5p.m. Talk a guided tour of haunted Cohasset Town Hall and see the historic basement jail cell or participate in a quiet tour to determine for yourself whether you can see one of the three ghosts that reside there.
- 2 to 4p.m. Travel back through time to discover past lives in a session in past life regression with time traveler Katherine McGlynn in the Paul Pratt Building.
- 5 to 7:30p.m. Visit the "haunted" Captain John Wilson House resplendent in festive décor. Interact with psychic medium Dee White Dove as she opens the door between worlds to connect with Cohasset's spirit world.
- 5 to 7:30p.m. Participate in a live paranormal investigation of the Maritime Museum as Nightfall Paranormal hopes to connect with the ghost of Samuel Bates, documented by world-renowned parapsychologist Dr. Hans Holzer in 1960.
- 7:30p.m. Wrap up the evening sharing stories of Cohasset' spirited past and local ghosts at the Paul Pratt Building. Refreshments served.

Get over it: Critics of superintendent

COMMENTARY

MURRAY CAMPBELL

Last week's Mariner had several criticisms of School Superintendent Walsh for nixing exposure by the students at school to a Presidential speech about education, including at least one demand for an apology. (Apologies tend to be demanded by left-leaning individuals; the less gentle right-leaning tend to demand that the offender leave the country, so the Superintendent gets off easy).

Sure, a speech about education could be anticipated as a desirable inspiration to students, a lesson in civics etc. and apolitical enough to warrant injecting into the school days activities. But how does one know it won't have some subtle departures from apolitical? Suppose some future President expands into caring for our fellow man by expanding welfare? That's moral education to some; to others it is advocating un-American socialism. Suppose a future speech encourages enlistment in the armed services on graduation as a means of furthering ones education? A few parents would strenuously object.

This country is rich in TV and radio channels, and in magazines and newspapers, so there is no compelling need to use the school systems as an obligatory conduit for Presidential intentions and /or exhortations, about education or about any other subject. The Superintendent of each school system (not each teacher) is the logical person to decide whether to air a speech from the White House (or from a Governor, Senator or Congressman). Time constraints would seldom accommodate a vote by the electorate, so some parents are sure to have their noses out of joint. It always would be a judgment call for the Superintendent, and not everybody will be pleased. But the Superintendent surely has duties more important to the students than wasting time coping with the determined and loquacious critics. The students will recover from the deprivation, and the President probably will not long remain dejected about not being aired in Cohasset Schools, given his extensive coverage in other media.

'Opt out' option is unnecessary

COMMENTARY

HOWIE ALTHOLZ

The policy of subjecting President Obama to a different and more onerous standard than any other speaker, event or presentation.

It seems crazy to be still talking about the issue of the President's speech. We need to move past this, there's important work to do.

But this isn't an old problem... ancient history — it's ongoing — the Superintendent has continued to insist on mandating an unnecessary 'opt-out clause' sent to parents. While our students missed a terrific opportunity for a live, shared positive experience and discussion , which so many across the country and region have had, there's still a chance to fix the current policy. This was the President's one and only speech to the students of America. Cohasset can do better. (Lest we forget, it was about hard work, following your dreams and serving your community and country.)

I have nothing but respect for anyone who volunteers their time for the community. I understand the commitment and energy it takes. Likewise for all who make their career in education. That goes for both our School Committee and our Superintendent. This isn't about them. This is about a decision they made and a policy now in place. The policy of subjecting President Obama to a different and more onerous standard than any other speaker, event or presentation. It's also about academic freedom.

While the Superintendent might have followed the positive example of so many other schools, or sought more community/Committee input, this was nevertheless, her decision to make. But when someone over whom the Committee has some oversight makes a wrong decision, there is an obligation to the community to step up to the plate, say so and fix it. That's why it went from Supt. Walsh's problem to the Committees. And it's easy to fix.

There's a large and diverse group of parents, long time residents, teachers, former school committee members, school administrators — republicans and democrats alike — who have actively opposed the restrictions. Reflective of a community-wide sense of wrong. While we have seen a lot of unusual and concerning information in the materials we have received from the Committee and school, there is not one of the so-called 'letters of concern' they claimed to have received in advance of the speech. Nor in any case, one valid reason put forward as to why this President should be uniquely subjected to this level of 'screening'.

This appears to have been simply a pre-emptive effort at avoiding controversy.

At the School Committee meeting on Sept. 16th, what I and everyone else, including those watching at home saw, was a group of sincere, concerned parents and teachers, bending over backwards to be polite and civil. No one was, or is, inferring any ill-intent on anyone's part. Just an ill-conceived, perhaps fearful decision to try and avoid controversy. Neither the Committee's Mariner letter (signed by just 4 out of 5) portraying themselves as victims, nor Supt Walsh's comment at the meeting calling concerned residents, 'partisan', advances a discussion or resolution.

What we also saw at the meeting was the Committee, in the presence of those concerned residents, agrees that at this point, knowing full well the benign content of the speech, we should remove the restrictions and move on - as committee members themselves have now acknowledged. It is time to move on.

It isn't always easy admitting you may have made a mistake, but at a minimum the decision should be reversed.

Certainly respect any parent who requests their child not see it. But let's move on and give the teachers the freedom to show and use the speech as they think best, without mandatory written opt-out notices.

It's not complicated, it's just the right thing to do.

Howie Altholtz lives at 4 Cedarledge Lane.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Opposed to offer of an opt-out

TO THE EDITOR:

I wish to correct the record regarding the contention in the School Committee's letter in the last edition of the Mariner that at the Committee meeting on the 16th, when several concerned parents aired their upset, "the conversation at times became heated and it was hard to have a civil discourse." It was further stated that "there have been some who have made accusations that this decision was politically motivated, racially motivated..."

Both of these assertions are wholly untrue. As anyone present at the meeting or who viewed it at home will tell you — the upset and concern on the part of parents was expressed in nothing but a courteous manner. To be sure, our sentiment was strong and forcefully expressed, but at no time did we engage in anything other than civil and respectful discourse.

Moreover, we repeatedly and clearly stated our belief that this bad decision was NOT motivated by bias of any kind. We were careful to and intent upon making it clear that we believed that the message could be, and unfortunately would likely be misunderstood by many. Big difference.

Lastly, Dr. Walsh and the Committee continue to promote an untruth. There was NO recommendation by the state that an opt-out be offered to parents not wanting their children to view the President's address. The letter from the DOE simply asked Superintendents to respect any parent who might REQUEST that their children not view the speech. Another big difference.

I remain strongly opposed to the offer of an opt-out, if the district does intend to allow teachers to air the address to their students, after all. Such a practice, as has been discussed, is offensive and unnecessary. A simple notification that the speech will be aired would give any parents who do not wish their children to view the President's address the opportunity to make their feelings known.

As the Superintendent and Committee continue to justify their actions and "process" it becomes more and more clear — like so many mistakes, missteps, bad decisions, etc, made in local, state and federal governments and institutions – matters are made so much worse and real damage almost always results by endless efforts to defend the mistake at all costs. It is most often the case that what is in high order in the wake of such a mistake is simple acknowledgment, ownership of responsibility, an apology and corrected action. Pretty simple.

Familiar face to fill the gap

Chief Noonan to be interim chief

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Former Police Chief Brian Noonan will — for a few months — shed the "former" before his title.

The Cohasset resident and 28-year veteran of the Cohasset Police Department has agreed to serve as interim police chief while the town searches for a new top cop.

Police Chief James Hussey is leaving Cohasset to return to the Boston Police Department where he started his career.

Town Manager Bill Griffin announced the interim appointment at Monday night's Selectmen's meeting.

"I am confident Chief Noonan can provide the necessary leadership and expertise for the department during this important transition period," said Griffin.

"They are dragging me out of retirement," Noonan said with a laugh in a phone interview. "I never really lost touch with the department and I'm thrilled at the chance to keep the ship afloat for a few months."

Noonan, 63, retired in 2002 after eight years as the head of police. Since retirement he has kept in touch with his former colleagues and the department by doing police details.

Given his thorough knowledge of the town and lengthy police background, Noonan is confident he will be able to keep the department on the right track.

"I never really lost touch with the department and I'm thrilled at the chance to keep the ship afloat for a few months."
— Chief Brian Noonan

Noonan joined the Cohasset police force in 1974 and had risen to the rank of sergeant before being named chief in 1993.

"I see my role (as interim chief) as a gatekeeper — keeping everything pointed in the right direction and keeping up with the policies and procedures put in place by Chief Hussey," Noonan said, adding he will prepare the department for its next chief.

As chief, Noonan hired all of the ranking officers — the two lieutenants and three sergeants. "It's a good feeling, actually, it's a great feeling."

Noonan said the new command structure within the department has created a strong chain of command. Two new lieutenant positions, each responsible for different operations within the department, were created in 2007.

"It's a much better way of operating," Noonan said.

Noonan has been talking with Chief Hussey to go over details in preparation.

In a Mariner article announcing his retirement Noonan named some of the accomplishments of his tenure including computerizing the department, switching to civilian dispatchers, starting the seasonal officer program, began billing for false alarms and increased community police efforts with bike patrols and the town Police Assisting Local Schools (PALS) program.

"I'm happy to have the opportunity to serve again and work with the troops," Noonan said.

The search for police chief is underway. Newspaper ads have appeared in the Boston Globe and the Mariner; applications are due by Oct. 9. Under the Town Manager Act, Griffin has the authority to hire a police chief, but it is subject to a majority vote veto by the Board of Selectmen.

Selectmen say goodbye to the Chief

By Nancy White
NWHITE @CNC.COM

"You came at a very difficult time and you're leaving at a very calm time. I think that's very telling."
— Selectman Ralph Dormitzer

With Police Chief James Hussey moving on at the end of the week, the Board of Selectmen took some time to thank Hussey for his five years of service to the Town of Cohasset.

Selectman chair Paul Carlson commended Hussey for coming to the town amid controversy and division and bringing about a "prompt return to calm and order."

"We will miss you," Carlson said, adding he expected the men and women of the police department would continue to provide a professional service to the town thanks to the guidance and leadership over the past few years.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer also commented on the shift in tenor within the police department, "you came at a very difficult time and you're leaving at a very calm time. I think that's very telling."

Chief Hussey said many people commented on his move from the big city (Boston Police Department) to Cohasset, "they said it was a small town and that can be a pain in the neck, but it has never been a pain in the neck."

Hussey thanked the Board of Selectmen and other town officials for speaking up when something needed to be addressed.

"Going forward (Cohasset) has good people, talented people who are committed to the town and committed to the service," Hussey said. "You're in good hands."

Town Manager Bill Griffin called Hussey a "problem solver" and a department head that was always willing to help.

"I loved every minute (in Cohasset); it's been really awesome," Hussey said, adding he wouldn't be surprised if he came back to settle in his retirement.

Hussey leaves Cohasset in good hands

That spring, the town had been torn apart by a nine-month-long saga resulting in the abrupt resignation of the Town Manager and retirement of the police chief.

Hussey reviewed allegations of abuse of power against two police officers, who denied any wrongdoing, and put them back to work saying at the time, "it's time to move forward and put the past behind us."

In fact, what Hussey is proudest of – is not so much the tangible accomplishments that can be measured in numbers and dollar signs – but the changing of the culture inside the CPD itself.

"When I started in Cohasset I knew no one and had no one to confide in," Hussey recalls. "That turned out to be a positive thing."

When he took the position, inside the department there had been infighting and finger pointing. Hussey was able to get his officers to understand that when people work together they do not have to be best friends; they don't have to socialize together or share the same interests.

"That is OK," he explained. "But everyone needs to do their job in a professional manner with dignity and mutual respect. You don't have to like someone to respect them."

"I believe everyone adopted this approach," Hussey said. "I hope I leave behind that understanding – just because you are not friends does not mean the job cannot be done appropriately."

Hussey, who has been married for 30 years and has a son who is now a freshman at Curry College, never looked at being chief as a 9-to-5 job. He could be seen jogging around town with a former colleague at the BPD in early morning hours. He made it a point to attend the annual Citizen of the Year receptions and participated in the Road Race by the Sea, just to name a few community activities.

Hussey is leaving a police department that has taken community policing to a new level. The department offers installation of child-safety seats and free bicycle helmets; participates in a high school Introduction to Law class in which officers interact with the students, and is involved with the Recreation Department.

One of the first tangible changes Hussey made was having the cruisers repainted and getting rid of the tinted windows – something that sent a message about being more community focused.

"The first night I came to a Board of Selectmen's meeting, I arrived early and drove around. I saw a black and white cruiser with blackened out windows – and would not understand why Cohasset police cars looked like that," he recalled.

Jim Hamilton's cartoon in October 2004 provided a humorous take on the culture changes at the Cohasset Police Department.

"All the men and women in the Cohasset Police Department are very competent police officers."
— Chief James Hussey

So to build a rapport with the community, Hussey worked with Officer Jim McLean, who is the fleet manager, in coming up with a different color scheme for the cruisers to create a more "welcoming image."

He also conducted a survey of the community and worked with a volunteer citizens advisory group to determine what priorities the townspeople had. At the top of the list was traffic and accidents following by youth drinking.

Inside the department, he worked with dispatch and his officers to decide what improvements could be made. He made arrangements for the officers to get their firearm training in Boston on a professional shooting range. The CPD had been training at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club. More in-service training was also made available – none of which cost a lot of money.

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Department provided inmates to paint the inside of the station. New carpet was installed.

Hussey also counseled his officers about handling incidents. In Hussey's view, making an arrest should not always be the first option. Police need to focus on crime prevention and intervention and then make an arrest when necessary, he said.

"When you have little crime that means prevention and intervention measures are working," he said. "Making an arrest is a 'big deal' and can possibly impact someone for the rest of their lives – an officer has to have discretion and think if there is a way of handling an incident short of an arrest." However, he adds that police should and will enforce the law.

Hussey also converted two sergeant positions to lieutenants at a minimal cost. Lieutenants took over the day-to-day operation of the department allowing the chief to focus on more global issues like the budget and grant applications.

Hussey says the town is in very good shape with the leadership of Lt. William Quigley and Lt. Gregory Lennon. In fact he has high praise for the entire department. He describes them as "really caring about the department itself and the community it serves." He will also be in town from time to time over the next few weeks to help interim Chief Brian Noonan with the transition.

"All the men and women in the Cohasset Police Department are very competent police officers," Hussey said.

Hussey also realizes that in a small town there can be pressure to give someone special treatment.

"I tell people 'we treat everyone the same – we treat everyone good,'" he said.

Coral greeted with open arms

Cohasset's new Director of Elder Affairs Coral Grande visits with Steve Leighton, right, and Steve Bobo, center, during a meet and greet at the Lightkeepers' Residence.

There was a large group assembled on the 21st of September to welcome Coral Grande, the new director of Cohasset Elder Affairs. She addressed the group, telling about herself and saying how much she loved our town of Cohasset. Coral is enthusiastic about our hopes and plans for a new senior center and will welcome any suggestions.

Patty Johnson and her group of Angels have been preparing the Wednesday luncheons two days a month for a few years now, and delicious meals they are. We have just learned that another angel in the form of Dan Volungis has offered to provide meals for the remaining Wednesdays. We seniors are surely fortunate to have such good friends.

We are in full swing with our fall program and have had four seminars. A representative from AARP spoke to us about healthcare reform, dispelling some of the myths. He also explained what AARP is all about. Another Wednesday Jeff Johnson of Quincy spoke about reverse mortgages for those who still live in their own homes. He gave an overview of how the program works and answered all questions. Rochelle Kruger, an ambassador for Elderhostel, spoke at one of our luncheons. She was witty and a pleasure to listen to. She informed us about guided tours for seniors in the USA. They are geared to those who are agile and can deal with their own baggage to those who need a little help. I am sure there are some in town who would have enjoyed the opportunities provided by Elderhostel. The last seminar was "Managing Your Blood Pressure." Pharmacist Vincent DeMello, along with pharmacist Dr. Sheila Mei, were here from CVS. Mr. DeMello spoke about causes of high blood pressure and what we as individuals can do to help control it. He also told about various medications and how they work.

Don't forget, if you are looking for good conversation, fun, and laughter, come to the Coffee Café on Mondays...

We are continuing our program with three seminars in October. On the Oct. 7 presenter Carolyn Kelliher, Elder Law Attorney, will speak about pros and cons of revocable and irrevocable trusts. On Oct. 21, presenter Steve Bobo will give a lecture about the Lucie B. Wills and transporting ice from the Northwest to the Orient. On Oct. 28, from 1 to 2 p.m., following lunch, we will hear about the Magic of Halloween, presented by Dotty Vartabedian, a well-known elocutionist. Sounds like fun!

Jane Marsh and I went on a day trip with Plymouth COA to Portsmouth, N.H., and Portland, Maine. We enjoyed lunch, and then visited Libby's Chocolates. What an array of sweets! After making our choices we went to the harbor where we boarded a boat for a cruise on Casco Bay. We saw Portland Head Light up close, as well as other lighthouses. The pilot of the boat gave an excellent commentary on some of the Bay's 365 islands. If you enjoy day trips, you may contact the Senior Center for information on what we and our neighbors are offering.

Don't forget, if you are looking for good conversation, fun, and laughter, come to the Coffee Café on Mondays at the Lightkeepers, and lunch on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays at the Center.

We can't stress enough the importance of making reservations for any programs including meals or transportation. It is equally important if you can't keep your commitment, to call in your cancellations as a courtesy to volunteer drivers and those on a waiting list.

Troika appointments

The Troika, a committee made up of the Town Moderator, the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, and the chairman of the Advisory Committee, recently met to make new appointments for a select group of committees.

The Troika, which is a unique group in Cohasset, has the authority to appoint members to the Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee and Alternative Energy Committee.

Robert Benson of Forest Avenue and Kathleen Ofsthun of Fairoaks Lane will serve as new members of the Advisory Committee for the next three years; Edward Lappen of Deep Run was re-appointed to the committee for another three years.

Re-appointed members of the Alternative Energy Committee include Mike Bliss, Rod Hobson, Mimi White, Andrew Willard, Sally Ayers and Marie Caristi-McDonald. New members include Conrad Langenhagen and Jeffrey Patterson, both of Sanctuary Pond Road. All were appointed to a one-year term.

Jack Keniley and Peter Decaprio were re-appointed to the Capital Budget Committee.

Turf field considerations

Selectman Karen Quigley expressed concern over the turf field and how it will be paid for from a budget point of view.

The turf field was presented to the town as a revenue neutral town asset, Quigley said.

"I've seen firsthand the level of animosity going on with the different factions...this is something that could gain momentum and end up going to the wrong place," Quigley said.

She suggested the issue be discussed with the newly created Budget Planning Group (a appointed committee comprised to two Selectmen, two Advisory Committee member, two School Committee members, and two Capital Budget Committee members).

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer suggested Cohasset Sports Partnership president and one of the primary proponents George McGoldrick be involved in the discussions. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson also suggested Recreation Director Ted Carroll be involved in the meeting.

No parking at Cunningham Bridge

At last week's meeting, the Selectmen discussed the possibility of placing signage allowing one legal parking space at Cunningham Bridge, a popular fishing spot. Before approving the one parking space, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would make phone calls to area residents to get their thoughts.

"They were very strong in their feeling that they don't want anything there," Dormitzer said.

With that in mind, the Selectmen voted 5-0 to implement the parking signage as recommended by the police department. Two permanent "No Parking either side — Tow Zone" signs (attached to the fence) will be added and "No Swimming / No Jumping" will be re-stenciled on the bridge, both sides of the road.

Associate planning board member

The Planning Board is seeking an amendment to the town's bylaws to have an elected associate member position. The associate member will sit in on all special permit applications and will vote on those applications in the case of absence, inability to act, or conflict of interest on the part of any full-fledged planning member, in the event of a board vacancy, or when an application crosses an election.

Planning Board chairman Al Moore said in recent years, the town has given the Planning Board more special permit authority. For example, village development, wind turbines, cluster development and transit-oriented district development require a special permit from the planning board.

Unique to special permit application is the requirement of a "super-majority" with four out of the five members agreeing to approve an application. If one person is unable to act on an application for some reason, the rest of the members have to be unanimous in their decision.

"It's a bit of a problem and we're not comfortable with it," Moore said.

The associate member of the planning board is proposed to be an elected position with a three-year term.

The Board of Selectmen recommended approval of the article in a unanimous vote.

Cat Dam meeting

Town Manager Bill Griffin has hired Marion-based first CLE Engineering to prepare the Cat Dam notice of intent and gate operation and maintenance plan on behalf of the town. A kick-off meeting will be held in the basement meeting room on Thursday, Oct. 8 at 7p.m. All interested residents are encouraged to attend and participate.

At the 2009 Annual Town Meeting voters allocated $17,000 to hire an engineering firm to complete the notice of intents. The subject of Cat Dam, which is a mechanism that controls the water flow in an out of Inner Little Harbor, has been an issue of discussion before the Board of Selectmen for over two years. The Conservation Commission – the ruling entity on all water resources – intervened when the operational schedule of the tide gate was changed.

Shields Health Care Offers Breast MRI to Existing Array of Diagnostic Imaging Services for Early Detection of Breast Cancer.

Over 1.4 million women face a higher risk of developing breast cancer over their lifetime because of several known risk factors, including having a genetic predisposition, a family history or a previous breast cancer diagnosis. Although monthly self examinations and yearly mammograms remain essential tools in detecting breast cancer, The American Cancer Society has recommended that these high-risk women add breast Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) to their line of defense. Released in 2007, these guidelines suggest that including breast MRI with annual mammograms for high-risk women can help detect cancer earlier when it is most treatable.

The Shields Health Care Group network of MRI services has historically offered new technology first to patients and their physicians located throughout Massachusetts. Over the last 8 years, the total network of advanced diagnostic imaging centers offering breast MRI has increased to a total of 11 that span across a multi-region network of freestanding and partner-facility centers in Massachusetts including the eastern, central and western regions. The level of technical experience, acquisition of advanced equipment and access to the most experienced radiologists are all dominant factors that differentiate the Breast MR program at Shields.

'Distinguished American hero'

Church notes Col. Pope centennial

By Frederic P. Zotos, Esq.
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Saturday morning, Sept. 12, 2009, the Nativity of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church, also known as the Pope Memorial Church, commemorated the centennial anniversary of the passing away of Colonel Albert A. Pope, a distinguished American hero. Although the driving late summer rain-washed out many outdoor activities last Saturday, the newly renovated Romanesque Church provided a warm, candle-lit sanctuary for all those gathered together there.

The memorial service began with the ringing of the rediscovered original church bell, and a procession into the sanctuary of several vested members of the Cohasset Clergy Association led by their host, Rev. Dr. Eugen J. Pentiuc. This was followed with the congregational singing of "America the Beautiful" followed by an historical speech about Col. Pope by his great-grandson and namesake, Albert A. Pope III. Mr. Pope's description led all those gathered through Col. Pope's action-packed life starting with his teenage years as an entrepreneurial purveyor of fruit and vegetables in Brookline, Mass., his heroic volunteer armed service as one of the 400 most noteworthy soldiers who saved the Union in the Civil War, his hard-working ascendancy to become the world's largest pioneer bicycle manufacturer in the late 1800s (under the Columbia label), and manufacturer of over 50 percent of the automobiles on America's roads by 1900. Albert Pope concluded his remarks with an emotional description of his great-grandfather as a man who lived by his principles – whether as an abolitionist against slavery, an early advocate of the use of union labor to promote the fair treatment of manufacturing workers, or an early promoter of ethical business practices and education. His moving speech was followed by the congregation's rousing rendition "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" – also sang by Col. Pope as he stormed across General Burnside's bridge at Antietam and later as he led his regiment out from Fort Hell in the last attack on Petersburg, Va.

Following the hymn, several members of the Cohasset Clergy Association were invited to speak and lead the congregation in prayer. Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, First Parish Unitarian Universalist, quoted from portions of the Old Testament and emphasized the importance of faith and love toward our fellow humans. Then Rev. Margot Critchfield, St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, led the congregation in two loving Episcopalian prayers. She was followed by Rev. Gary Ritts, Second Congregational Church, who noted the importance honoring the memory of our loved ones who have untimely been taken away from us and offered as examples young Charles Linder Pope in whose memory the church was built, those fellow Americans who were suddenly taken away from us eight years ago in the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, and the Son of God, Jesus Christ.

Joining the Cohasset Clergy from the neighboring town of Hull, Pastor Will Green, St. Nicholas United Methodist Church (into which congregation was merged the Pope Memorial Methodist Church of Cohasset in the 1970s), then offered a prayer of thanks for Col. Pope's generous gift of the Pope Memorial Church in recognition of the pivotal interdenominational role it has played as a house of worship in the early development of his parish, the formation of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church, and even the beginning's of the Congregation Sha'aray Shalom of Hingham. Concluding the guest clergy portion of the memorial service, Fr. Timothy Joyce, Glastonbury Abbey, conveyed the best wishes of Fr. John Mulvehill, St. Anthony Roman Catholic Church, who was unable to attend as a result of officiating at a funeral. Fr. Timothy then went on to regale those gathered with a wonderful story of the history of the north Cohasset area at the turn of 19th century, and how the Abbey partially rests on land donated by Methodist Bishop Frederick B. Fisher – who during his 10 years the Methodist Missionary Bishop of India, befriended Mahatma Gandhi, the Indian political and spiritual leader. Fr. Timothy's fascinating story was followed by the congregation's solemn harmony of "Amazing Grace."

The host, Rev. Dr. Eugen J. Pentiuc, then offered several Orthodox Christian prayers for Col. Pope's soul, and blessed a memorial cake, known in Greek as a "Koliva," portions of which were later distributed to the congregation in celebration of Col. Pope's memory. Rev. Pentiuc also led the congregation in signing the ancient Orthodox Christian hymn, "Eternal Memory," first in Greek verses, then in English and concluding in Greek. The service was concluded on a high note with the entire congregation rising to sing Beethoven's "Ode to Joy," and the entire clergy processed out.

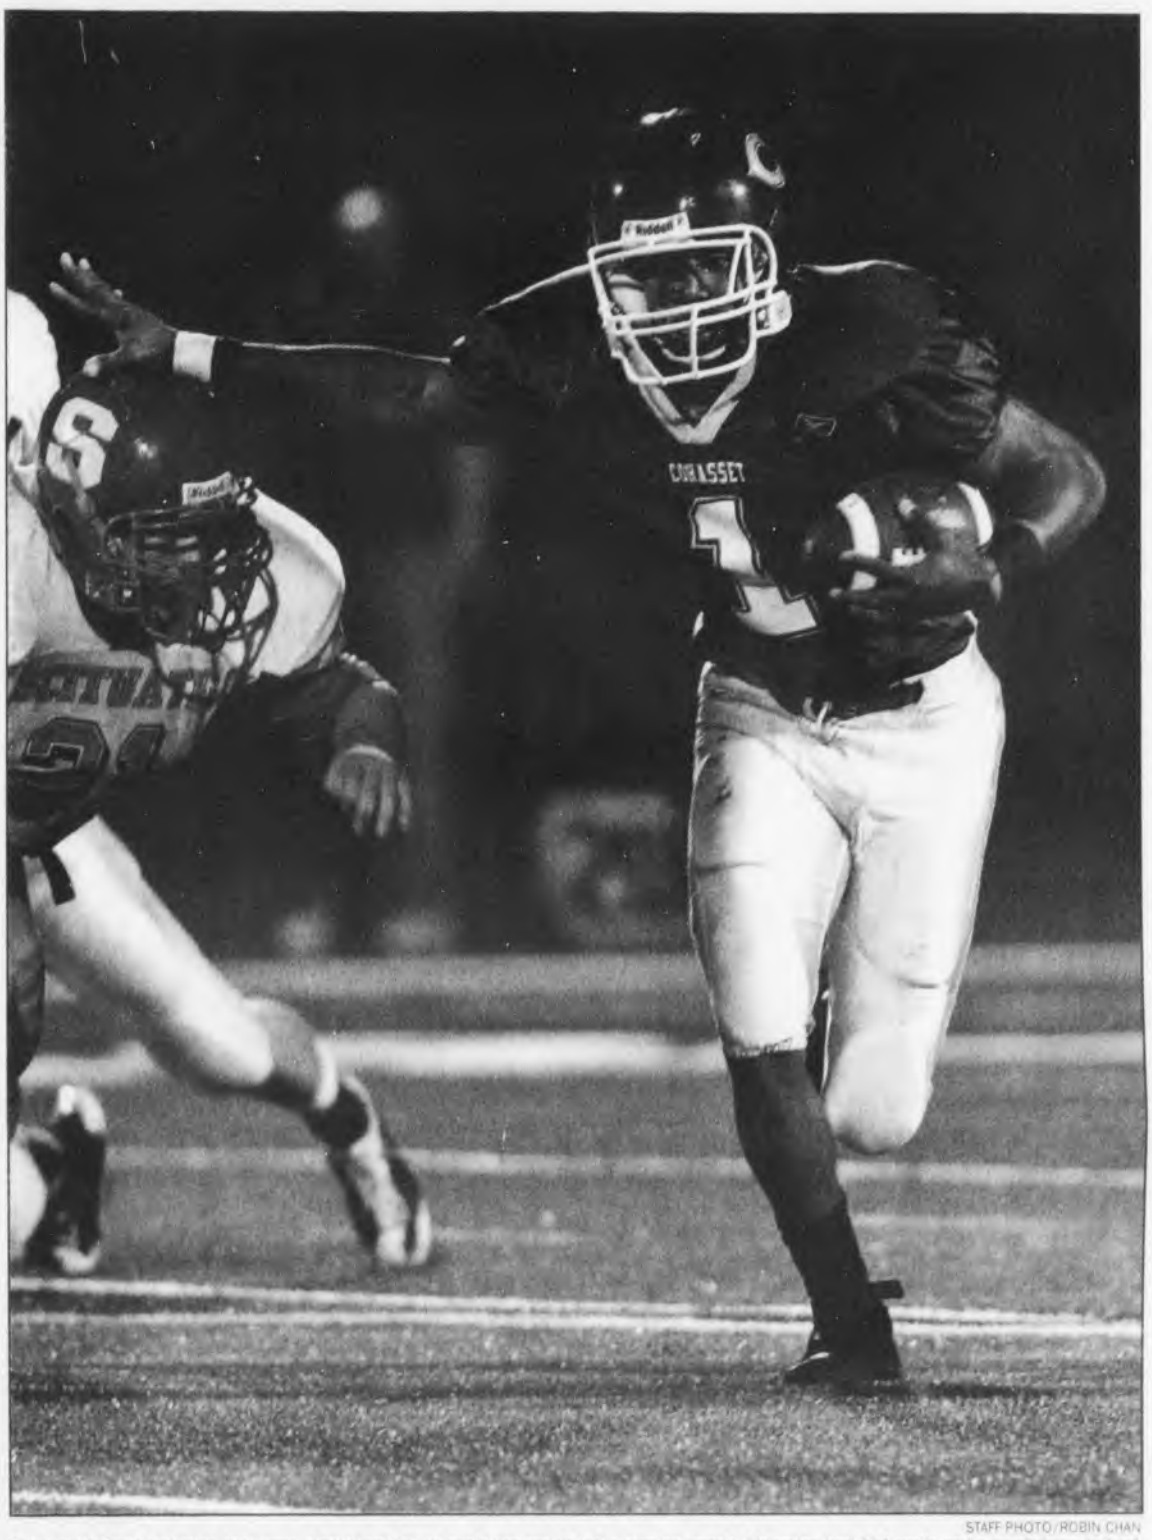
Following the memorial service, everyone was invited to attend a coffee hour reception provided by A Taste of Greece, take a guided architectural tour of the church by William Miller of Artech Church Interiors Inc., and view some antique Columbia bicycles displayed in the portico of the Church and brought in period costume by David Toppin, the president of the Wheelman, Massachusetts Chapter, and assisted by his teenage son Andrew. Although the pouring rain had not subsided in the least, everyone in attendance appeared to have left the church in high spirits – as evidenced by their smiling faces – and having thoroughly enjoyed the good fellowship of both old and new friends and neighbors.

A historic portrait of Colonel Albert A. Pope, who spent his summers in Cohasset around the turn of the century. Pope was a decorated Union Army veteran of the American Civil War, and a pioneer in bicycle manufacturing.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Albert A. Pope III of Millbrook, New York spoke about the storied life of his great-grandfather and namesake, Colonel Albert Pope.

'Titan of American industry'



Colonel Albert A. Pope was a decorated Union Army veteran of the American Civil War, and hailed a titan of American industry as the pioneer bicycle manufacturer (under the Columbia label) and a leading automaker in the late 1800s. As a Gilded Age tycoon, Col. Pope took a backseat to no one in his charitable contributions, which were many and varied. As the father of the Good Roads Movement, no one individual can be given more credit in paving the way for a network of good roads in the United States, both locally and nationally, than Col. Pope.

Perhaps his most poignant contribution was the graceful stone church at 811 Jerusalem Road, built together with his wife, Abigail Linder Pope, as a tribute to their son, Charles, who died suddenly and unexpectedly at the age of 18. The Pope Memorial Church was presented for the use of the people of Cohasset in July 1900. Engraved on its walls were the words "Love to God and love to man," and any person or group with a religious belief, whatever it might be, was welcome. Nine years later, Col. Pope passed away on Aug. 10, 1909, at his summer estate, Lyndemere, in Cohasset (30 Diab Lane) after a long and serious illness of his nervous system.

A grand opening

Valentine, defense ground Sailors

WWASSERS@CNC.COM

There will be no references to Valentine's Day anymore when it comes to the Cohasset High School football team.

This is Valentine's season.

Skipper senior Dana Valentine ran for 236 yards and a touchdown on Friday as Cohasset downed neighboring Scituate 22-7 in the team's first game on their new turf field.

Valentines touchdown, a 36-yarder with 1:55 left in the game, gave Cohasset breathing room as time wore down.

Football

"It didn't feel like it," Valentine said when told of his numbers. "But I'm glad to hear it. The line did a great job up front. They were banging away at them."

Cohasset got on the board first when quarterback Jeff Cavanaro hit Dean Driscoll on a cross pattern in the right side of the end zone for a 7-0 lead with Brendan Doonan's extra point with 1:53 left in the first quarter, capping a drive that covered 68 yards in seven plays.

Scituate responded with a nine-play drive that covered 64 yards, but Manny Gomes' field goal was partially blocked, ending the threat.

The Skippers went back to Valentine on their next possession and he responded with 45 yards on five straight carries before Cavanaro found Doonan at the one to set up first-and-goal.

Cavanaro finished up the 80-yard drive with a sneak for a 15-0 lead when Doonan ran a two-point conversion in with 6:01 left in the half.

Cohasset tried to put the clamps on with an onside kick, but Scituate recovered at the 48 and eight plays later the lead was 15-7 on a one-yard run by Wes Hawkins.

The Sailors forced a punt, and made a bid at closing the gap with 36 seconds left in the half.

It wasn't to be though, as a pass was dropped in the end zone and Chris Mogan's 37-yard catch and run on a screen was called back on a penalty as time ran out in the half.

From there it was the Cohasset defense and Valentine.

Valentine had 99 yards and the score in the second half.

"This felt good," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Dana was awesome. When their line was jamming the box, he was still getting yards. When everything was on the line he's tough to take down."

The win was also big from a confidence perspective.

"We played three Patriot League teams all a division above us," Afanasiw said. "We know we're able to play with the best teams on the South Shore. We have a good team. It really isn't just one guy. The offense, defense and special teams all played well."

Scituate coach Herb Devine, who made it a point to congratulate Cohasset players after the game, was impressed with the hosts.

"We played a very good football team," Devine said. "It was a good test for us in a big battle. I have to give Cohasset credit. Coach Afanasiw has a well-oiled machine. They're well coached in all areas, offense, defense, special teams. To beat them you have to bring your "A" game. I don't think we played ours."

Cohasset improved to 3-0 with the win, while Scituate fell to 2-1.

Spotlight off Skippers this week

No big rivalry game or stadium opening, just the game

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Tonight's game at Cardinal Spellman, 7 p.m.

After big wins over neighborhood rivals Hingham and Scituate, the Cohasset football team finally has a game that doesn't involve big rivalries, pomp and circumstance like the first football game at Alumni Field or even the excitement of the first game of the season.

Instead, Cohasset will take a trip to Brockton to face a 1-2 Cardinal Spellman team that just won its first game of the season on Friday.

Spellman beat North Reading 28-16 on Friday, paced by a big evening from running back Blaise Branch, who ran for 175 yards on 21 carries with two touchdowns.

One of those scores was a 57-yarder.

Cohasset will also have to watch out for quarterback Zac Cooney, who threw a 26-yard touchdown pass and ran one in on a keeper.

One of Spellman's two losses was a 21-20 heartbreaker against Norwell where Spellman lost a fumble in the end zone in overtime.

That turnover gave Norwell a tie, and the win with the extra point.

Spellman tried for a two-pointer and missed after scoring first in the extra frame.

For Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw, the only thing to worry about is the Skippers.

"We are staying as grounded and focused as possible," he said. "Spellman is a much improved team from last year with a very experienced coaching staff. They will be very ready to play on friday night."

Afanasiw emphasized the word very, knowing Spellman won't be any kind of walkover.

Girls notch first win on turf field

There was the ribbon cutting and a big celebration on Friday night as Cohasset officially opened the newly installed turf at Alumni Field.

The football team went on to win that game over Scituate.

Girls' Soccer

But before you write that win in the record book as the first on the field, take a look back a day to mark the first winner.

That would be the girls soccer team, who beat previously unbeaten Hull 3-0 on Thursday.

"We did play on the turf first, it was great," Cohasset coach Deb Beal said. "Many of the kids have played on the surface before but this was special because it was our home field which made it pretty exciting."

CYBSA Major League tryouts for 2010 season

The try-outs for the 2010 CYBSA major league baseball season will be held on Tuesday, October 6 at Barnes Field from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

All boys and girls who are age 10 prior to May 1, 2010 and no older than age 12 on April 30, 2010 and who are not currently on a CYBSA major league baseball team are invited to try out.

In order to be considered in the 2010 Player Draft, you must attend the tryout.

All 12 year olds (born between May 1, 1997 and April 30, 1998) who attend the tryouts are automatically selected for a Major League team, provided that these players attend the tryout.

Players should register at Barnes Field beginning at 2:45 pm. This will be the only opportunity to try-out. The rain date will be Wednesday, October 7.

Please visit our website CYBSA.net for more information.

Questions regarding the tryouts may be directed to Mark Federle – CYBSA Player Agent @ (781) 383-3545.

"As for our guys, it is the same thing week in and week out," he said. "Prepare as hard as you can and put forth your best effort on game day, being able to walk of the field with no regrets, excuses or doubts."

If Cohasset puts forth that effort, the Skippers should at least put themselves in a position to win.

This is a team that prides itself on hard work and discipline. That makes a difference, especially on the lines.

Cohasset's line has been a source of pride, considering the numbers they've helped put up.

Skipper back Dana Valentine has run for 222 and 236 yards respectively in the past two games, both victories over higher division teams.

He also had 178 in the season opener, also a win.

But Valentine isn't a one-man show.

Cohasset's defense has been stingy, with Sean McKenna and Jake Kissick leading the charge.

McKenna has 15 tackles and two sacks, while Kissick has 29.

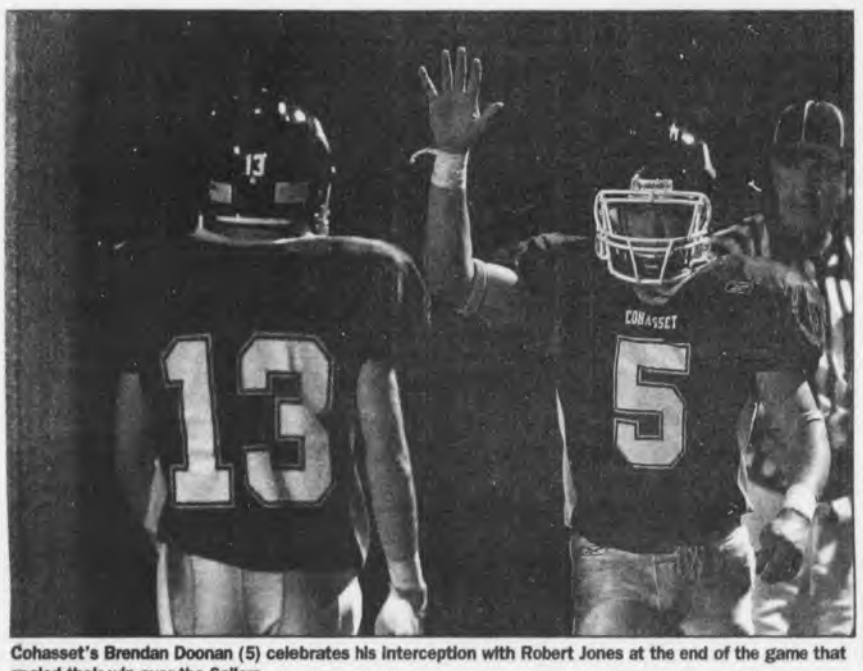
Both had some big tackles and hits in the win against Scituate.

Brendan Doonan has also been a big cog in all aspects of the game.

Doonan is solid from offense, to defense to kicking.

"Doonan does everything," Afanasiw said. "He never comes off the field. It's rare to have someone of that caliber."

Will Lynner has also made plenty of big plays.



Offensively, Valentine has had help from an outstanding line and a strong performance by quarterback Jeff Cavanaro.

Cavanaro has hit 19-of-36 passes for 226 yards and has tossed four touchdown passes with only one interception.

Lacrosse tournament in Braintree to aid fight against testicular cancer

By Fred Hanson
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Some of the nation's top collegiate lacrosse players will be in town Oct. 11 for the second annual Catamount Classic tournament.

In addition to off-season games featuring 11 college teams, the event is designed to raise awareness of testicular cancer and proceeds from the event will go toward research toward a cure at Dana-Farber Cancer Center in Boston.

Kelly Curtis, the wife of University of Vermont men's lacrosse coach Ryan Curtis, said the team adopted the fight against testicular cancer as its cause when a former player was diagnosed with the disease two years ago. He made a complete recovery in time to play the next season, she said.

"It really shook the team up," said Kelly Curtis, who is organizing the event with her husband. "At 18 to 21 years old, you really think you're invincible."

At the same time, her husband wanted to put together an off-season tournament, Curtis said, since most are held in the Baltimore area.

"He said, "Wouldn't it be great if we could put together a tournament and donate the proceeds for testicular cancer research," Kelly Curtis said.

Last year's tournament, which was held in Braintree, attracted more than 2,000 fans with little publicity and raised $20,000 for testicular cancer research. This year, she expects a much bigger crowd and to raise at least $30,000.

More importantly, they plan to hand out information on testicular cancer, she said.

The disease most commonly strikes men between the ages of 15 and 39, and accounts for 1 percent of all male cancers. It has an 80 to 90 percent cure rate if caught in time, said Curtis, who had worked in genitourinary oncology department at Dana Farber.

But she adds it is a subject most men are reluctant to talk about.

Peter Oswald of Cohasset, a sophomore who plays midfield on the Vermont lacrosse team, said each member of the team is trying to raise at least $1,000.

"There are so many people who know somebody who has or has had cancer," Oswald said.

He adds a lot more of his fellow students at the university are now aware of the disease through the team's efforts.

Oswald is a graduate of Thayer Academy in Braintree, and his family helped arrange use of the school's off-campus athletic complex at 1535 Washington St. for the tournament.

Other teams playing in the tournament include the University of Massachusetts, Holy Cross, Colgate, Siena, Bentley, Western New England College, Albany, Adelphia University, Robert Morris University, and LeMoyne College.

Curtis said in organizing the tournament, "We tried to put together as many top-level, elite teams as we could. Many of the Division 2 or 3 teams in the tournament have been their division champion in past years."

A number of local businesses have joined in the effort as sponsors, including the Sheraton Braintree and Hampton Inn, which are providing accommodations for some of the players.

The gates will open at 10 a.m., and the games begin at 11 a.m. and end by 5 p.m. Admission is $10 for adults, $5 for children age 5 to 12, and free for children younger than 5.

Girls notch first win on turf field

Beal didn't know her team would be getting the honor until the morning of the game.

Earlier, when she had been told it was a possibility, she had second thoughts. With the big fanfare and excitement around town, Beal had a tiny bit of superstition cross her path. She didn't want to jinx the field with a loss.

" When I came into school on Thursday morning I crossed paths with George McGoldrick who told me that the field was playable that afternoon and the decision was in our hands," she said. "I was afraid to curse the field, but the opportunity to play on it was too inviting. The kids were eager to play on it and more than willing to set up the grounds including corner flags and goals, which had been stored for construction."

Beal wanted to be sure her team had fun and didn't feel any extra pressure.

"When Hull arrived and warm-ups began, my message to the girls was just play the way we know how and enjoy the experience, but make sure we score first, apply pressure all over the field and we can't lose this one," Beal said. "I thought we played extremely disciplined soccer and we were committed to using all the space we had."

Once the game was underway, the Lady Skippers took control and got the first goal on the turf.

"Our outside midfielders did an outstanding job staying sideline wide and pinching in to create opportunities and staying out to create more room," Beal said. "Christine Coner scored the first goal on the field for us, which was very exciting. I told her after the game I will remember her for a lot of reasons, but when someone asks who really christened the field I will know it was her and I will never forget that. I am thrilled it was her, She has worked really hard here at CHS for four years and she has scored some big goals in her career. It was nice to see her finish the first one off."

Beal said having the turf will create an advantage for her squad.

"I think having the turf is going to be a huge asset for us," she said. "It is going to allow us to really take the opportunity to spread the field out wide and play. The turf allows us to let the ball do most of the work. We just need to guide the right way. Its going to go to where we kick it, its not going to bounce over an uncut mound of grass and turn left at the dirt patch, its going to go where we put it."

The turf, Beal said, makes for a more natural game and a chance to work on making players better.

"I am excited to really have the kids start spending more time on individual skills, including ball skills and one on one drills." She said. "I think the more comfortable we get with the surface the more our game will improve. I know the girls are excited and they are ready to challenge themselves to continue to improve the women's soccer program here at Cohasset High School."

Cohasset followed that win with another on Tuesday over Mashpee.

The Lady Skippers improved to 4-2 with a 2-1 win.

Cohasset (4-2) got goals from senior forward Christine Coner and junior forward Danielle Sookiasian in the win.

The girls hosted Abington on Thursday and host Harwich on Monday at 4 p.m.

Close contact a concern as flu bug looms

Sports teams, schools brace for flu season

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

On the field, kids come in contact with each other throughout their games. In football, that's nearly an hour. Soccer games run 80 minutes. Tackles, bumping, and collisions among players transmit sweat and a whole host of germs. And, if one player is sick, he or she can pass that cold or virus on to another player, teammate or opponent. With last spring's massive outbreak of the H1N1 virus (also known as swine flu), the potential for the virus to spread this fall is high. What started out as a virus that first circulated in Mexico quickly turned into a global health issue, prompting health officials at the highest levels to warn the general public of a potential pandemic.

The second wave of the H1N1 virus has started spreading throughout the United States, mainly in schools – from elementary to colleges and universities. The vaccine for the virus won't be available until later this month. According to local health officials, the children ages 6 months to 24 years old are on the high priority list to receive the vaccine. They are the ones at the highest risk.

"With seasonal flu, people might have had it before," said Massachusetts Department of Health State Epidemiologist Alfred DeMaria, M.D. "The reason (H1N1) became a pandemic is because we had never seen it before. With schools, there's really close contact. They stay in a space for six to eight hours a day. This influenza attacks younger people. At college campuses, we've had cases."

Just last Saturday, Hingham resident Matt Healey, who graduated this past spring from Thayer Academy in Braintree, died from the H1N1 virus at the campus of Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

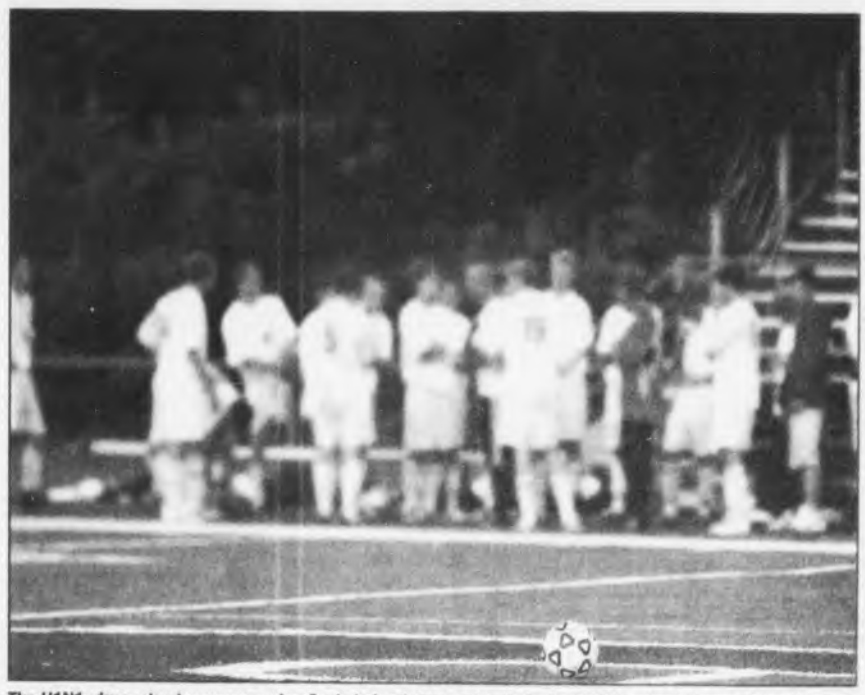
The H1N1 virus has also hit several sports teams on both the college and professional levels. The Miami Dolphins had a brief outbreak during training camp. A couple of college teams down south – Duke, Mississippi, and Tulane – were hit. Professional soccer player Landon Donovan caught the virus. Some teams have gone so far as to ban shaking hands.

H1N1 has yet to have a major effect on high school sports teams in the state; at this point, nothing regarding H1N1 and high school athletic teams has been reported by the Massachusetts Department of Health.

"Be on the lookout for H1N1; be prepared for it," DeMaria said. "It's a pandemic. We need to get people vaccinated."

School nurses have told coaches and players to not share water bottles, eat well, and habitually get a good night's sleep.

"You have to reinforce conventional methods. If a player is sick, they should not be at practice," DeMaria said. "They shouldn't be sharing towels. It's important to stay away from school and practice (if you have symptoms). If they do things right, it will reduce transmissions. Hand washing, staying home when you are sick – that's the key message. If you just have ordinary flu symptoms in general you should stay home."



Doctors and clinics are currently providing the seasonal flu shot. According to DeMaria, seasonal flu outbreaks typically do not occur in the fall. He also pointed out that many people believe that getting a flu shot too early isn't as effective and won't last until the flu season is over.

"It really is a flu for the young, which is very alarming. When you have a group of young people all clustered together like team sports, it could spread. Can it affect athletes? Absolutely."
Debbie Ciavola, Jordan Hospital Emergency Services Line Administrator

"Recent studies suggest that's not the case," he said, noting that if someone gets a flu shot in September or October, it could protect them well into March and April. "We strongly urge people to get the seasonal flu (vaccine) now."

DeMaria said that in October the federal government, for free, will provide the H1N1 vaccination for every resident in the United States. The target age groups will receive the vaccination first. Researchers are still studying whether or not people need two H1N1 vaccinations. In some studies, it's shown that only one vaccination is necessary. Also, doctors said that by next year's flu season in late fall, early winter, there will be one vaccine that covers both H1N1 and the seasonal flu.

Jordan Hospital Emergency Services Line Administrator Debbie Ciavola said that the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention are making a strong push to get 6-month-old babies to 24-year-old young adults vaccinated before the rest of the general public.

The H1N1 virus, also known as swine flu, is being taken seriously by local high school teams. School nurses have spoken to coaches and teams to explain ways of preventing the spread of flu as well as staph infections. Local and state health officials said that the H1N1 virus could easily spread amongst athletes in contact sports.

"It really is a flu for the young, which is very alarming," she said. "When you have a group of young people all clustered together like team sports, it could spread. Can it affect athletes? Absolutely. Jordan is being very proactive. A lot of this is relatively new."

Ciavola said the Jordan Hospital staff hopes to get out to schools to teach proper hygiene. She said that taking simple measures such as washing hands with warm water and soap or using waterless hand sanitizer (e.g. Purell) after using the bathroom is one of the most important ways to prevent the spread of several types of diseases. When washing hands, Ciavola said to wash for as long as you can sing, "Happy Birthday."

"Nothing beats hand-washing with soap," Ciavola said. "And it only takes 15 seconds. Hand sanitizer is awesome and effective with the flu."

With the seasonal flu, statistics say that 200,000 are admitted into hospitals each year and that there are roughly 30,000 deaths annually. The early forecast for the H1N1 virus said that nearly 90,000 Americans would die this year from the virus. That number has been scaled back considerably as new information becomes available from recent studies.

"Like any flu, there's a level of contagiousness," Ciavola said.

People will get two H1N1 vaccinations. After the first, they will have to wait three weeks to receive the second. Next year, there should be one vaccination that would cover both seasonal and H1N1 flu viruses.

Transmitting the virus from one person can come in many forms, but one may come as a surprise.

"Handrails," Ciavola said, "are one of the highest contaminants."

For more information about the H1N1 virus, prevention tips, and more, visit The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's H1N1 page at www.cdc.gov/flu/swineflu.

UMass Boston: A Value Proposition

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

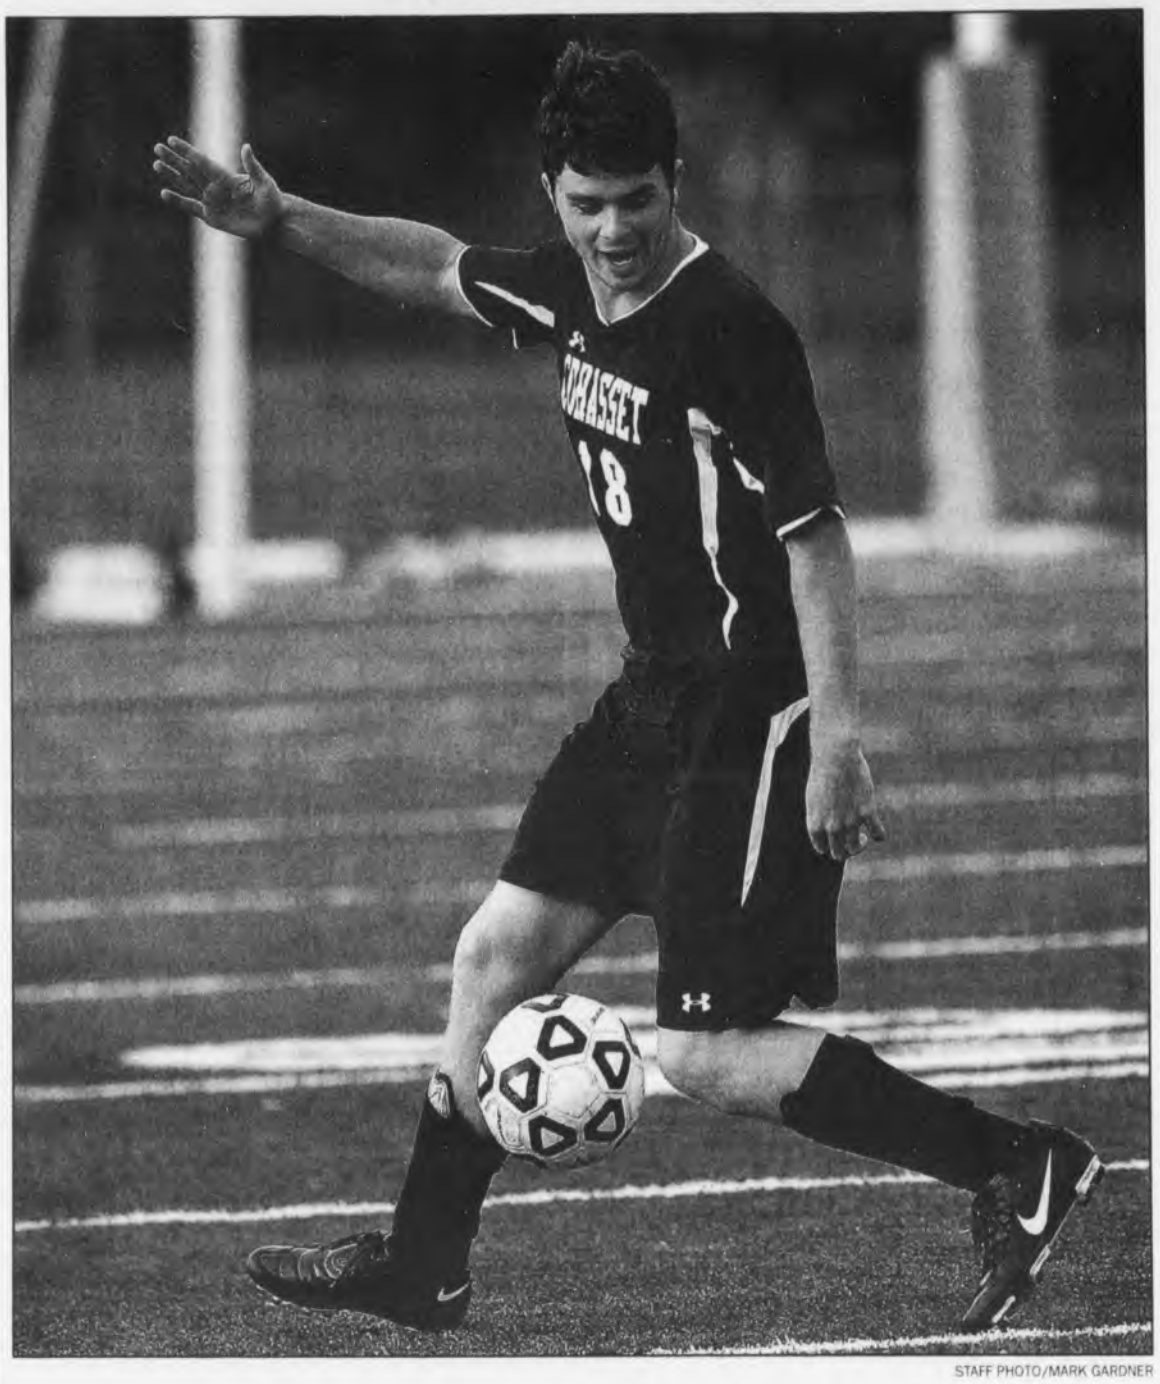
As the chancellor of the University of Massachusetts Boston, every fall I have the distinct honor of welcoming the most diverse student body in New England to our oceanfront campus. This year it was even better – we welcomed a record number of students, whose diversity in ethnicity, age, economic status, and home towns enriches the classrooms and campus life at UMass Boston.

Over the past year, we've endured a lot of sobering news. The media provided extensive coverage of the Wall Street financial collapse last fall, the severity of the ensuing economic recession that set in nationwide, and the resulting impact on industries, employment, and, most importantly, families. The economic crisis brought into even greater focus the escalating cost of a college education, an investment that for most individuals and families ranks second only to buying a home.

UMass Boston, along with its four sister campuses across the state, prides itself on being able to contain annual tuition and fee increases to approximately the rate of inflation. Even in this very difficult economic climate, when we saw a substantial reduction in state funding to our university, I am pleased to say that by working with state leaders to secure federal stimulus funding, we have been able to continue that trend of modest increases for our undergraduate, in-state students.

As the Greater Boston area's only public research university, we understand the need, now more than ever, to continue our mission of providing high-quality education. UMass Boston offers a unique learning experience and opportunity. With seven colleges, 913 faculty members, and 15,000 students, most learning occurs in small classrooms, not giant lecture halls. The low faculty-to-student ratio means that our students have frequent contact with and direct access to professors who have the highest qualifications in their fields.

We are working hard to make a UMass Boston education an even greater springboard for future success. Two new facilities—a nursing clinical education center and a Venture Development Center—offer exceptional resources for our faculty and students. We are now planning a state-of-the-art Integrated Sciences Center, to further enhance learning and foster research activity, and working with the Edward M. Kennedy Institute for the United States Senate to plan for its future home on our campus. This institute, which will contain the papers of the late senator, will be adjacent to the John F. Kennedy Library and the Commonwealth Archives, providing truly unique opportunities for education and research.



I'm always proud to say that UMass Boston is a research university with a teaching soul, and that is what makes the university such a great value proposition, regardless of the economic climate. I invite you to see for yourself what's happening at UMass Boston by attending our fall open house on October 17 or by visiting our website at www.umb.edu.

First in a series of columns about higher education and UMass Boston.

Cohasset boys unbeaten in last five

The Cohasset boys soccer team continued to play well over the past several games, improving its unbeaten streak to five games with a 2-0 win over Mashpee on Tuesday.

Andrew Littauer and Drew Cobin had second half goals to lead the way.

Will Wise notched another shutout.

The team also tied Hull 1-1 last Wednesday.

Cohasset was 4-3-1 heading into Thursday's game at Abington.

In other sports, the Cohasset golf team took over first place in the South Shore League with a 32-22 win over Norwell.

Morgan Grasz shot a 41 to lead the Skippers (6-2), while Ian Quinlan and David Hill added 42's at par-36 Cohasset Golf Course.

South Coastal Men's Hockey League games underway

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

It was a family affair that led the Vipers to their first win of the season in the Masters Div. of the South Coastal Men's Hockey League as the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Lou Sideropoulos and his brother Bob both scored four goals apiece to lead the Vipers to a 12-7 win over the Grizzlies. The Sideropoulos skate on the same line with Tim Burchill of Marshfield, who scored two goals in the game.

Pembroke's Steve DiMaio added two goals and assisted on three others for the Vipers.

John Zimmer of Marshfield and Joe McCafferty had two goals and two assists each to lead the Grizzlies. The Grizzlies also goal each goal from Kingston's Mike Martin, Joe Belivacqua of Abington and Hanover's Jeff Ray. Ray also had an assist in the game.

Ed McVeigh scored a short handed goal and assisted on two others to lead the Thunder to a 7-1 Master's Div. win over the Wolves. Tom Maguire scored two goals, Ken Oliveri, Mike Maguire of Hanover and Clem Fillion had one each for the Thunder.

Marshfield's Jim Bailey scored the lone Wolves goal.

The Aeros' Craig Solari scored two goals and assisted on another one to lead them to a 5-2 Masters Div. win over the Roadrunners.

Marshfield's Shawn Macleod and Josh Worrell of Pembroke were the other goal scorers for the Aeros.

The two Legends games both ended in 1-1 ties this past Sunday.

Paul Brinkman from Bob Conly and Jeff Goldberg gave the Toros a 1-0 lead, but Art Riccio tied the game with just over 17 minutes left to give the Sharks a 1-1 tie with the defending champion Toros. Mike Valenti of Marshfield assisted on the Riccio goal.

Tom Smith of Marshfield scored a goal and assisted on another to lead the Rangers to a 3-1 win over the Bruins in a battle of the undefeated in the Classics Div.

Joe Craig of Marshfield and Darron Jacobs of Pembroke were the other goal scorers for the Rangers and Jim Martin of Hanover scored the Bruins goal.

Kirk Souza, Jim Donnelly and Glen Harnisch both of Marshfield had two goals each in the Canadiens' 8-2 Classic Div. win over Blackhawks. Mike Fahie of Pembroke had a goal and two assists and Marshfield's Tom Lema scored a goal for the Canadiens.

Bob Donahoe and John Dunn scored a goal each and Kevin Parrish had two assists for the Blackhawks.

Henry Mathews of Duxbury had two goals to go with two assists and Kingston's John Guilderson scored two goals and added an assist to lead the Red Wings in the South Coastal Hockey League's Game of the Week to a 5-2 Masters Div. victory over the Maple Leafs. Marshfield's Tom Piepenbrink scored the other Red Wings goal.

Some new beginnings

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

I'm not going to go into details because I have been told to keep it under the radar, but I will leave you a few hints.

This was a relatively inactive week in the halls of Cohasset High School, but that's not to say this week was unimportant. In fact, during this past week, Cohasset High School saw some new developments, which have and will affect the entire school. As T.I. once said, "Big thangs poppin', lil' thang's stoppin'"...sorry, that's the only quote I could think of to describe this situation. Anyways, onward to my weekly recap of what's happening down at the CHS.

First things first, some more Student Council news. All of the class presidents, Sam Greene, Isabel Robinson, Connor Goetz, and myself met with the principal, Mr. Antolini, and the student council president and vice president, Mackenzie Hart and James Earle. Incentives to going? Free pizza and cookies baby! Man o' man, all you can eat without dropping a dime...Seriously, suptastic (a combination of the words super and fantastic) is the only way to explain how seriously awesome free food is. Oh yeah and it is pretty cool planning out all of the homecoming events and what not in order to better the, get ready for it, "Life at CHS" (I love it in movies when one of the lines is the title of the movie). I'm not going to go into details because I have been told to keep it under the radar, but I will leave you a few hints.

- Hint #1 (for the pep rally): Think Japanese culture and sport.
- Hint #2 (for the homecoming dance): 600 special necklaces.
- Hint# 3 (for all of spirit week): Suptastic (copyright on the word pending)

Moving along. Now onto the next big cha...Wait a minute, do you smell that? Is that the smell of fresh cut grass? Nope! That's just the smell of the new TURF field! The majority of the town went to go investigate this new smell of turf field on Friday night. The new turf field smell even attracted in people from Scituate. Okay well maybe not everyone came because they smelt a turf field, but I did. Practically everyone else went because of the football game being played, Cohasset vs. Scituate. Cohasset defeated the Scituate Sailors 22-7, which was a huge win for the Cohasset Skippers as we are currently 3-0 vs. Patriot League teams. A tremendous game for all those that played and it was awesome to see nearly all of Cohasset down at the new and improved Alumni Field to usher in a new era of turf field athletics in Cohasset. Sure it comes with the price of some turf burn and those annoying black beads that get stuck to your clothes, but its all well worth it. Mark my words, I would be running all up and down that new turf if I wasn't so, for lack of a better word, unreasonably slow. But enough about me degrading myself, this article is over and out because my self esteem just got really low which is now making me want my moose tracks ice cream up in my fridge so I can go on an eating binge.

On that note, until next week, ciao Cohasset.

Sean MacCarthy, if you didn't notice already, eats a lot of food.

Meet and Greet for Dr. Messina on Oct. 6

The Parent Advisory Council and Cohasset PSO invites all parents and staff to join them to "Meet and Greet" the new director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina. This is an opportunity for the Cohasset community to meet Messina and learn about her experience, background and philosophy regarding student services in Cohasset.

The Meet and Greet will take place at 7:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Oct. 6, in the Osgood School Library, located behind Deer Hill School.

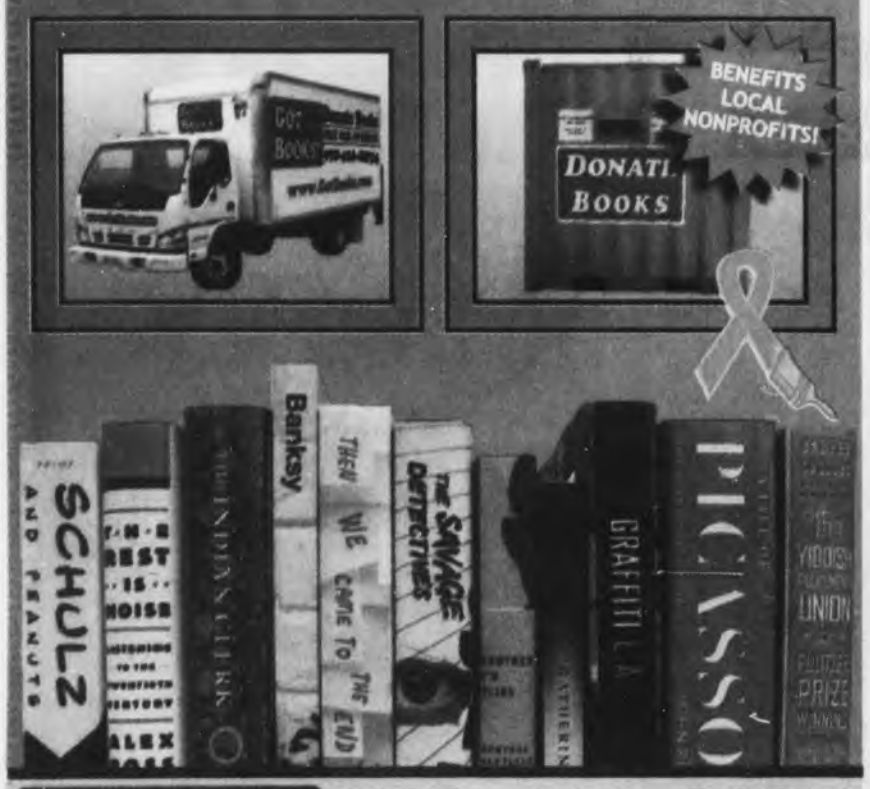
Fortepianist Sylvia Berry, a native of Philadelphia, has performed as a soloist and chamber musician in the US, Canada.

Renowned fortepianist to perform at First Parish

Sylvia Berry will be performing a program called "Master and Heir Apparent: Music of Haydn and Beethoven." She will play a replica of a Viennese piano from circa 1795, giving listeners the chance to hear an instrument much like the ones Haydn and Beethoven themselves played. The concert will be at First Parish Cohasset on Sunday, Oct. 18 at 4 p.m. First Parish is located on the green at North Main St. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

In celebration of "Haydn Year 2009," Berry will perform a program of works by Haydn and Beethoven that reveals the connection between these musical titans. Beethoven was only briefly Haydn's pupil, and in some ways their relationship was a troubled one; however, it is quite clear that the works of the elder master were an important source of inspiration for the young genius. Soon after moving to Vienna Beethoven was seen as Haydn's heir apparent, and this program shows why. In addition, hearing these works performed on a piano like the ones Haydn and Beethoven knew is a fascinating experience that provides further insight about this spectacular music. The program will include Haydn's late masterpiece, the Sonata in E-flat major, Hob. XVI: 52, and Beethoven's turbulent Sonata in D minor, Op. 31, No. 2, "The Tempest".



Fortepianist Sylvia Berry, a native of Philadelphia, has performed as a soloist and chamber musician in the US, Canada, The Netherlands, and Italy. A specialist in late 18th and early 19th-century Viennese music, she has quickly become a favorite in Boston and beyond not only for her exciting performances, but for her engaging commentary about the music and the instruments she plays. Benjamin Dunham of Early Music America stated of a recent solo appearance: "... [she] revealed a poetic sensibility and a willingness to draw listeners in with spaces to pause and reflect. These qualities contrasted nicely with up-tempo movements, which were handled with verve," while her work in Opera Boston's production of La clemenza di Tito led Lloyd Schwartz to write in the Boston Phoenix, "Special applause for continuo fortepianist Sylvia Berry, [who played] as if she were one of the actors." Highlights of recent performances include a series of solo recitals for the Cambridge Society for Early Music; the debut of her ensemble, Boston Hausmusik, at the Connecticut Early Music Festival; lecture recitals with soprano Clara Rottsolk on early Lieder at the Goethe Institut (Boston) and Swarthmore College (Philadelphia); performances of J.S. Bach's Concertos for Multiple Harpsichords with Ensemble Florilege; and a lecture recital (on harpsichord and fortepiano) for the Haydn Society of North America at the Longy School of Music. This summer she presented a duo recital with Shuann Chai at Fenton House in London, which holds one of the most renowned collections of antique keyboard instruments in the world. Ms. Berry studied at the New England Conservatory, the Oberlin Conservatory (where she received a Masters in historical keyboard instruments), and the Royal Conservatory in The Hague, The Netherlands. She has studied with David Breitman, Lisa Goode Crawford, Bart van Oort, Stanley Hoogland, and Malcolm Bilson.

For information about the concert, contact Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461.

Speaker on sexuality at First Parish Sunday

Rev. Debra Haffner, internationally recognized writer and speaker on religion and sexuality, will occupy the guest pulpit of First Parish Unitarian Universalist on Sunday, Oct. 4. Her topic is "Sexuality, Morality, Justice, and Healing." Worship begins at 10 a.m.

Directly after the service, Rev. Haffner will lead a workshop in the Parish House on "Creating a Sexually Healthy Congregation." Both the worship service and the workshop are sponsored by the Welcoming Congregation Committee of First Parish.

Rev. Haffner is director of the Religious Institute on Sexual Morality, Justice, and Healing. She is an ordained Unitarian Universalist minister and a community minister with the Unitarian Church in Westport, Conn. A respected spokesperson in the national media, she is frequently quoted in The New York Times and The Washington Post. She has appeared on "Nightline," "PrimeTime Live," "20/20," "Dateline," "Crossfire," "Good Morning America," "Oprah," and the "Today" show. Currently Rev. Haffner is a visiting professor at Union Theological Seminary, New York City. This October she is receiving Union's 2009 Unitas Distinguished Alumni/ae Award, given to Union graduates who have distinguished themselves in the church, academy, and society — across the country and around the world.

As lead speaker at conferences secular and religious and as the author of several books on raising sexually healthy children and teens, Rev. Haffner's work has been honored by Planned Parenthood, Yale University, and the Robert Wood Johnson Medical School. Her most recent book is What Every 21st Century Parent Needs to Know: Facing Today's Challenges with Wisdom and Heart.

Margie Brown, Chair of First Parish's Welcoming Congregation Committee, notes that "First Parish in Cohasset is fortunate to have Rev. Debra Haffner as our guest minister. We will have the opportunity to experience one of her workshops right here in the Parish House!"

Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, minister of First Parish, will co-lead worship and welcome Rev. Haffner as colleague and friend. "I know of no one who more eloquently and knowledgably speaks to the link between faith and sexuality than Debra," remarked Dr. Carlsson-Bull. "What a gift it will be to welcome her to First Parish."

Worship begins at 10 a.m. in the Meeting House on Cohasset Common. The work-

Cultural Council seeks funding proposals

Proposals for community-oriented arts, humanities, and science projects due Oct. 15.

The Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to Council spokesperson Diane Kennedy, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset — including exhibits, festivals, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures. Cohasset Cultural Council will also entertain funding proposals from schools and youth groups through the PASS Program, which provides subsidies for school-age children to attend cultural field trips.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $4,000 in grants. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, Town of Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Rusty Skippers concert band, and more.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, contact Diane Kennedy, devline@juno.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.masscultureorg/lcc_public.asp. Application forms are also available at Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Pulitzer-prize winner coming Nov. 2

Cohasset residents are in for a literary treat when Pulitzer Prize winning author, Tracy Kidder, speaks about his new book, "Strength in What Remains" on Monday, Nov. 2nd. An Evening with Tracy Kidder includes a book signing at 6:30 pm. and speaking program at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Auditorium.

Tracy Kidder is winner of a Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Award and the Robert F. Kennedy Award. He is the author of nine books, including "Mountains Beyond Mountains," "House," and "The Soul of a New Machine." He is currently on a book tour promoting his most recent book, "Strength in What Remains," which was published in August 2009 to great acclaim. Kidder graduated from Harvard, received an MFA from the University of Iowa, and lives in Massachusetts and Maine.

Please join the Directors of the Cohasset Library Trust, the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the Friends of the Cohasset Library and the Event Committee for this very special Evening with Tracy Kidder. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at Buttonwood Book Store and Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

'Creatures' featured at Second Congregational

Hosts back-to-church school event

Last week the New England Wildlife Center visited the Sunday School of Cohasset's Second Congregational Church, as part of the their back-to-school program. Children and youth ages 3 to 14 had the chance to pet and visit with some of God's "creatures," including a chinchilla, a bearded dragon, a parrot, a blue-tongued skink, and a hedgehog.

Lisa Cooper, the church's Director of Christian Education, has similar interactive activities planned throughout the year as a way to engage the children and make the teaching of traditional stories of the Bible fun. To learn more about the Sunday School program, contact Lisa Cooper at l.coop1@verizon.net or simply drop-in on Sundays from 10 to 11 a.m.; registration for the new school year is going on now.

The New England Wildlife Center based in South Weymouth for 26 years is the only veterinary and rehabilitative care hospital in New England to take in sick or injured wild animals. Through the years the hospital has treated and released over 76,000 field animals. The center receives no state or federal funding and relies on support from donations, birthday parties, toddler playgroups, and youth programs.

For information about the center, visit www.newildlife.com.

'South Shore and the Civil War'

The cost is $31 for Historical Society members and $36 for non-members.

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its fall dinner and annual meeting on Sunday, Oct. 25, at Atlantica Restaurant. The guest speaker for the evening is Patrick Browne who will be talking about the "South Shore and the Civil War." He will recount stories from this time with particular emphasis on the men who's bravery and deeds earned them the Medal of Honor. Mr. Browne received a bachelor of arts degree in English and a masters degree in history from the University of Massachusetts and has been executive director of the Duxbury Rural and Historical Society since 1998. He is the author of several books and has taken part in Civil War reenactments here in Massachusetts.

The evening will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a cash bar, followed by dinner at 6 p.m. The cost is $31 for Historical Society members and $36 for non-members. The menu includes clam chowder, rice pilaf, seasonal fresh vegetables and a choice of cranberry and sage stuffed chicken or grilled pork with and apple and raisin glaze. Dessert is warm apple crisp and vanilla ice cream.

Call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 to secure your reservation and make your choice of entrée by Friday, Oct. 16. Checks can be mailed to the Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Cohasset Cabaret is Nov. 6 & 7

Cohasset Cabaret 09 show dates will be Friday and Saturday night Nov. 6 & 7 at 8 p.m.

Don't miss the opportunity to see this local talented cast featuring Doug Trudeau, from Showstopper's fame, as emcee. A little sample of what to expect: Lily Sestito will be back along with her brother Joe Carbone. Barabara Baumgarten will again show off her great vocal talent. For the first time the great baritone voice of Joel Buford, the musical director from Second Congregational church will sing two memorable show tunes. John Campbell and his daughter Catie will sing a duet. There will also be the talented Dunleavy Shaffer Irish Step Dancers. But that is not all, in addition to other great singers and dancers, how about a grandmother and granddaughter comedy routine?

On both evenings a social hour, with appetizers provided, will take place from 7 to 8 p.m. You can try your luck at the raffle and silent auction table, which will have some great items from local artists and merchants. Audience members are encouraged to bring their own snacks "Cabaret Style". There will be a cash bar serving wine, beer and soft drinks. Cohasset Cabaret is sponsored by The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs and will benefit the Friends and St. Anthony's Youth Ministry. .

Tickets are $25. You can purchase tickets at St. Anthony's Parish Hall office and the CEA office at the South Shore Community Center or call 781-383-0752 for further information.

Forum for veterans set for Oct. 24

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services and community veterans service organizations will host a forum for veterans, dependents and surviving spouses at St. Anthony Parish hall, 10 Summer St., from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 24. All Cohasset residents are welcome.

The forum will help assure that all who are entitled to assistance are aware of the local, state and federal programs designed to assist those in need. It is hoped that those who attend will ask questions and communicate what they learn to local veterans and their families as well as their extended friends and relatives. Emphasis will be placed on giving attendees the opportunity to participate.

Individual letters will be sent to all Cohasset veterans who have registered in the annual census. However, the census makes no provision for identifying surviving spouses. The forum will highlight information sometimes unknown to surviving spouses, answer questions and help if needed and possible.

Veterans' agent visiting hours

The Cohasset veterans' agent will be available at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road in Room 2B on the following dates to offer assistance to veterans, surviving spouses.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
OCT. 12, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A changing situation calls for a change in plans. Although you might prefer the schedule you had already worked up, you could do better by agreeing to make the needed adjustments.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That once seemingly rock-solid proposition you favored might be hiding some serious flaws. Take time to check it more carefully and question anything that seems out of kilter.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Finish up those lingering tasks so that you can then arrange to spend some time in quiet reflection. This will go a long way in restoring both your physical and spiritual energies.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A family situation could heat up and boil over unless you deal with it as soon as possible. Try to persuade other family members to work with you to help cool things down.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Cheer up, Kitty Cat! That low feeling will begin to ebb by midweek, and you should be back in the social swirl in time for the weekend. A long-postponed deal could be starting up again.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Going too fast and too far on too little knowledge could be risky. Best to slow down and check for any gaps in your information. It's what you don't know that could hurt you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Trying to make peace among quarreling family members, friends or colleagues can be tough. Expect some resistance, maybe even some expressions of resentment. But stay with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Changing your mind doesn't have to be a problem once you realize that you might have good and sufficient cause to do so. Make your explanations clear and complete. Good luck.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unkept promise can be irksome and easily raise the Archer's ire. But instead of getting into a confrontation, take time to check why someone you relied on came up short.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A new workplace distraction creates an unnecessary delay. The sooner you deal with it, the better for all concerned. A personal matter also should be attended to as soon as possible.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Once again, the Aquarian's gift for applying both practical and creative methods to resolve a situation makes all the difference. Personal relationships thrive during the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A relationship appears to be losing its once-strong appeal for reasons that might be different from what you think. An open and honest talk could lead to some surprising revelations.

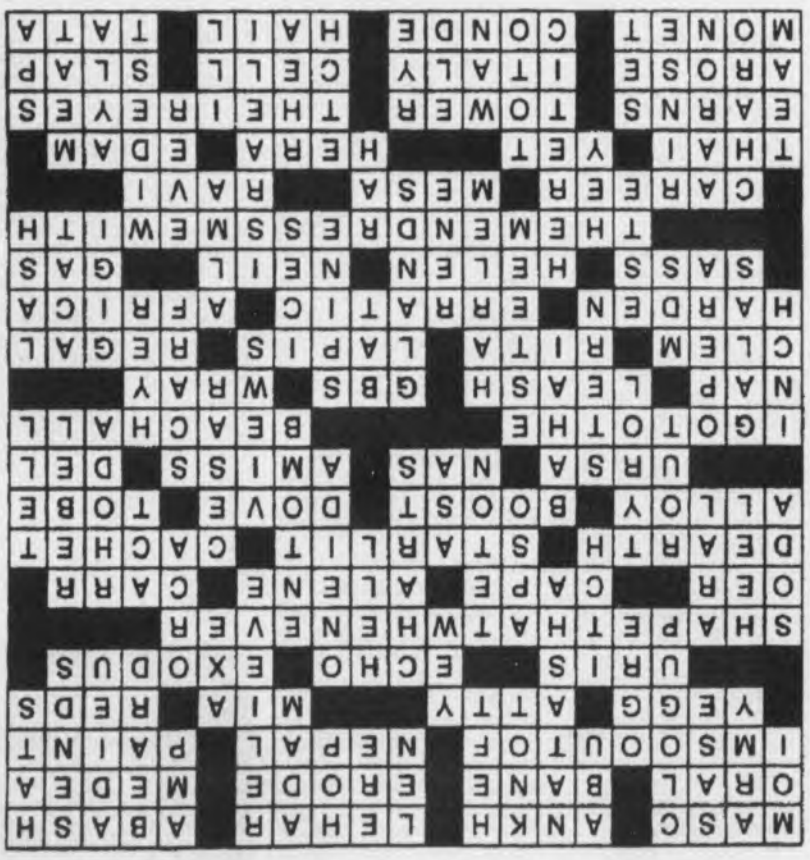
Fun By The Numbers



Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Hoo Boy

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Carr drives home jazz

Local vocalist returns to her roots with Boston performance

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

With a big band vocalist for a mother and a trumpeter for a father, singer Amanda Carr - who launches her latest CD, "Common Thread," with two shows at Boston's Scullers Jazz Club on Oct. 15 - was surrounded by jazz music her whole life, but she says it took a personal tragedy when she was 29 for the sounds of her childhood to become the music of her life.

"When I was gigging in my teens and early 20s it was as a keyboardist and rock and pop singer in Boston's rock clubs," recalled Carr last week by telephone. "In the late 1980s, I was living in Los Angeles with my fiancé, Terry Jackson, a hot bassist who worked with Michael Jackson, Thomas Dolby, and Reba McIntyre. He was nominated for a Grammy in 1989, but it all ended on March 16, 1991, when Terry was killed in a plane crash," recalls Carr, a 1980 graduate of Hingham High School who studied classical performance at Lowell University.

A member of country superstar Reba McIntyre's band, Jackson was flying from a corporate gig in San Diego to a concert the next night in Fort Wayne, Ind., when his plane went down killing him, six other McIntyre band members, the singer's road manager, and the crew of the airplane. McIntyre was not onboard the doomed flight.

"Losing Terry was a terrible, terrible thing. I stayed in L.A. for only a short time after that. I didn't feel right using his contacts for my career after he was gone. I decided to come home and build my own life and career instead of trying to live someone else's dream.

Amanda Carr and the Kenny Hadley Big Band will be at Scullers Jazz Club, 400 Soldiers Field Road, Boston, on Oct. 15 for two shows at 8 and 10 p.m. For tickets and information, call 617-562-4111 or go online at scullersjazz.com

"I let my background in rock and funk, along with pop music sensibilities, inform what I do in jazz now."
Amanda Carr

"My mother, Nancy Carr, has been the female vocalist with Bob Batchelder's Totem Pole Orchestra for many years and my late father, Nick Capezuto, played trumpet with people like Louis Prima, Woody Herman and Herb Pomeroy, so that style of music was always in my mind. It wasn't until the mid-1990s, when I filled in for my mother on a few gigs that I realized just how much I really enjoyed big band-style jazz. Terry's passing changed my perspective on life. I came to realize that my parents' music had real depth. Once I understood that, I knew it was a style I wanted to sing," says Carr, who moved first to Duxbury and then to Hanover, where she now lives with her husband of 12 years, Emmy Award-winning composer and recording engineer Bob Pascarella ("Boston Garden: The Banner Years").

After resuming her life on the South Shore, Carr recorded two jazz CDs with her own ensembles, "Carr-toons" in 1996, and 1999's "Live in San Giorgio," which documented her second appearance at Italy's EuroJazz Festival. Since 2001, Carr has collaborated with Braintree-based drummer Kenny Hadley who serves as her musical director. Hadley's 16-piece band backs Carr on her latest CD, a collection of 15 seldom-heard standards from the American songbook, including "They All Laughed" and "The Song Is Ended," by everyone from Irving Berlin and George Gershwin to Rodgers and Hart and Dizzy Gillespie.

"With 'Common Thread,' I am hoping to bring an updated, fresh perspective to what the songwriters intended without getting in the way of the music. Nowadays, the landscape is littered with people who believe singing is all about vocal aerobics. The singers who inspired me, people like Julie London, Ella Fitzgerald, Natalie Cole, and Peggy Lee, are just the opposite. They are all about interpreting lyrics with grace and style while still also having some intensity.

"Some of the music is really a challenge to sing," says Carr. "I let my background in rock and funk, along with pop music sensibilities, inform what I do in jazz now. What I really try and do with Kenny is to add my voice as another instrument to his big band."

Amanda Carr and the Kenny Hadley Big Band will be at Scullers Jazz Club, 400 Soldiers Field Road, Boston, on Oct. 15 for two shows at 8 and 10 p.m. For tickets and information, call 617-562-4111 or go online at scullersjazz.com. The new Amanda Carr CD, "Common Thread," featuring the Kenny Hadley Big Band, will be on sale at Scullers that evening and nationwide on Oct. 20. For more information, visit amandacarr.com.

Harrelson leads monster mash

Film Review

Zombieland (A-)

How many zombies does a gun-toting good ol' boy gotta kill to get a Twinkie? That's the million-dollar question running through the small but resourceful mind of a man called Tallahassee in the wondrously bizarre horror-comedy "Zombieland."

Tooling around in a jet black SUV with the late Dale Earnhardt's No. 3 painted on the sides, Tal's been through just about every food outlet dotting the post-apocalyptic landscape from Texas to California trying to get his blood-stained hands on just one of those creamy golden logs of goodness.

So far, they've eluded him… just like he's eluded the flesh-eating mobs of undead he's occasionally forced to slay with his trusty gardening shears and AK-47. But it's only a matter of time before he – or they – satisfy their hunger in a corpse-ridden nation ruled by mindless zombies.

Normally, I wouldn't recommend visiting such a venue. But this time I'm making an exception, mostly because the guy jonesing for the Twinkies isn't just some ol' redneck, it's none other than the natural-born killer himself, Woody Harrelson.

Say what you will about Woody – that he's crazy, a pothead, a recluse . . . you name it. But you have to admit the dude can act. Who else could deliver a catch phrase like "time to nut up or shut up" and make it sound both funny and heroic?

He twists and turns Tallahassee into the killing machine we'd all want to be. And what a thrill it is to vicariously absorb the bloodlust of a man always on the lookout for newer and funnier ways to inflict the coup de grâce.

Tallahassee (Woody Harrelson) knows how to deal with zombies.

Every fan of comedy and horror should get their arse to "Zombieland" asap, because I've got a pretty strong feeling this little Twinkie is about to Sno-Ball.

Yes, the Woodman delivers big, so big there's barely enough room for Jesse Eisenberg, Abigail Breslin and Emma Stone to squeeze in beside him.

You don't mind, though, as you watch him spin comedic gold out of a no-holds-barred script by Rhett Reese and Paul Wernick that hilariously turns the well-worn zombie genre on its rotting ear.

You're glued to every word, too, marveling at the ingenuity and cleverness director Ruben Fleischer injects into a picture that can best be described as controlled lunacy.

Employing just about every trick in the director's manual from voiceovers, to special effects, to an inspired cameo by one of our finest comedians (who shall remain nameless to maintain the surprise), Fleischer has only one goal: to entertain the pants off of you.

But what ultimately makes "Zombieland" such a utopian place is the chemistry and limitless appeal of an ensemble of actors with the ability to make every element of the film seem uncannily real, including the zombies.

It's the suddenly resurgent Harrelson, though, who holds the entire enterprise together, playing a sort of crazed father figure to his three extremely talented young costars. His Tallahassee is ill-tempered and impatient. But deep down, he's also a classic nurturer, first taking Eisenberg's cowardly Columbus under his wing and later a couple of slick con girls in Wichita (Stone) and Little Rock (Breslin).

As far as they know, they're the last uninfected humans left on Earth, but it will take several funny and thrilling adventures for them to finally forge a highly unconventional family – always with guns and one-liners a-blazin'.

Never, though, does Fleischer compromise on the acerbic humor, taking particular glee in satirizing everything from the sheep-like mentality of fat, lazy Americans, to our love of creating rules for everything, including, in this case, how to avoid being devoured by the undead. These edicts range from "No. 31, always check the backseat" to "No. 2, apply the double tap," which mandates that every time you kill a zombie, you must fire another bullet or take another swing of the shovel to make sure the sucker's truly, truly dead.

And while we're on the subject of directives, let's add another: Every fan of comedy and horror should get their arse to "Zombieland" asap, because I've got a pretty strong feeling this little Twinkie is about to Sno-Ball.

Rated R. "Zombieland" contains horror film violence and adult language.

'Opt-out' controversy continues

Showing of Obama speech needs parent notification letter

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A group of parents left the Sept. 16 meeting of the School Committee with what they thought was a clear answer on how President Barack Obama's "Back to School" speech would be shown in classroom going forward.

"This is making a controversy out of a controversy that never should have been a controversy."
— Joe Stanganelli, Aaron River Road.

Parents — and even a School Committee member — left with the impression an "opt-out option" would not be needed but a letter notifying parents of the speech screening could be sent out in advance of the showing.

When a sixth-grade teacher followed through on that direction and sent a letter home to notify parents later that week, she was notified on the day she was showing the speech that the notification letter wasn't enough. She was told by school administration the "opt-out" was still required.

Because of the confusion over the "opt-out" clause, an even larger group of parents attended Wednesday night's School Committee meeting.

The meaning of "opt-out" — whether it is respecting parents' point of view or choice to not have their child view the speech or a permission slip with a check box — was at the center of the discussion.

"This is making a controversy out of a

Self-checkout kiosk implemented at library

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is a busy place.

On Monday morning at 11a.m., there wasn't a parking spot to be found as MamaSteph entertained children and adults meandered through the stacks in search of their next great read.

Meanwhile, the library staff was unveiling its latest tool in bringing its services into the 21st century — a self-checkout kiosk. On Monday morning patrons were given the opportunity to check out books using the new system.

Just like the self-check out now fixtures at the supermarket, the library's self-check out kiosk will allow patrons to scan and go — and even pay their overdue fines by cash or credit card.

Library Director Jackie Rafferty and her staff are expecting the implementation of Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) technology to improve the speed and accuracy of most circulation and shelving functions, facilitate good customer service and minimize loss of materials.

"Self-check out stations are becoming more prevalent across the country and are now standard in new construction libraries," Rafferty said. While Cohasset is not an early adopter of the technology, Rafferty said the technology has come a long way since in the last few years.

The process to check out books is straightforward and an interactive touch screen helps patrons through the steps. After scanning the library card, patrons place their book on a gray pad where the computer reads the computer chip placed in the inside jacket of the book. Then, once all the materials have been scanned, the machine prints a receipt. Patrons can also use the kiosk to check on their account, see how many books they have

PICTURE THIS/Louise Demas

Name: Louise Demas

Occupation: Supervisor of Humanities for Cohasset Middle High School.

Best day of your life: Looking into my newborn's face for the first time.

Best (or worst) vacation: Best vacation was 3 weeks of study in China.

Favorite season: I love hot summer days by the ocean.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving: great guests and no stress.

Best book: "Wild Swans," by Jung Chang.

Best movie: Anything that makes me laugh.

Best TV show: "Dancing with the Stars" and wishing I could dance

Best music, group, or artist: Of late, Sugarland, but I am a diehard Beatles fan.

Pet peeve: Seeing holiday decorations past the season.

Most embarrassing moment: I once asked my daughter's teacher when the baby was due — and she wasn't expecting!

Goal: I hope to bring alignment to the three departments of which I have charge; I hope to make a difference in life.

Person you'd most like to meet: Bill Gates and the committee for his ideas on education.

Biggest worry: I am not a worrier by nature but I am concerned about the state of the economy and the young people in the military.

Best part of Cohasset: I absolutely love the staff and the students!

INSTANT GRATIFICATION

Instant messaging is real-time, text-based communication between two or more participants using some form of Internet or networking medium. This provides immediate receipt and reply options for the users. Some systems allow messages to be sent to people who are not online. The messages resemble e-mail and are stored for eventual retrieval in a message history. Additional features, incorporating web-cams, enable users to see the other party and talk directly to them as well. Abbreviations of common words or expressions are often used for quick responses and reduced keystrokes. Symbols may indicate expressions of emotion or the use of sarcasm in a statement. Numerous sound effects are also available for conveying reactions.

People love the Internet because it allows them to be in real-time contact with friends and family. If you're new to communicating online or looking for ways to communicate faster, you'll need these computer tips for using an instant message (IM) platform. With a little time, you can become a very savvy IM user. At RGB COMPUTER SOLUTIONS, located at 94 Station St., 2nd Floor, Hingham, we will even come to your home or office to assist you. If you want our help, please call 781.749.1130 today. Get control of your computer.

Cohasset emergency workers prepare to move a Plymouth man who was hurt in an industrial accident Sept. 30 from the rear of the Cohasset ambulance to a waiting Boston Medflight helicopter at Milliken Field.

Worker dies from injuries

The case remains under investigation by OSHA.

The worker, who fell approximately 25 feet from scaffolding onto pavement and sustained severe traumatic injuries to his head at the Mill River Marine Building at 82 Border St. on Sept. 30, succumbed to his injuries Oct. 7 at Brigham and Women's Hospital, police said.

Charles Ford, 4 Muster Field, Plymouth, was 50 years of age. The case remains under investigation by OSHA.

On Wednesday, Sept. 30, at about 11:23 am, the Cohasset Emergency Dispatch Center received a 9-1-1 call reporting that a construction worker fell from scaffolding. Emergency personnel from the Cohasset Police and Fire Department were immediately dispatched. Ford was airlifted to the Brigham and Women's Hospital Trauma Center in Boston by Boston Medflight.

Veterans' grave officer

Joseph McElroy, Veteran's agent, was appointed to the position of Veterans' Graves Officer for a three-year term. Under Massachusetts law, all cities and towns are expected to have a veterans' graves officer to ensure the upkeep and care of the graves of those who have served the country. McElroy brought it to the attention of Town Manager Bill Griffin that Cohasset did not have a veterans' graves officer. The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously in favor of the appointment.

Senior Center update

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson reported there is movement on several fronts in the drive for a new senior center. A meeting of the senior center ad hoc committee met on Monday morning to discuss the potential new lot lines and land swap with the Swim Center, Carlson said.

Undeveloped land located adjacent to the swim center parking lot, located off Sohier Street, and has been targeted for the new senior center. Town Meeting passed a series of articles earlier this year to allow the Selectmen to negotiate a land swam with the trustees of the swim center.

Carlson outlined a plan for both the swim center and the to-be-built senior center to hook into town sewer via North Main Street.

The Social Service League of Cohasset intends to give $1 million towards the construction of the senior center. The money, which will come from the Willcutt Fund they oversee, received approval for this specific use from the Attorney General and is waiting for approval from probate court. Once the Social Service League donation is available, the first half of a $220,000 allocation of the Community Preservation funding (also approved at 2009 Town Meeting) can be utilized to firm up plans for the senior center.

Carlson said private fundraising efforts are beginning as well.

Resident Mindy Evans of Sohier Street raised the issue of congestion at the swim center driveway, which is located very close to the MBTA grade crossing, and safety concerns.

Comcast raises cable rate

Comcast notified the Board of Selectmen in late September of an upcoming rate change. Effective in the November billing statements the monthly price for Expanded Basic cable service is increasing two dollars from $51.15 to $53.15. The monthly charges for internet and digital voice services are not increasing, the letter stated.

Comcast stated the changes to the cost are the result of increased business and operational costs.

Cook estate easement

Last week, the Board of Selectmen voted unanimously in favor of recommending a Special Town Meeting article that would grant Abbott Development, the owners of the Cook Estate property, easement rights on adjacent town-owned property.

This week, Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley asked to reconsider the vote until the Selectmen heard the opinions of the Conservation Commission and Water Commission on the issue.

Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Fred Koed said they would like to see the data before they reconsidered the vote.

Quigley made a motion to reconsider the vote to recommend the article; she was the only one who voted in favor of the motion.

The article is still recommended for approval by a majority of the Selectmen.

Police Beat

'Bulldog' moved from park to police station

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There's a new addition to Cohasset Police Headquarters. Local police have acquired a new K-9 – although this dog does not bark and won't be going on any police calls.

Police are in possession of a life-like, plastic statue of a bulldog complete with a red collar but no tags.

An officer "collared" the life-size, dog model that weighs about 10 pounds after a Hull sergeant reported seeing a "bulldog statue" at Wadleigh Park, which is at the corner of Forest Avenue, Jerusalem Road and Hull's Atlantic Avenue.

Since arriving at the station, the bulldog has been mysteriously appearing in different areas, like the garage bays, conference room and individual offices, police report. The bulldog is white, beige and black and stands about three-feet tall.

Police speculate that the bulldog may have been stolen from someone's yard in another town and the dog-napper left it in the park. It is too big for the average-size trunk.

Warrant

Cohasset police served a drug warrant out of California last week on a 40-year-old Scituate man who was shopping at CVS and he was arrested as a fugitive from justice. The District Attorney's office has taken over the case and will contact California for potential extradition proceedings.

Nothing taken

A Beach Street resident called police at 10:50 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 29) after he heard his car alarm go off. When he looked out the window he saw someone running away. Police checked the area and did not find the subject. Police have not had any similar reports.

The caller's car was locked and nothing was taken. Police remind residents to lock their cars and homes.

'Stolen' car

Police arrested a 35-year-old Weymouth man on Wednesday (Sept. 30) at 2:39 p.m. and charged him with using a car without authority after Hingham police on Hull Street by Jerusalem Road spotted the 1996 Plymouth Neon. Hingham had been following the car on a BOLO (Be On the LookOut) from Weymouth. By they time they caught up with the vehicle it was in Cohasset.

As it turned out the car, which had been reported stolen out of Wolfboro, N.H., belonged to the subject's girlfriend.

License suspension

A 22-year-old Cohasset man was arrested after an officer spotted him driving a 2002 Ford dump truck along Route 3A by the Mobil Station heading toward Pond Street. The officer knew the motorist's license had been suspended for drug offenses.

Police said the man tried to elude them but they caught up with him on Holly Lane, which is off Pond Street.

He was charged with operating after license suspension (subsequent offense), failure to stop for a police officer and speeding.

MVAs

- At 3:12 p.m. on Wednesday (Sept. 30), a 68-year-old Cohasset woman driving a 2007 Lexus "brushed" up against a fire hydrant while trying to go by a car that had stopped in a narrow spot along Jerusalem Road. She apparently moved over too far, police said. There was no real damage and no report was filed. Aquarion Water Company checked out the hydrant which was OK.
- At 11:53 p.m. on Thursday (Oct. 1) a car hit a parked car in the MBTA parking lot off Route 3A. Cohasset police logged the incident but the MBTA handles accidents on its property.

'Radio active'

A local business owner put the words "radio active" on a storage container outside his business to keep youngsters away. However, neighbors were alarmed by the warning and notified police and the fire department Police advised him to remove the verbiage and explained it was not the best way to keep youth away.

Haze in air

Police investigated a call from a resident about potential drug activity behind her house. She reported a haze in the air and strange odor coming from the woods at 10:46 a.m. on Friday (Oct. 2). Investigation revealed a resident with a small, controlled but illegal brush fire that had to be extinguished. There was no drug activity.

Hanging around

Police investigated a report from a mother who called and said her children were playing in the woods at Wheelwright Park when they came upon youth drinking and hanging around a small fire. The call came in at about 6:12 p.m. on Sunday (Oct. 4).

Police found the small fire but the group had left. No alcohol was found.

Door-to-door

A caller reported last Friday (Oct. 2) that four men were knocking on doors. The investigating officer reported that the men belonged to a religious group. Non-profits, including religious groups, do not have to register with the police. Police, however, like to know when any solicitors are in town and do not mind when residents give them a call.

Under the town bylaw, door-to-door solicitors are required to register at the police station where they can apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. The badge should be worn and be clearly visible.

Solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, Social Security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Cohasset blood drive today

Everyone, whether it is realized or not, depends on blood. Every two seconds, someone needs blood. At this time, donations of all blood types are needed to meet the needs of patients in local hospitals as well as those throughout New England.

The American Red Cross hopes the residents of Cohasset will take some time out of their busy lives to give the Gift of Life. A Red Cross Blood Drive will be held on Friday, Oct. 9, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St. between the hours of 1:30 pm and 6:30 pm. Childcare is available while you donate from 3 to 5 pm.

Grad Student Loses 10 pounds after seven weeks!

BEFORE

After 7 weeks at Get In Shape for Women, I lost 10 pounds! Clothes that haven't fit me in years now are just right - or are even slightly too big. Working out with my trainers is always fun: I feel great afterwards, and enjoy my sessions so much! They are supportive and make sure I work hard during the sessions. Before it was difficult to motivate myself to exercise even once a week, and now I look forward to my sessions at the gym - three times a week. I am eating healthier, feel stronger, have more energy, and am generally more upbeat. Thank you! I can't believe I didn't join earlier!

'Opt-out' controversy continues

controversy that never should have been a controversy," said Joe Stanganelli of Aaron River Road. "The only issue I care about is the current policy in place going forward, if not in intent, is a partisan policy. It applies a restriction to teach…if you have to send a letter home with an opt-out option."

School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy try to establish a 15-minute time limit on public comment on the issue, explaining there was a lengthy agenda and the committee already spent time on the issue three weeks prior. However the discussion on the issue took up just under an hour of the meeting.

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz called the previous meeting "wild" and said the final decision to utilize an opt-out option came at the very conclusion of the hour-long discussion.

"Teachers were encouraged to share the speech and show the speech, the only caveat is if some students didn't want their child to see it that we be respectful of their decision," Slanetz said. Slanetz said the schools were following on the recommendation from the Commissioner of the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE) to respect parents' decision if they did not want their child to see the speech.

"How can we respect their wishes if you don't let them know?" Slanetz asked.

However, some audience members did not agree with Slanetz's interpretation of the Commissioner's memo and said the wording was being taken out of context.

According the memo sent by Heidi Guarino, Chief of Staff of DESE, on Sept. 4, regarding the live broadcast of the "back to school" speech on Sept. 8, "The U.S. Department of Education will make the text of his speech available on their website Tuesday morning, and many parents will undoubtedly review it. Commissioner (Mitchell) Chester asks that if you do have students watch the speech, to please respect the requests of any parents who ask that their child not participate."

Superintendent Denise Walsh said her decision to not show the speech in the schools was a "judgment call," not a policy. And the DESE memo set forth guidelines "to respect the right of parents" if they did not want their child to view the speech.

School Committee member Lucia Flibotte said she had a different interpretation when she left the meeting three weeks ago, "I left here thinking there was no opt out…(providing) an opt out is like opening Pandora's Box."

Later in the meeting, Flibotte said, "it was ridiculous to have to send out a letter for a presidential speech, it's a part of history." Her remarks garnered applause from the audience.

MacCarthy said by "opt-out" the Committee was not requiring a little box, or permission slip-type letter be signed by parents to affirm they are OK with their children viewing this speech, "it is about respecting parents rights who call (and don't want their child to see the speech)…a check-off box is totally rude and wrong."

Slanetz and School Committee member Paul Schubert said the committee should back the superintendent in making these types of decisions.

"The way she chooses to implement guidelines from DESE should be up to (Walsh)," Slanetz said.

Yet, MacCarthy made clear — several times, as requested by audience members who were still unclear — a specific direction to the Superintendent.

The Superintendent should inform teachers to use the language currently found on the Cohasset Schools website (see sidebar) to let parents know via written letter that they plan to show President Obama's "Back to School" speech.

Therefore, teachers must notify parents if they plan to show the speech but no permission slip with an opt-out clause is required.

Text of the notification letter

Superintendent Denise Walsh said the language, as currently posted on the Cohasset Schools website homepage, would be recommended for teachers to use in a letter to parents notifying them the speech would be shown

"President Obama made his "Back to School Message" to students Tuesday, Sept. 8th. The text of the prepared speech can be found at this link www.whitehouse-.gov/MediaResources/PreparedSchoolRemarks/). A video of the President's Message is available at www.whitehouse.gov.

"The Cohasset Public Schools would like to provide students, parents and teachers with the opportunity to read the transcript of President Obama's Back to School Address, to view the address and to use it in the classroom or at home as a focus for discussion as you see fit. We encourage you to take advantage of this historical opportunity. A reminder from Commissioner of Education, Mr. Mitchell Chester (DESE) who asks that "if you do have students watch the speech, to please respect the requests of any parents who ask that their child not participate."

Voices from the meeting

"It's ridiculous to me that I have to lobby the School Committee to show a speech by the President of the United States at a public school."
— Ronnie Goodwin, Sohier Street.

"I do not believe that there was any bias – political bias or racial bias – in the decision (not to show the speech)."
— Jodi Tolman, Forest Circle

"You (the School Committee) didn't create the problem but you did prolong it."
— Howie Alholtz, Cedar Ledge

"Have faith in the lessons taught in critical thinking and trust that you are teaching students appropriately."
— Virginia Brophy, Beechwood Street

"I'm trying very hard to do the right thing, but getting a straight answer from anyone is very difficult."
—Stephanie Noble, sixth grade teacher

Commentary creates possible Open Meeting Law violation

School Committee reports itself to Attorney General

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Superintendent Denise Walsh was also consulted in the creation of the commentary and, according to Slanetz, made several "diplomatic" changes to the wording.

The School Committee is blowing the whistle – on itself.

School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy reported on Wednesday night that they have notified the Attorney General's Office of a possible violation of the state's Open Meeting Law.

The possible Open Meeting Law violation stemmed from the creation and eventual printing in the Mariner of a commentary signed by four out of the five School Committee members. The opinion-piece, "Cohasset Schools respect all views," was sent by e-mail to the Mariner from School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz and appeared in the Sept. 25 edition.

The Open Meeting Law is designed to ensure public business remains public. According to the law, with very few exceptions, the discussions and decisions of elected and appointed municipal government officials must take place in posted, public meetings.

According to MacCarthy, Slanetz wrote a draft of the commentary and sent it by e-mail to the other four School Committee members requesting there be no discussion. Edits were made and four out of the five school committee members agreed to have their names signed to the letter.

One member, Helene Lieb, requested substantive changes be made to the letter. Her edits ultimately were not incorporated and she ultimately did not put her name to the letter.

MacCarthy said Slanetz spoke with Lieb by phone in an effort to convince her to sign the letter as is.

Superintendent Denise Walsh was also consulted in the creation of the commentary and, according to Slanetz, made several "diplomatic" changes to the wording.

After a resident questioned how the commentary was drafted and eventually signed by four out of the five members of the committee, MacCarthy said she consulted with school counsel.

After laying out the drafting process, it was apparent there could have been a potential Open Meeting Law violation, "rather than be reactive, we made the decision to be proactive," MacCarthy said.

Slanetz said he did not have any intent to break any law and, in fact, believed the committee did not violate the Open Meeting Law.

"It was intended to be published in the newspaper…I believe that takes care of the public disbursement of the message," Slanetz said.

MacCarthy said the school's counsel has sent a letter to notify the Attorney General of the possible violation and they will report back to the public and the committee about the eventual ruling.

"I am sorry to put (the committee) in this position, but hopefully it will be a lesson learned," MacCarthy said.

MBTA pays $1.875 for land

Greenbush eminent domain case settled out of court

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Open lines of communication and open expert disclosures were critical to reaching this fair result."
— Attorney Peter Flynn

In one of the largest eminent domain settlements in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts this year, the MBTA will pay $1.875 million for just over seven acres of land off Route 3A.

It is the final large eminent domain case associated with the re-activation of the Greenbush commuter rail, which became operational in October 2007. The seven acres taken by the MBTA was used to create the Cohasset station parking lot.

After filing a suit in Superior Court in 2007, the property owners Robert and Barbara Davenport and their attorney Peter Flynn of Saugus began negotiating with the MBTA in an effort to avoid a trial.

By law in an eminent domain case, a land appraisal has to be done. The property was appraised at $1 million and that amount was initially paid to the Davenport family. But, the Davenports felt the property, which was zoned for commercial use, was worth more than the MBTA's offer.

The taking consisted of 1.8 acres of uplands and 5.3 acres of wetlands and left the Davenports with approximately 5 acres, where a boat storage yard and small strip mall was located. A remaining 5-acre parcel, also owned by the Davenports was sold to Connell Cohasset Greenbush LLC, an affiliate of New Jersey-based Connell Real Estate & Development Co. for the development of a mixed-use transit-oriented district complex.

Flynn said it was the plaintiff's position that the taking reduced the available gross retail building area by 6,000 square feet. Both the plaintiff and the MBTA had prepared expert testimony as to the value of the land.

Flynn said there were complicated valuation issues including the impact of the MBTA's commuter rail on the property's value, the downturn of the real estate market since the land taking in June 2004, and environmental concerns.

According to Flynn, the Davenports sought a $2.5 million settlement from the MBTA, two-and-a half times the original valuation. This week, the Davenports settled for a total of $1.875 million.

"Open lines of communication and open expert disclosures were critical to reaching this fair result," Flynn said, adding praise for the MBTA's Special Counsel and General Counsel, who had "good faith" and an "understanding of the intricate eminent domain legal principles involved."

"(They) saved considerable public money while making the plaintiffs whole," said Flynn.

Earlier this week, the Superior Court lawsuit was dismissed by both parties as settled and resolved.

This is not the first large eminent domain case in Cohasset associated with the Greenbush line. In May 2008, property owners of an adjacent 8.9-acre parcel received a $1.95 million settlement from the MBTA. The amount was over three times what the MBTA had determined as the fair market value for the property. Unlike the Davenport settlement, which reached agreement without going to court, those property owners took their case to Norfolk County Superior Court. Attorney Flynn also represented the plaintiffs in that case.

MBTA spokesman Joseph Pesaturo has said in order to build the Greenbush line, the MBTA took roughly 90 pieces of property by eminent domain throughout the entire 17-mile Greenbush corridor.

"The MBTA is satisfied with the resolution to this matter," Pesaturo said by e-mail this week of the eminent domain settlement.

Social networking: is it more than just chattering?

Are you tempted by Twitter? Fascinated by Facebook? Dying to use Delicious? Perhaps you're just wondering what all the hype is about.

Either way, October's AAUW Hingham Area Branch program will show the pluses and minuses of social networking and Web 2.0 and the ways it is changing our lives and those of our families and friends.

Branch Member Pat Laidler, Massasoit Community College Professor of Business, who uses technology extensively in her online classes and faculty training seminars, will discuss this phenomenon as it relates to us and our everyday world. Bring your questions and concerns. The meeting will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 13, at 7 p.m. at the Hanover Library 534 Hanover St.

Christopher Wilcox '09, who is a current freshman at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland, earned AP Scholar with Distinction. This honor is granted to students who receive an average grade of at least 3.5 on all AP Exams taken, and grades of 3 or higher on five or more of these exams.

Brooks is an independent, coeducational, college preparatory boarding and day school for students in grades 9-12.

CLEAN UPS

You can get out and enjoy the beautiful fall weather with family and friends and Make a Difference at the same time. This year the annual Make-A-Difference-Days sponsored by the PSO are as follows: Joseph Osgood School: Oct. 17th – from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. The PSO is looking for volunteers to help clean up the nature trails and other outdoor areas as well as general fall clean-ups involving the various shrub and flower beds and other assorted jobs. Any amount of time you can give would be greatly appreciated!

The Deer Hill School event is also on Oct 17th from 12 to 2 pm. The PSO is looking to add to the beautiful daffodils that graced the entrance to the lower school campus, as well as general fall clean-up, so come and help plant some bulbs!

The Cohasset Elder Affairs Clean up is being held on Nov. 14th & 15th. A two-hour commitment is asked for to assist neighbors with general fall clean-up (i.e. leaves, storage of lawn furniture, etc.) This is a wonderful opportunity to bring generations of the town together and make some new friends.

If you have any questions or are interested in volunteering please contact: Patty Cunningham 383-1378. If you would like assistance with general fall clean up please contact Cohasset Elder Affairs at 383-9112.

BUTTONWOOD

Buttonwood Books & Toys celebrates "Where the Wild Things Are" by Maurice Sendak with a special story time on Sun.

Oct. 18 at 1 p.m. listen to stories written by Maurice Sendak, bring your favorite wild thing (stuffed, of course!), join in wild thing activities and enjoy some wild refreshments. Please call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 with any questions.

OUR WORLD

Halloween is coming and the Our World Museum is holding a Not-So-Scary Creative Night on Friday, Oct. 23 from 4 to 8 pm. This event is for parents to have some grown-up time while the kiddos are having a wonderful time at Our World. Children ages 18 months and older can attend and can come in costume for the Costume Parade and Karaoke. Children of all ages are welcome and the crafts, games and activities will be broken up into age groupings from 18 months to age 10. Pizza and some spooky surprises will be served for Supper and a minimum of 2 hours is required.

The cost for this event is $20 per child and will include dinner, activities, pumpkin decorating and more. Make sure to have them bring a pair of jimmies or a comfortable change of clothes as well. To register, send an email to Miss Jen at ourworldprograms@comcast.net or call 781-383-3198. You may also check the website at www.ourworldcgdm.org for more information as well as the schedule for November and Decembers Holiday Happenings in Our World!

10 YEARS

The Cohasset High School Class of 1999 10-year reunion will be taking place on Friday Nov. 27th from 7:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. at the Red Lion Inn Cave. This is a great opportunity for everyone to share your good old memories from your years at CHS. Admission to the reunion is free. Music and Appetizers will be provided and there will be a cash bar, so bring money to purchase drinks. If you have any questions please send an email to cohasset99@gmail.com.

LA LECHE LEAGUE

Mothers who are: Looking for information about how to start breastfeeding; have questions about how often or how long babies nurse; have concerns about spoiling a baby, managing household tasks with a new baby or helping the baby's father feel comfortable in his role; or thinking about returning to work and wonder if it's still possible to nurse can learn more about these issues and the breastfeeding family at the next La Leche League meeting. The next meeting will take place at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, Oct. 13, at Paul Pratt Library. The program will be "Baby Arrives: The Family & the Breastfed Baby." All mothers and mothers-to-be are welcome. Babies are welcome, too.

Other LLL services include a lending library and 24-hour telephonehelp. For more information, call at Christie 781-740-7808, Kathleen at 781-749-2404, or Heather at 781-544-9230.

Please send in all your news and information no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Forum for veterans set for Oct. 24

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services and community veterans service organizations will host a forum for veterans, dependents and surviving spouses at St. Anthony Parish hall, 10 Summer St., from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, Oct. 24. All Cohasset residents are welcome.

The forum will help assure that all who are entitled to assistance are aware of the local, state and federal programs designed to assist those in need. It is hoped that those who attend will ask questions and communicate what they learn to local veterans and their families as well as their extended friends and relatives. Emphasis will be placed on giving attendees the opportunity to participate.

Individual letters will be sent to all Cohasset veterans who have registered in the annual census. However, the census makes no provision for identifying surviving spouses. The forum will highlight information sometimes unknown to surviving spouses, answer questions and help if needed and possible.

Spirited movement

Retreats offer community for those with movement disorders

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Cohasset resident Lindsay McGrath, director of The Spirited Movement Foundation, a year-old nonprofit, came down with cervical dystonia years ago, it meant she could not move her neck.

She went from doctor to doctor in search of the answer as to why her neck muscles were in spasm and she couldn't control her neck movements.

Her condition — her head was basically lying on her right shoulder — made it hard to be around people and she was in constant pain.

There was isolation and fear, McGrath said.

After she finally got her diagnosis and began medical treatment, she began to do research into movement disorders. And through that research she discovered movement disorders — and those that suffer from them — have little in the way of a community and there is a lack of public and medical knowledge of the conditions.

McGrath, a trained hospital chaplain, decided to do something: she wanted to help others in the same position, suffering from similar pain and isolation.

Last year, McGrath, 55, founded The Spirited Movement Foundation, a non-profit dedicated to people suffering from movement disorders. Through interfaith spiritual retreats McGrath hopes to provide those with movement disorders with a community of people who understand movement disorders as well as teach them ways specific movements, like yoga and therapeutic dance, can help improve their condition.

"There are more than 20 different movement disorders — chronic, painful, incurable neurological conditions that people live with all over the world," said McGrath. Although there are estimates that there are more than 40 million Americans living with a movement disorder like Parkinson's disease, dystonia, essential tremor or spasticity, knowledge of the conditions are not widespread.

Despite the prevalence, McGrath said many medical professionals are largely unaware or are not well versed in movement conditions. Statistics show people with movement disorders visit an average of 15 doctors over five years before receiving a correct diagnosis, she said.

"A lot of times the patient has to educate the physician," McGrath said.

Lindsay McGrath is the director of the Spirited Movement Foundation and Retreat Leader. She will be leading a retreat for patients suffering movement disorders and their loved ones at Glastonbury Abbey on Sunday, Oct. 18.

"What we offer is a complement to the medical treatment people get. Once you leave the doctor's office it can be a pretty lonely journey."

— Lindsay McGrath, Spirited Movement Foundation

Right now, there are no cures for movement disorders, but medicine and therapies can make the symptoms more manageable.

The Spirited Movement Foundation had its first retreat at Glastonbury Abbey this past spring to great success, McGrath said. Thirty-five people with movement disorders came to spend the day, share experiences with people who had the same condition, walk away with useable skills and the knowledge they are not alone.

"What we offer is a complement to the medical treatment people get. Once you leave the doctor's office it can be a pretty lonely journey," McGrath said, adding for some the retreat was the first time they met others with similar movement disorders. People came from as far as Vermont, New Hampshire and New York.

"There's a real hunger out there for what we're offering. There's a real hunger for community," McGrath said. "It's just a really positive, upbeat day."

Nina Clinton of Cohasset was among the attendees of last spring's retreat and plans to attend the upcoming Saturday, Oct. 18 retreat at Glastonbury Abbey.

"I think it was a very warm and supportive atmosphere with everyone coping with a difficult situation," Clinton said. Clinton, who has Parkinson's disease, found the entire day therapeutic. "It's a mysterious disease and the more you talk about it and find out about it, the much easier it is to cope with."

Next weekend's retreat welcomes those with movement disorders and their caregivers to the Glastonbury Abbey for a retreat day. Included in the program is instruction in chair-supported yoga with Renee Le Verrier, who lives with Parkinson's disease and is author of "Yoga for Movement Disorders." Jennifer Greenwood and her staff from Healing Touch Therapies in Scituate will provide gentle chair massage. And dance instructor Naomi Goodman will lead a therapeutic dance session.

"We like to affirm people's able bodied-ness and able spiritness and talk about what gift people do have to offer and utilize to deal with their condition," McGrath said. She hopes attendees walk away from the retreat with a new set of skills to help them feel better and a network to turn to for support.

"It's important to find the tools you need to feel better. We want to help people do that in a way that brings joy into their lives," McGrath said.

McGrath hopes to take her retreat model to other locations in Massachusetts in the coming year, and then onto other states. The Spirited Movement Foundation has received financial support from the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Parkinson Disease Association, Allergan Inc. and Gentiva Home Health Inc.

For more information on The Spirited Movement Foundation and the Oct. 18 retreat, visit www.spiritedmovement.org or call (781) 385-9401.

Liz Walker at Glastonbury Abbey Thursday

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices: Transformation and Renewal: The Power of Hope will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 15. Liz Walker will present a lecture titled "The Risk of Love."

In these turbulent times of shattered foundations and lost trust, where can one turn? Liz Walker, TV news anchor for 20 years and an ordained minister, suggests that people risk love. Unconditional love will change how people think, feel and act. Walker will speak from scripture, her personal journey from celebrity to recipient of a Harvard Divinity School degree and her observations and investigation of enslaved women and children in Darfur, Sudan, and those who assist them. Her documentary, "A Glory from the God," was nominated for an Emmy in 2008.

Walker will speak from scripture, her personal journey from celebrity to recipient of a Harvard Divinity School degree and her observations and investigation of enslaved women and children in Darfur, Sudan, and those who assist them.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Seating is first-come, first-served. Reservations will not be taken. For information, visit the Web site at glastonburyabbey.org.

58 year old mother and rehab professional loses 10 lbs and 4 pant sizes in 3 months!

BEFORE

"I joined Get In Shape For Women because I wanted my clothes to fit better and I wanted to feel better about myself. I'm a proud mother of two boys and let's face it, the weight just doesn't seem to stay off the way that it used to.

In just under three months I have lost 10 pounds and dropped 4 pant sizes. When I first joined Get In Shape For Women I fit snugly into a size 10. The other day I just bought a new skirt size 6 and I'm happy to say that it's a little loose on me! My confidence has grown tremendously and I look and feel a lot better about myself. Best of all Get In Shape For Women has taught me how to believe in myself and I feel that's the real reason I was able to reach my goal. Now that I have tasted such sweet success, I look forward to taking it to the next level!"

Beauty tips and support

We Cancervive Tea Party is Oct. 10

By Maureen Walsh
CORRESPONDENT

Scarves, foundation, mascara and moisturizer may not seem like weapons against cancer, unless you're in chemotherapy and confronting a bald, sallow stranger in the mirror.

Tea and pastry and a chat with strangers may not seem like cancer treatment, unless you've just made new friends who know what you're going through and can help you prepare for what's coming next.

The We Cancervive Tea Party on Saturday, Oct. 10, offers help to women in fighting back against the emotional as well as the physical assaults of cancer.

The event, from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Royal Rehabilitation and Nursing Center in Braintree, is open to women from any town who have been recently diagnosed with cancer and women who are in treatment now.

"Just putting lipstick on someone can make a difference," said Annmarie Murphy, activities director at the center and a 12-year lymphoma survivor. "It made me feel better to get dressed up in the morning to go out."

"My husband gave me a fur coat, and I'd wear it to 'chemo camp.' I'd sit in the facility with it on over my johnnie and I'd feel better."

The tea party combines two free programs offered by the American Cancer Society.

Look Good…Feel Better provides advice and assistance by beauty professionals, and Reach to Recovery offers one-on-one support by trained breast cancer survivors.

"Guests will have a chance to chat with other survivors and to have a makeover and get assistance with wigs and turbans. We'll have a massage therapist there," said Murphy.

"They're welcome to bring a friend. We're going to wait on them and show them a nice afternoon."

"When people hear the diagnosis of cancer, they may think the worst, but it doesn't have to be," she said. "It's not a bed of roses, but there are programs out there and people who can help out along the way."

COURTESY PHOTO

Cosmetologist Ilene Kellogg and Ruth Juster demonstrate how to use make-up and accessories to "Look Good…Feel Better." Both women are breast cancer survivors and "Reach to Recovery" volunteers.

Among those helpers are the volunteers of the Look Good…Feel Better program, professional cosmetologists who are trained and certified by the ACS to work with cancer patients.

"Most of the time you lose all your hair, and a lot of people lose their eyebrows and eyelashes," said Ruth Juster, a 17-year survivor of breast cancer. "Their skin becomes very dry; some get rashes."

"These trained cosmetologists show how to give the illusion of brows and lashes, the correct way to use moisturizer and make-up. You can camouflage a lot."

"When the women walk out of that session, they are gorgeous."

Juster said each woman will receive a kit of fine make-up and beauty products donated by leading cosmetics firms.

'Amazing women'

Guests at the We Cancervive Tea Party will also meet breast cancer survivors who provide one-to-one support through the Reach to Recovery program.

"We talk about our treatment and how we handled it and how they can handle it, not clinical questions, but personal questions about families and how we've dealt with it overall," said Juster.

"I know how devastating it is in the beginning. The first week, you can't eat or sleep. It's all you can think of. Once you know where your treatment is going, it's a lot easier to handle."

Juster was diagnosed with stage 3 breast cancer in 2002 and had a bilateral mastectomy, chemotherapy and radiation. She also had a hysterectomy, because she carries the BRCA2 gene associated with greatly increased risk of breast, ovarian and other cancers.

When she meets with new cancer survivors, she said, "It's reassuring for them to see me. I look healthy, the same as everyone else."

If a woman with breast cancer wants to be in contact with a Reach to Recovery volunteer, the American Cancer Society will match her with a trained breast cancer survivor to talk with by phone or face-to-face, on a regular basis or whenever the woman feels in need of support.

"Everyone is different," said Juster. "Some I call once or twice, some are ongoing. Some women will say, 'When I get to radiation, call. That's my real concern.'"

"We're there for whenever they need us. I just got a call from a woman I last talked to a year ago. She wants to meet for coffee."

Guests at the tea don't have to talk about themselves or talk to the volunteers or talk at all, Juster said. Many feel more comfortable bringing a sister, friend or husband with them.

"It's a time in their lives when they should pamper themselves, then sit down and have refreshments with other women."

"It's amazing what a group of women together can do, the strength and courage we all pass on to each other," she said.

The We Cancervive Tea Party is sponsored by the American Cancer society and hosted by the Royal Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, 95 Commercial Street, Braintree.

Advance registration is suggested by contacting Kerri Medeiros at 508-897-4392 or Kerri.Medeiros@cancer.org.

Women with breast cancer are also invited to a free staging of the play, "I Am Not My Breasts," on Sunday, Oct. 18, at 3 p.m. in the ballroom at White's of Westport, MA. The author, Janet Lynne O'Hare, and eight cast members are all breast cancer survivors.

To reserve a ticket, call 508-897-4397 by Friday, Oct. 8.

For more information on Look Good…Feel Better events in your area, call 1-800-395-LOOK or visit www.looksgoodfeelbetter.org. Self-help materials, including a videotape and instruction booklet are available.

Additional information on American Cancer Society programs and events is available on the web at www.cancer.org or by calling 1-800-ACS-2345 at anytime.

MEN IN THE FIGHT/Jack Burlingame

Founding member of 'Men With Heart'

While breast cancer predominantly strikes women, the disease has rippling effects on families, friends and loved ones. Rather than sit by as a silent witness, many men have taken up the cause and made it their own.

Jack Burlingame of Hingham is one of those men in the fight against breast cancer.

Burlingame got involved in the fight against breast cancer when his wife, sister and stepmother were diagnosed with breast cancer in 2002. He became a founding member of the group called "Men With Heart," a non-profit volunteer organization dedicated to raising funds, awareness and getting more men involved in the fight against breast cancer.

In a few short years, the all-male volunteer organization has become a fixture at the large breast cancer walks in the Boston area. Their bright yellow shirts typically stand out among a sea of pink and they carry backpacks filled to the brim with emergency items.

Below Burlingame shares some of his thoughts on why he is in the fight against breast cancer:

We have had some happy outcomes — my wife and stepmother are both breast cancer survivors — but many more sad endings.
Jack Burlingame

Why is this cause close to your heart?

Cancer has hit my family hard. We have had some happy outcomes — my wife and stepmother are both breast cancer survivors — but many more sad endings. Within the last five years, one of my sisters died of breast cancer and another sister of colon cancer; my father died of cancer-related complications; and my mother is currently undergoing chemotherapy. It's been devastating for the family. Yet although our situation seems extreme, it's really not so far from the norm. I am hard-pressed to name a single person I know whose life has not been touched by cancer.

What do you do to support the cause?

In 2002, after my wife, sister, and stepmother had been diagnosed with breast cancer, I was a founding member of a group called Men With Heart, a non-profit volunteer organization dedicated to raising funds and awareness and getting more men involved in the fight against breast cancer. We participate in a variety of events, most notably the two overnight walks that happen in Boston each year — the Avon 2-day walk and the Komen 3-day walk. Since Men With Heart was formed, we have raised over a million dollars for the cause and have collectively walked over 10,000 miles.

And after my sister Jenny died in 2006, her husband Chris and a number of their friends came together to create a sailing and rowing regatta in honor of Jenny and Susan Snow-Cotter, another Hingham woman who died of breast cancer. The regatta includes sailing and rowing events, with all the proceeds going to the breast cancer fight. It has a long name – "The Jenny Birch/Susan Snow-Cotter Memorial Regatta to Fight Breast Cancer," but we often shorten it to "B/C Regatta," which represents both Birch/Cotter and breast cancer. This year we had over 80 young sailors and scores of rowers take part.

Why is it important for men to be involved in this issue as much as women?

Breast cancer is not a women's issue, it's a human issue. The impact of each diagnosis has a ripple effect that runs from the individuals through their families and their communities. Anything that causes such devastation should be fought by all caring people, side by side, irrespective of gender. When I took part in my first Avon Walk in 2002, there were several thousand women and only about a hundred men. It was a pitiful showing on the male side; I was embarrassed for my gender. More men take part now, but we still have a long way to go.

What's the most important lesson you have learned through your involvement?

I've been most impressed by people's strength and resiliency in the face of adversity. On the cancer walks, you encounter a lot of people as you hike 20 miles a day. Invariably, you will meet breast cancer survivors who are still waging an active battle. They have lost their hair; they are in the middle of chemo or radiation treatment; they feel like hell and struggle every step of the way. But they are out there; they are on the route; they have raised their funds; they have rallied their friends and family; and they are fighting the fight. It is incredible and awe inspiring.

What inspires you, keeps you motivated, for a cure?

What keeps me engaged is the thought of my daughter, her cousins, her friends, her generation. I'd like to see them enter adulthood in a world free of breast cancer.

How can others get involved?

The breast cancer walks are a great way to channel your energy. You can walk solo — you'll quickly make lots of friends! — or you can form a team. Plenty of information and advice can be found at the Avon website (avonwalk.org) and the Komen website (the3day.org). And Men With Heart is always looking for men who want to join the fight and do something constructive. They can find us at menwithheart.org.

Roadwork: Fact of life

Those of you out there who may have had the privilege of living in the Land of 10,000 Lakes – the great state of Minnesota – then you know the old adage there.

Minnesotans bemoan the fact that they have only two seasons: winter and road repair.

After surviving wind chills and below zero temperatures — the likes of which we here in Massachusetts can only imagine – Minnesotans then spend the warmer months dodging potholes, frost heaves and road-repair crews. (Not to mention – mosquito infestation. The mosquito is dubbed their state bird!)

Luckily here in New England – where Cohasset is a pristine example of a New England town – we can usually enjoy four seasons. But what Cohasset has had in common with its mid-western neighbor for what seems like a generation is: roadwork.

Tearing up our roads for water and sewer projects has become a regular part of the landscape. Most Cohasseters have taken the work in stride – knowing that it is necessary and for the greater good.

A major part of the upheaval over the past several years has been the mammoth Little Harbor water and sewer projects. They are now winding down. That means there could be fewer big trucks and less roadwork.

However, we still have some ways to go. Individual homeowners will be connecting to the sewer line and that means roadwork and landscaping in front of a lot of homes.

The Little Harbor project is by no means the first to cause detours and street openings. Water woes surfaced in town in the early 90s when folks living along Rustic Way and other area streets turned on their faucets to discover they had little or no water! The town's antiquated water pipes were at issue and the Water Department embarked on a long-term plan to upgrade the distribution system.

Shortly thereafter we had the North Cohasset Sewer Project followed by the initial expansion of the Elm Street plant, adding more homes to the Central Sewer District.

At some point about 10 years ago part of Route 3A in Cohasset was completely resurfaced, causing delays.

As any motorist knows, however, once one project is complete – another usually begins. So even if Cohasset finally gets to the point of having no need to open its streets, you can be sure that Hingham or Scituate will.

At the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square – we endured at least two years of Greenbush construction in the heart of Hingham. That included the tunnel, an amazing piece of engineering!

On South Street – which is in front of our office – we can attest that DPW or utility crews will find a reason to open the street every six months. We have not figured out why, but we know it has and will continue to happen.

Route 228, on which many Cohasset commuters and motorists travel – is currently in its second phase of reconstruction. On the positive side, the other day we discovered a new short cut thanks to a forced detour.

Who could forget the delays during reconstruction of the North River Bridge on Route 3A (now named in memory of Scituate Army Sergeant Michael J. Kelley, 26, who was killed in Afghanistan).

The years'-long project forced all of us to stop at the temporary light and enjoy one of the most beautiful views of the historic river. Today, we think about Michael – who was in the same class as one of our sons — as we cross over the new bridge when headed toward Marshfield.

When put into perspective, putting up with roadwork doesn't seem so burdensome after all.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Penny wise, pound foolish

TO THE EDITOR:

At a recent School Committee meeting, Stephanie Noble, a former Cohasset School Committee member and current Cohasset Middle School teacher, admonished the administration for their handling of the pay decrease for aides or "education support professionals" in our public schools. I would like to echo Stephanie's dismay over this situation and further suggest that this is just one more example of a penny wise, pound foolish approach to special education policy in Cohasset.

While some aides supervise lunches and recesses, others with specialized training provide direct instruction to students with mild disabilities such as dyslexia. The numbers of these students who are "mainstreamed" in the Cohasset Public Schools might surprise many residents. In the past decade, the percentage in just one grade has been as high as 20 percent. In a perfect world, these students would be serviced by certified special education teachers for the majority of the time. In the real world, the pay scale these teachers command limits the amount a small town like Cohasset can afford. Lower paid instructional aides bridge the gap and allow most of these students to remain in the public schools. Were that not the case, many families would seek (and win) reimbursement from the town for specialized schooling at places such as Landmark or the Carroll School – to the tune of nearly $60,000 per year.

As a small community that must make the most of its tax dollars, Cohasset needs to be cognizant of the fact that we have been the beneficiary for many years of a group of instructional aides who, in general, are overqualified and grossly underpaid for the quality of the services they provide.

Several years ago, when the last Director of Student Services Linda Gill began her term, there was a wholesale letting go of numerous aides due to budget constraints. The result was that the remaining aides have had to service a much greater number of children.

Under these circumstances, a pay raise would not have been unwarranted. Unbelievably, what they got was a pay cut. What kind of management is this? Let's not forget that amongst the roles we have hired them to perform, the school administrators in our town serve as supervisors of many employees. If we value our educators and aides, we should hold the administrators to a high standard in this role.

I don't know about you, but if I showed up for work one day and my boss notified me (by memo nonetheless!) that the pay I had been receiving was a result of a "clerical error," I would strongly consider seeking other employment.

Let's hope for us taxpayers' sake, but most importantly for the children of Cohasset, that the aides feel otherwise.

Resolving issues at Harborview Apartments

TO THE EDITOR:

There was a lively meeting the morning of Sept. 15 at the Harborview Apartments, a public housing development off Elm Street that was attended by Selectmen, legislative aides from Rep. Bradley's office, the Cohasset Housing Authority, residents and members of their families.

The meeting marked the completion of a two-year, $1.8 million renovation and was held in response to a letter to the representative from a number of residents, at the apartments, many of whom are former property owners and lifelong residents of the town of Cohasset. The letter referred to problems that both preceded or took place during the renovation and remain outstanding at this time. Nevertheless it was clear that the renovations enjoyed virtual unanimous approval.

Those residents who signed the letter to the representative (the writer included) are hopeful that these outstanding problems which include: resident outreach and access, description of staff backup, duties and responsibilities, apartment flooding, grounds maintenance, etc., will be addressed at the next meeting of the Authority, Oct. 28, at 1 p.m., and that their resolution will be included in a revision to the January 2009 handbook of the Harborview Apartments and/or in some other vehicle. It may be necessary to schedule a work session to accomplish these resolutions.

It is acknowledged that the renovations took care of virtually all important problems that have existed, nevertheless is seems unworthy of the vast expenditures of time and money not to do the job properly.

It is the writer's personal opinion previously expressed in these pages that the Harborview Apartments are unique for the natural beauty of their location and for their long-term value since they represent, along with the adjacent Special Needs Housing, 100 percent of the affordable housing in the Town of Cohasset.

Decision of Olympic proportions

LETTER FROM COPENHAGEN

MIKE RASMUSSEN

On Oct. 2, 2009, the exciting process of deciding where the 2016 Summer Olympics and Paralympics took place in Copenhagen, Denmark. The candidates for this decision were between Chicago, Tokyo, Madrid and Rio de Janeiro. I personally was able to see this procedure live from the festival held in downtown Copenhagen.

Chicago, our fair and windy city, was eliminated in the first round of voting. President Barack Obama who spoke on our behalf visited Copenhagen for a mere five hours. He met with the queen, the prime minister, made his speech and left. For the short duration of his stay, Denmark was nearly shut down. Trains were at a halt, stores locked their doors, and even the main bridge connecting Sweden to Denmark was closed. I personally found it welcoming and amazing the amount of support Obama receives from the Danish. All Danes seem to feel (according to the news) that he is doing a great job and gives their full support. Personally, I was unimpressed by his speech and apparently so was the International Olympic Committee (IOC). He seemed to try and sell himself for their votes instead of why Chicago was a better candidate than the rest. His wife, first lady Michelle Obama, arrived in Copenhagen two days before the voting with Oprah Winfrey. I felt Michelle had a much better speech

Flushing helps clear out sewer lines

MAKING TRACKS

COURTESY PHOTOS

Water Connected to Flushing Connection.

Water Flowing Out of Sewer Line.

Looking Down at Stones in a Coffee Cup.

A keyway is a groove that runs from one edge of the road to the other under the end of the new paving. This essentially allows for increased thickness of the new paving at this point and provides a way to "lock" the new paving in place.

Little Harbor Project – Last week we described the situation the Project found on Gammons Road where they found a partial blockage in the new sewer line. If you didn't happen to see that article, these lines have been in the ground for several years and have been worked on by several construction crews, so it is difficult to determine how or when the lines developed their blockage. But, the fact remains they did not flow as freely as they should and the project needed to find out why. They felt they might be able to correct the problem by forcing high-pressure water through the line. So, a plan was established to do just that.

This past Monday morning, with the assistance of the Cohasset Fire Department, the engineers and the contractor were able to open up a section of the sewer line on one side of the blockage. The open end was connected to a pipe that would let water flow down Gammons Road. At the other end of the pipe they connected it to a fire hydrant by using a "flushing connection." We have talked about flushing connections in previous articles, but they are places where a pipe, connected to the sewer line, is brought up to the surface for just such a purpose as this. The flushing connection gives us a connection point for a high-pressure water line that can flush out any debris. We have included several photos to give you an up-close view of the flushing operation.

The first photo shows the flushing connection as it was hooked up to a fire hose connected to a hydrant. The larger circular hole in the ground is where the hose is connected to the underground piping system. The "T" shaped handle to the left of the flushing connection operates the flushing connection valve buried down on the sewer line. This valve opens the sewer line and connects it to the flushing connection so that water can flow into the sewer line from the flushing connection. When the flushing connection is no longer in use, the valve will be closed to prevent leakage out of the sewer system.

The next photo shows the other end of the flushing operation, positioned near the intersection of Gammons and Joy Place. As water was flushed through the lines, it carried the debris from the lines. Confirming what the engineers expected, the water was quite dirty for a prolonged time as the stones and fine silt and other debris were washed out from the sewer line. The next photo shows a few small stones collected in the bottom of a good old Dunkin' cup that were washed out as a result of the flushing process. As of mid-week, the engineers are reviewing the data they have collected to determine whether their flow goals have been achieved.

Little Harbor Project Paving – Paving a roadway is a process that is a lot more complicated than you might otherwise think. There is a substantial bit of preparation work that usually must be done prior to paving. We've included a photo that will give you one example of the required preparation work. Bow Street is one of the roads on our "Next to Pave" list. But, Bow Street paving starts and ends at Jerusalem Road. If we just add paving to Bow over the present Jerusalem Road paving, Bow Street will be higher than the present Jerusalem Road at their junction. This means that there will be a bump where they meet. To solve the bump problem, the new paving needs to be tapered at its end. Cars continually hitting the joint of new and old paving will tend to knock the new paving loose, especially if is severely tapered at the Jerusalem Road existing asphalt.

The solution is to cut a keyway into the old pavement at the intersection point. A keyway is a groove that runs from one edge of the road to the other under the end of the new paving. This essentially allows for increased thickness of the new paving at this point and provides a way to "lock" the new paving in place. This way, cars hitting the sloped pavement junction won't dislodge the new paving. Of course when Jerusalem Road is paved later on, the bump will be done away with.

There are numerous similar tasks that may need be done to prepare for paving. Among these tasks are:

- Trimming bushes and weeds from the edge of the road
- Sweeping the debris from the road so it is clean when the paver arrives
- Cutting driveway edges back so that there is a clean line for the paver to meet with the new road
- Patching the asphalt in selected areas
- Loosening in-the-road-structures (valve boxes, manholes, storm grates, etc.) that may need final height adjustment by the paving crew
- Adding edge of road paving that needs to be adjusted prior to paving
- Making any adjustments to existing curbing, or adding missing curbing to control storm water

There are lots of other tasks we could list, but you get the general idea. We might also mention, that there are "after paving" jobs that need to be done as well, such as loaming and seeding at the edge of road and final construction clean-up. It is always our preference to use local contractors for these jobs for several reasons. It keeps the work within our general community and it enables us to have better communication and control over the work that is done.

Cold Planing– As we write this article on Wednesday, Oct. 7th (we have an advanced deadline for Friday's newspaper), we expect that Costello Industries, Inc., from Connecticut, will be in Cohasset on Thursday and Friday to grind about 1-1/2 inch of old asphalt from the top of the triangle at the head of Jerusalem Road, North Main from that location to Red Gate Lane and Red Gate Lane, itself. This brings us one step closer to paving in the center of Town. Hooray!

Columbus: Love him or hate him?

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Columbus was not the first to sail west to find land, but his voyages did change the course of human history.

Honor him as a hero?
Hate him as a genocidal conqueror?

Christopher Columbus was ignored by Americans in 1792 (admittedly, there were more pressing problems for the 13 new United States); hailed as a hero in 1892 with rousing celebrations nationwide; and denounced as a maniacal villain in 1992 with organized protests nationwide.

Today, Columbus' critics still abound, among them historian and social activist Howard Zinn who savagely (pun intended) denounces the arrival of the Europeans in the New World. He writes that their "massacre of Indians, their deception, their brutality, was that special powerful drive born in civilizations based on private property," and that the natives in the New World were "remarkable for their hospitality, their belief in sharing."

One history text, A People and A Nation (Houghton Mifflin) used in schools today (including Cohasset) states that Columbus "became obsessed with gold" and "came to understand the economic potential of the slave trade." Before his first voyage, according to this same text "Experts scoffed at this crackpot notion" of his that the earth was only about 3,000 miles in circumference. Columbus has been blamed for spreading terrible diseases, for opening the first Atlantic slave trade, and for savaging a new world full of peaceable societies.

Diseases? In the 15th century, the causes, prevention, and cure for small pox, diphtheria, typhus, cholera, measles, scarlet fever, were a complete mystery. The concept of germs was unknown.

Slavery? Since the beginning of recorded history, the abhorrent practice has existed among both civilized and primitive peoples. Peaceable societies? A few, yes, like the Taino and Arawak in the Caribbean. Many other tribes regularly waged war on their neighbors and enslaved captives. The Aztecs of Mexico made sacrifice to their gods by ripping the still-beating heart out of victims.

It's true that his goal was not to make friends and spread world peace but to find a sea route to the spices in the Far East that Europe so desperately needed. In the 15th century when death came early and the diet was dismal, spices like pepper, ginger, cloves, were even more priceless than gold. Kings and queens knew that the first country to find a sea route west to Asia would rule the world.

It's also true that Columbus was a self-promoter, arguing for titles, lands, and one tenth of all the riches in "the great Kingdoms of Cathay." He was not the first to "discover" the New World, and he certainly was mistaken, after bumping into the North American continent, in believing that he had landed in the Indies, some 9,000 miles further west. He was wrong in thinking that Cuba was part of Asia, that South America was just an island, and that the native peoples were Indian.

And yet, he was right in believing that he could sail west and end up in the East. While most educated people of his day also knew that the world was round, did any one of them dare to sail across the vast Atlantic to disprove the myth of a flat earth? Columbus was persistent. He worked long and studied hard, petitioned one royal court after another for 17 long years. In his late 30s, he was already well past middle-age (for that time) when Queen Isabella of Spain grudgingly agreed to finance his ships.

Columbus was not the first to sail west to find land, but his voyages did change the course of human history. One example: Within a generation, the foods from the New World – potatoes, tomatoes, squash, corn, peppers, chocolate – would enrich both the diet and the economies of Europe. He had immense courage, faith in his knowledge, and the confidence to venture into the unknown.

Should we measure him by the yardstick of today's political correctness and dismiss him as a scoundrel? Or should we accord him, one of the world's greatest navigators, an honored place among the great men of history?

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

When a seagull sings like a nightingale

COMMENTARY

MURRAY CAMPBELL

Volunteer drivers for the American Cancer Society, driving patients from their homes for radiation or chemotherapy treatment, don't find the task depressing. Just the opposite.

It's no surprise that seagulls fly, and seem to wheel and soar effortlessly. But their cries are raucous rather than melodious, and it would seem a miracle if one of them trilled a few notes like a nightingale. We are not impressed if a well-educated person makes an eloquent speech without seeming effort. But for an unlearned and inarticulate man to communicate passionate emotion with only a few halting words is miraculous, like a seagull turned songbird.

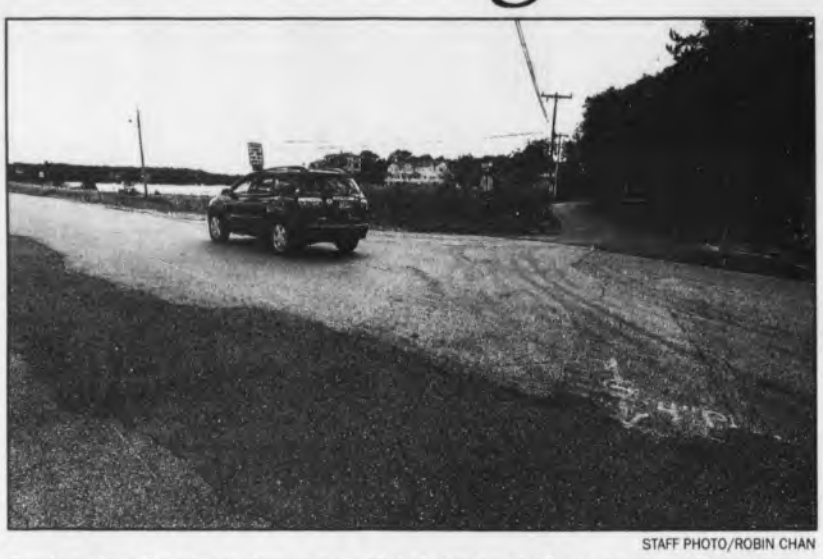
Volunteer drivers for the American Cancer Society, driving patients from their homes for radiation or chemotherapy treatment, don't find the task depressing. Just the opposite. Most patients are along in years, and have life's experiences to discuss. Almost all are upbeat, probably because they view the treatment as a positive development. However, few discuss their illness, and enjoy conversing on almost anything else.

Every driver has interesting experiences, some touching, some amusing. It's rare to drive someone that isn't cheerful, friendly and interested in what's going on, despite the uncertainties and fears they must be trying to banish to the back of their minds.

Although patients are supposed to schedule their rides via the local Cancer Society scheduling office, occasionally we drivers would give our telephone number to a patient that we particularly liked, and invite him or her to call us directly. One of my assignments was an elderly woman undergoing a long series of radiation treatments. She was quite garrulous, even if her English was rudimentary. I took a liking to her and invited her to call me for a ride into Boston from her suburban seaside town and back home. Her elderly husband, who always accompanied her, spoke little English and seldom spoke even in their native language. I drove them often and after a while they would invite me on return into their modest but spotless home for ice cream or some ethnic treat. He probably was a skilled craftsman and able to do shop talk, but in my presence was silent and even shy. She made up for it by lively chitchat, gentle exhortations to him, and remonstrances to me to eat more. The most he had ever said was "Ow Ow I hurt" when I accidentally caught his fingers in the power window of my car. It must have hurt terribly, but he was stoic.

Finally, one day they emerged from the hospital doorway ecstatic with happiness; she had been pronounced "in remission" and no more treatments were to be endured. All the way home she chattered in a mixture of English and her native tongue, while the old man occasionally mumbled a syllable or two. When they got home, they invited me in for ice cream. Then the old lady announced that she had some goodies for me to take with me, and got several packages from the freezer. She told her husband to help me to the car with them, bid me an effusive goodbye and rushed to the telephone to tell her family and friends the good news.

When all was stored in the back seat and the car door closed, suddenly the old man took both my hands in his, and with great emotion said (in very broken English) "Mr. Campbell, I thank you, I thank you. She good woman. She don't smoke. She don't run around, she don't play Bingo. We been married 52 year. I like that woman!"



The tears in his eyes, the power of his grip, his passionate sincerity, was more eloquent than any sonnet by Milton or Shakespeare. That this stolid, inarticulate man could transmit the fervor of his feeling about her deliverance was as much a miracle as a seagull emoting its joy in a nightingale song.

R. Murray Campbell lives at 217 Jerusalem Road.

Trucks are leaving town

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Road patching like what is shown here at Nichols Road and Atlantic Avenue could be history in the not too distant future as the Little Harbor water and sewer projects wrap up and road paving preparation gets under way.

Whether it was traffic delays or detours, noisy trucks or bumpy roads, the expansive — and invasive — the Little Harbor water and sewer project has been a part of the lives of each and every Cohasset resident in some way for the last two years.

But residents can take heart: the worst is over.

There is still paving to be done (and some of it won't be done until next spring) and the 487 Little Harbor homes marked for sewer tie-in still need to connect their homes to the town's sewer lines, but from a big picture perspective the project is in the homestretch.

Currently, the contractor, LM Holdings, is tackling its punch list, a list of finishing items.

"They're going to wrap up over the next four to six weeks," said Dan Coughlin, principal at Coughlin Environmental Services, the firm designing and overseeing the project's sewer engineering aspects.

The staging area on Jerusalem Road is no longer the central hub of the project. The construction trailers and the majority of equipment have been moved out and some of the restoration work is complete.

The Little Harbor water and sewer project is the largest single public works project in the history of Cohasset. Aside from the school projects, it's the most expensive, too. The estimated final price tag for the sewer expansion is in the neighborhood of $13 million: $2.7 million for the water improvements and $1 million in drainage improvements.

Over the last two-years since the first shovel dug in Little Harbor in October 2007 about 10 miles of sewer pipe and three miles of water pipe have been put into the ground. The Wastewater Treatment Plant located on Elm Street also got a retrofit in order to handle the additional 150,000 gallons per day estimated to come from the Little Harbor homes once they are hooked up.

The results of the project should be seen in the improved health of Little Harbor and better water and sewer utility for the residents of the area, many who have had failing septic systems for years.

The Water and Sewer Commissions, who have served in an executive role for the project, acknowledged residents' understanding and cooperation in the face of the construction.

"I'd say about 99.5 percent of the people affected by this project have been extremely patient and forgiving, given the insult it has been to the community. That's really been a pleasant surprise," said Sewer Commission chair John Beck, who lives on Nichols Road, one of the streets dug up during the project.

"It has been a huge pain in the rear end," Beck attested.

With the project winding down, Beck said from his point of view the Sewer Commission has completed the main objectives.

"First we wanted the job done safely; we've done that. Second, we wanted it done on time; we've done that. And third we wanted it complete on or under budget and we've done that," Beck said.

While the final invoices are still not in, Beck said the Sewer Commission is not anticipating having to use $2 million of Town Meeting authorized funds.

The 2005 Annual Town Meeting authorized a $13.2 million bond to fund the Little Harbor sewer project. Over the next year and a half construction and raw material costs rose and the Sewer Commission returned to the 2007 Annual Town Meeting to request an additional $2 million for the project, as a contingency.

This should be good news to Little Harbor homeowners who are responsible for 100 percent of the cost for the project, Beck said. The sewer betterment cost (which can be paid over 20 years with interest) is about $28,500. That cost does not include actually connecting a home to the town sewer system.

'Surprises'

There were plenty of surprises along the way that challenged the contractor, the engineers and town officials.

"Dealing with the unknown utilities under the roadway and private property was a challenge," Coughlin said. Out in the field, each hole dug could yield any number of curveballs — a gas line or other utility not marked on the plans is one example — and the engineers would have to go back to the drawing board to find solutions. If the crews hit a utility even more problems were created. "It was a constant process of assessment."

One of the biggest and most expensive "surprises" was when the retaining wall holding up a 300-foot portion of Jerusalem Road collapsed. The collapse resulted in the need for temporary lights to be installed and ultimately a $270,000 allocation to make the road safe.

Water Commission chair Glenn Pratt said Cohasset's trademark ledge stymied the contractor on more than a few occasions and the decision to work through two winters was a challenge for all. Cohasset's pokey streets and private driveways created the need for unique maneuvering as well, Pratt said.

The project also led to several more pleasant surprises. Among them, Pratt said were leaks in the water system, which were resulting in as much as 200,000 gallons of water seeping into the ground each day. Those leaks were found and corrected.

"We were very pleased overall with the work done by LM (Holdings, the contractor). (The project) was not without its problems, but no project of this size can be executed without its share of issues," said Beck.

Tie-ins

Little Harbor sewer tie-ins will likely begin in a flurry next spring and it is expected the process will take 12 to 18 months to complete.

A meeting for all Little Harbor residents scheduled to tie-in to the town sewer system over the next year and half was held at the Town Hall auditorium two weeks ago. The crowd was standing room only with over 250 people in attendance.

Residents heard from the project engineers, the grinder pump vendor and several licensed drain layers, in addition to the members of the water and sewer commissions.

Following the spirit of partnership between the water and sewer utilities of the project, one of the unique possibilities in the Little Harbor district — and something the commissions are encouraging — is replacing the water service pipe at the same time the new sewer pipe is installed.

Pratt said the town has received permission from the DEP to lay the water and sewer pipes in the same trench in a specialized configuration.

The water portion of the Little Harbor project caps off $39 million in capital improvements made since 1997. While Pratt said there is still a need for $5 million retrofit of the water treatment plant before 2013 because of changing, stricter federal regulations, the Little Harbor improvements are the last improvements for the distribution system for a while.

Little harbor project history

The path to get to this point in the Little Harbor sewer expansion project has been a long and storied. The town sewer expansion to include the Little Harbor district, an addition of 487 homes and 150,000 gallons per day, was mandated by the state through the Second Amended Final Judgment. The agreement goes all the way back to the late 70s, it was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging a violation of the Act, which could have cost the town $10,000 per day in fines. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment.

In 1980, the town and the state agreed on the terms of the Judgment, but it was again amended in 1994 and 1997, when it became the Second Amended Judgment. It was modified again in 1998 and then, in 2006, underwent its final amendment.

As a result of the Judgment, the town embarked on two sewer projects, including an expansion of the Central Sewer District and the North Cohasset sewer project, which allowed residents to tie-in to capacity at the Hull treatment facility.

Little Harbor homeowners will reap the benefit of the sewer expansion but also bear the burden of paying for it. The project timeline should have all homes hooked up to the town sewer by 2011; the judgment mandates all the homes be tied into town sewer by 2012. The homeowners will pay a sewer betterment fee over a 20-year period.

Town Meeting voters approved the borrowing of $13.2 million at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, but the Sewer Commission later came back to request an additional $2 million at the 2007 Town Meeting when construction and raw materials costs rose. At that same Annual Town Meeting, voters also approved a $1 million allocation to devote to drainage improvements for the flood prone district.

For the first time ever, the Water and Sewer Commissions worked together to have their infrastructure updates done at the same time to minimize the impact and disruption on the neighborhood.

The project broke ground in August 2007.

Democrats to air 'Charlie Wilson's War'

The Seattle Times wrote that Charlie Wilson's War is "one of the most important books ever written about a U.S. government covert operation."

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will begin its movie night series this fall with "Charlie Wilson's War" ('07 -R rated) starring Tom Hanks and Julia Roberts. The movie is based on a true story by George Crile which reveals how U.S. Congressman Charlie Wilson almost single-handedly launched the several billion dollar CIA operation in Afghanistan to force out the occupying Soviets, without either a vote in Congress or approval of the President. The Seattle Times wrote that Charlie Wilson's War is "one of the most important books ever written about a U.S. government covert operation."

Charlie Wilson, played by Tom hanks is encourage by a wealthy socialite, Joanne Herring, played by Julia Roberts to develop a covert plan with the CIA to support the Afghan fighters leading to the defeat of the Russians, which ultimately contributed to the fall of the Soviet Union. The movie about Texas Congressman, Charlie Wilson, who aligns himself with a CIA agent played by Phillip Hoffman focuses on the comic side of the politics of some very serious issues

Cultural Council seeks funding proposals

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth.

The Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to Council spokesperson Diane Kennedy, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset — including exhibits, festivals, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures. Cohasset Cultural Council will also entertain funding proposals from schools and youth groups through the PASS Program, which provides subsidies for school-age children to attend cultural field trips.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth.

This year, the Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $4,000 in grants. Previously funded projects include: South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, Town of Cohasset Recreation Department Summer Concert Series, Rusty Skippers concert band, and more.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, contact Diane Kennedy, devline@juno.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/lcc_public.asp. Application forms are also available at Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Effective border control, a priority

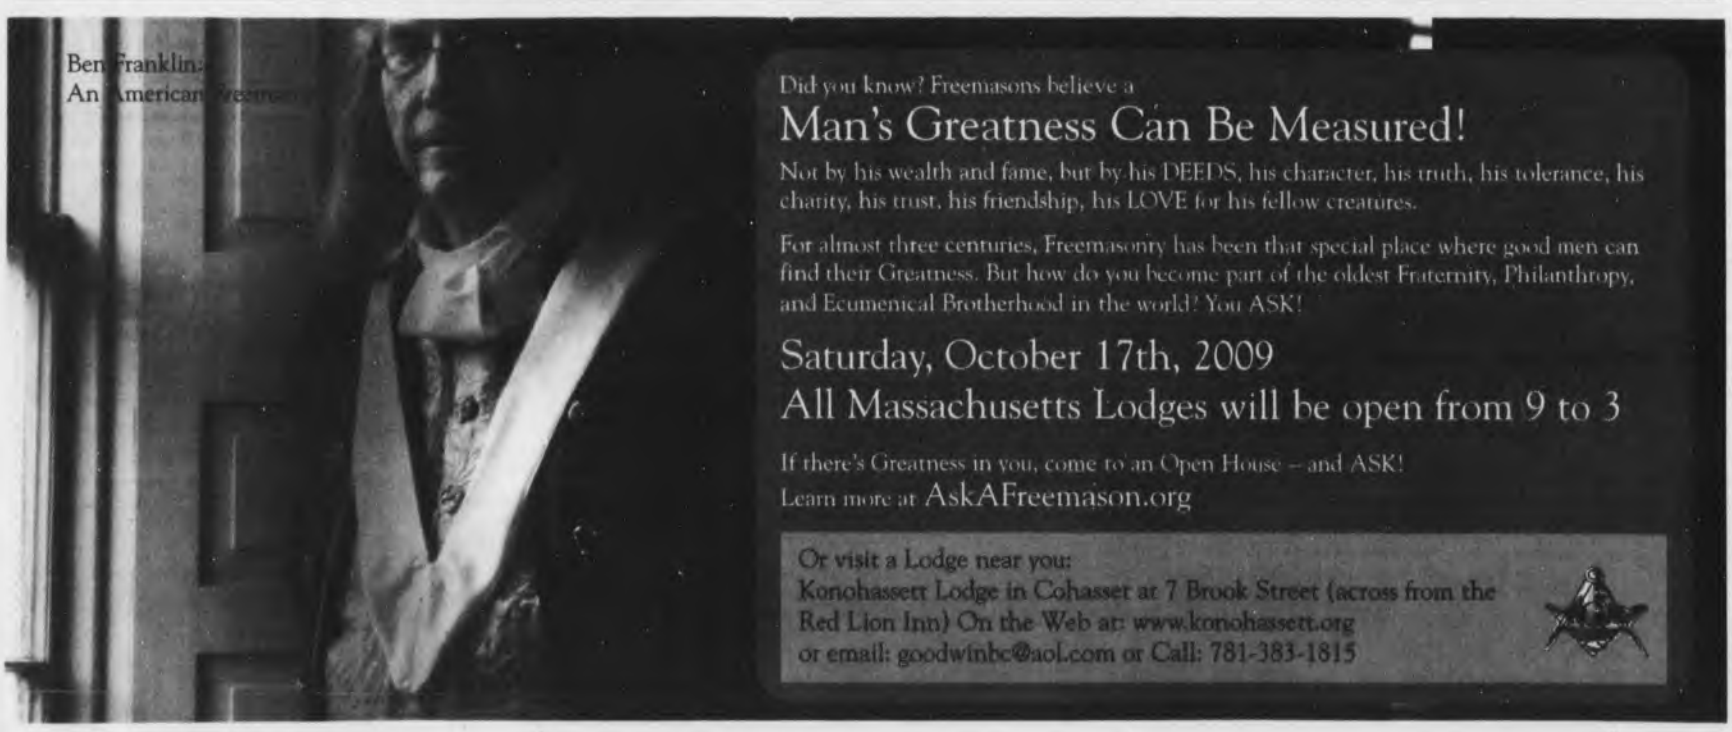
Terrence Jeffrey, Editor in Chief of CNSNews.com, started reporting Sept 25th the Obama Administration will reduce the number of Border Patrol agents deployed on the U.S./Mexico border by 384. That represents only about a 2 percent decrease in the number of agents on the southern border, but this is no time for any cuts to border security. The Administration seems to have enough funds, or is it more properly described as debt capacity, to pay for czars and vaporous Stimulus programs.



Effective control means when the Border Patrol detects an illegal border crosser in a particular area of the border, the agency can reasonably expect that it will apprehend that individual

An inadequately controlled border imposes a severe cost to U.S. citizens for (1) the additional burden to interior law enforcement and prison facilities, (2) the social costs of drugs and accompanying criminal harm to American communities and (3) the medical, educational and welfare costs absorbed by the illegal alien population estimated at somewhere between 12 and 20 million individuals.

America needs strong voices in Congress to continually pressure this Administration to resort to simple commonsense to protect American sovereignty and financial strength.

Decision of Olympic proportions

addressing the city and sparking emotion with her personal stories with the city and how it would be the best candidate for the Olympic and Paralympics games.

Chicago lost for a number of reasons. There is a poor history with the US Olympic branch and the IOC. They have had many disputes over the lucrative broadcasting rights of past Olympics held in the US. IOC members later said that the early elimination was directed more towards the US in general than the city of Chicago itself.

Beside the disputes for broadcasting rights, the last two Olympics held in the US were a disaster. In the 2002 Olympics held in Salt Lake City, Utah, the very heart of Olympic competition was soiled by bribery scandals. Even worse, the 1996 Olympics games held it Atlanta, Ga., resulted in a terrorist bombing. Both of which made the US a poor choice for 2016.

In the second round of voting Tokyo, Japan, was eliminated. They made their argument that they were the best city through five major points. First, there is $4 billion already saved for the games. They continued by offering the most compact Olympic games ever. Next, they promised to use the most cutting edge technology and in doing so creating the first ever green games with little to no impact on the environment. Furthermore, the Tokyo representatives claimed their city would provide an overflow of

A captivating story was told about Brazil's 400 million sport-crazy residents and how there has never been an Olympic event held in South America.

Japanese culture and hospitality. They finished their case by stating the games, if held in Tokyo, would greatly advance the Olympic movement for future generations. After having the most recent Olympics in China, rewarding another Asian city seemed less likely to occur.

With the elimination of Tokyo just two cities remained, Madrid and Rio.

Madrid addressed that in such a poor economic time their city was the most financially secure because it already had three-quarters of the venues either built or under construction. They furthered the argument by discussing their river project, which is underway in order to create more space in the city. This extra space is supposed to make it easier for athletes and those attending the games to get from their hotels to the venues. The environment was another issue they addressed stating that 26,000 trees are to be planted around the games. However, these arguments did not win the judges over. Madrid seemed to be in a similar situation as Tokyo because the 2012 games are to be held in London.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, made history by being the first city ever in South America to host the Olympic and Paralympics games. A captivating story was told about Brazils 400 million sport-crazy residents and how there has never been an Olympic event held in South America. Furthermore, that Brazil has one of the world's largest growing economies in the world. However, Rio has an extremely high crime and slave rate, which was remarkably downplayed. They continued their argument by providing an incredible computer generated map of the venues that seem to capture the hearts of the IOC. Then a speech by President Lula de Silva in my opinion clinched the title for Brazil. He stated that if the games were to be held in Rio it would send a very powerful message to the world. The message is that the Olympic games belong to all the people, to all the continents, and to all of humanity. Brazil will now hold the world's two largest sporting events, the Olympic games in 2016 and the World Cup in 2014. History has been made, let the games begin!

Thanks to all for Turf Field

TO THE EDITOR:

What an accomplishment. We have watched what began two years ago as a simple discussion at a School Committee meeting about what a new turf field and track project would look like at Cohasset High School grow into what is now a tremendous source of pride for the entire community of Cohasset. I just wanted to take a moment, catch my breath, and on behalf of the School Committee, school administration, faculty, coaching staff and most importantly the students of Cohasset say thank you to everyone who helped make this project happen.

First, thanks to all the donors and residents of Cohasset for funding the project. The public-private collaboration between the Town of Cohasset and the Cohasset Sports Partnership is going to be a model for other communities who want to accomplish similar projects. Such a unique undertaking required the leadership of Town Manager Bill Griffin and School Superintendent Dr. Denise Walsh, the approval of the Town Boards, Committees, and assistance of the towns numerous departments and employees. This project demonstrated how well a town can rally behind a project and everyone involved should be commended for their efforts. One town employee I would like to publicly thank is Brian Adams, the Town Facilities Director, who oversaw the day to day planning and construction of the project from start to finish and had the sunburn to prove it.

The volunteers who donated their time and services were simply amazing. Not only did our new track and field look great but also all the finishing touches to grounds turned a construction site into a first class athletic facility that has never looked better. The following individuals donated their time and service: Ralph Froio of Froio Landscape Co., Caruso Landscape Design, Wayne Sawchuk, Glenn Pratt, Michael Sullivan Landscape, Ellen Maher, Lorainne Tarpey, Alyson Silvia, Cindy Cavanaro, Suellen Durkin, Doug McNary, Village Greenery and Kevin Dooley of Bay State Equipment.

Finally, I want to thank the Cohasset Sports Partnership for all their efforts. There are three people who worked daily on this project that I would like to recognize: John Cavanaro, whose guidance and expertise as an engineer was invaluable throughout out the project; and the dynamic duo of Bill Cavanaro and George McGoldrick, who have had the vision from the start of how this all could come together and put in countless hours fundraising, planning, meeting, and just rolling up their sleeves and working to make the turf field and track a reality. We can now say "WE GOT TURF" and thank you to everyone who I mentioned and forgot to mention that helped make it happen.

Health Day support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Board of Health, I would like to thank all those who made our recent health screening day such a success. Every year we depend on the generosity of community businesses and agencies to provide the services we offer free of charge to all who attend. The Cohasset Rotary Club and Pilgrim Bank's donations supported the cholesterol, glucose and PSA screenings that are so popular each year. The reusable shopping bags were generously donated by Goodwin Graphics. Our food table was once again full of delicious snacks and coffee from Atlantic Bagel and Deli, Dunkin' Donuts, Shaw's, Starbucks and Stop & Shop. Attendees and participants enjoyed taking a break during the day and sitting and visiting with each other while snacking on the complementary "goodies" presented so attractively by our faithful volunteers, Mary Hartwell, Madeline Hargadon and Barbara Hopey, who help us each year. We couldn't conduct the annual health fair without them!

Many thanks to the following providers for their services:

The Second Congregational Church; Health Watch Inc. for the Cholesterol, Glucose and PSA Monitoring; Norwell VNA for Osteoporosis Screening; Dr. Robin Lawrence provided the Oral Cancer Screening; Maryellen Maguire with the Children's Melanoma Prevention Foundation; Melanoma Education Foundation provided the Skin Analyzer; Paula Pozniak – Nutrionist; Massachusetts Audiology; Council on Elder Affairs; Officer Jeff Treanor of the Cohasset Police Department provided car seat safety checks; Boston Medical Center Concussion Awareness Program; Peggy Chapman RN, MSN, and Cohasset Board of Health Chairperson provided the Mental Health Screening; Judy Fitzsimmons RN, and Corinne Cahill, RN helped us throughout the day ensuring things ran smoothly; American Diabetes Association; Dr. Richard Strecker, M.D. from Strecker Eye Center; Jeffrey Spratt of Santi Holistic Health; Linnell Reed Reiki; Lindsay McGrath from The Spirited Movement Foundation; Dr. Debra Tranberg D.C. from Scituate Harbor Chiropractic; Janet Wilke of Cohasset Cycle Sports; Tom Wigmore, communication supervisor with 211 and 911 info; Enhanced 911 Massachusetts Equipment Distribution Program; Emergency Preparedness by Cohasset Board of Health; Cohasset Recreation Department and Posit Science Brain Fitness program by Steve Bobo of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Thanks to all of you and we hope to see you again next year!

Cohasset joins two other libraries in the Old Colony Library Network with RFID systems — Plymouth library and the newly constructed Milton library.

While Cohasset is the smallest library in the Old Colony Library Network to implement this system, it is also one of the busiest in the state. The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is the top lender per capita of 48 libraries in Southeastern Mass., and the fourth top lender statewide in its population group (5,000 – 9,999), and 24th overall of 370 Massachusetts libraries.

While library circulation rates have almost doubled over the past decade, staffing levels have remained stagnant, Rafferty said. In fiscal 2000 annual circulation was 85,506 compared with the fiscal 2009 circulation of 149,299.

Rafferty expects the self-checkout kiosk to free up staff to help patrons with more complex problems and expedite regular library operations.

"One of the key RFID tools purchased is the Digital Library Assistant (DLA). This is a handheld wand that staff or volunteers can use to maintain shelf list order, find mis-shelved items and harness the daily holds," Rafferty said, explaining all the staff has to do is move along the stacks in order to get the information.

"Everyday, we get many 'holds' requests for items from our library patrons and from OCLN network patrons," the DLA will help the staff track down all the requested materials — and do it more quickly.

The tool will also generate weeding list reports and using the DLA, identify items that should be removed from the collection as well, Rafferty said.

The installation of the self-check out station, located to the right as one enters the main entrance to the library, is actually the culmination of a yearlong process to update the library checkout system.

Every book, DVD, and CD had to be fitted with a new tag, basically a computer chip, discreetly located on the inside cover of a book, or inside a DVD case. Countless volunteer and staff hours have been spent outfitting the collection with this new computer chip.

New books and other materials will be appropriately tagged as they are purchased, Rafferty said.

Funding for the $120,000 self-checkout station was put together from three generous sources. The Librarian Paul Gailunas tests the new self-checkout machine that is now available for people to use.

lion's share of the cost — $90,000 — is being paid for out of the Cohasset Library Building Fund, which is money raised for the relocation of the library between 2001 and 2003. The funds were restricted for use on the library building, equipment and furnishings.

"The (RFID) technology wasn't well enough developed in 2002 (when the library moved)," said Library Trustee Sheila Evans. "This system takes library services to a whole other plateau."

In addition to the Library Building Fund, the library also received a $25,000 grant from its neighbors, the South Shore Music Circus and a $5,000 gift from the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Library service statistics at a glance (Fiscal 2009)

LIBRARY CORNER

Alzheimer's Talk is Oct. 22

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org

Alzheimer's Talk – A free DVD screening of 'How to Communicate with Someone Who Has Alzheimer's Disease or Related Dementia" will be presented at 6:30 p.m., on Thursday, Oct. 22. Kathleen Capuzzo, family caregiver specialist with South Shore Elder Services, will discuss communication techniques that can bring a higher quality of life to the person who has Alzheimer's and to the caregiver. The screening is free and all are welcome.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of "The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society" by Mary Ann Shaffer at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, Oct. 28. Free. All are welcome.

Knitting Group – The Library Knitting Group meets from 10 a.m. to noon, every Wednesday, in either the Meeting Room or Historical Room. Edna Finnegan from the Senior Center Knitting Group will be available to help. All are welcome, including people who want to learn to knit or those who have a knitting project they need help with. Free.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center is hosting an exhibit of oil paintings titled "Shimmering Color" by artist Patricia M. Gray at Paul Pratt Memorial Library through Oct. 30. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays; and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays.

FOR CHILDREN

Therapy Dog Reading Program – The Therapy Dog Reading Program has limited space available on Saturday, Oct. 10. The therapy dogs will be visiting the library with their handlers to listen to children read. Attendees can come with a favorite book or choose a book from the Children's Room. Therapy dogs and handlers have graduated from the Dog B.O.N.E.S. Therapy Dogs of Massachusetts program. For more information about therapy dogs go to the Web site at therapydog.info/. Call Mrs. Moody to set up a 15-minute appointment and be sure to bring a camera. Check out the photo gallery on the children's page of the library Web site at cohassetlibrry.org.

Catie Copely in Person – Join others in the Meeting Room at 3 p.m., on Saturday, Oct. 17, to meet Catie Copley, Deborah Kovacs and Jim. Catie is a black Labrador retriever who lives an unusual life as Canine Ambassador at the Fairmont Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston. Her job includes welcoming guests, taking them for walks and helping Jim at his job as the hotel's chief concierge. Deborah Kovacs, author of "Catie Copley" and "Catie Copley's Great Escape" will give an author talk on both books. Buttonwood Books will have copies of her books for purchase. No tickets or pre-registration required.

MamaSteph – Music for young children will be performed in the Meeting Room at 10:30 a.m., on Mondays, Sept. 19 and 26. Join others for music, movement and more with MamaSteph.

Story Time – will be held in the Children's Story Room at 10:30 a.m., on Tuesdays, Oct. 13, 20, and 26. All ages and communities welcome.

Story & Craft – Limited space is still available in the 1 to 1:45 p.m. session. Story & Craft is for Cohasset children ages 3 through 6 and is a four week commitment. Each week a theme is explored through literature and crafts. To register online log on to cohassetlibrary.org. Click on Calendar and then click on Oct. 8. Fill out the registration form using the child's name.

Treat's Pond 'license' inked

Access saga reaches a conclusion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"This license has all the rights we've been looking for."
— Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson

For the first time in the many meetings on Treat's Pond all parties left the Selectmen's Office with smiles on their faces.

It was a discussion that was decidedly brief and markedly not contentious — a departure from the several meetings on the issue over the past year and a half.

Since June 2008, the Board of Selectmen has been struggling to resolve the issue of access to the Treat's Pond drainage pipe and its outfall on Sandy Cove. The pond, located off of Atlantic Avenue near Whitehead Road, has been the subject of much discussion since the summer of 2007.

The access issue has been the key to the greater scheme of Treat's Pond and its associated Atlantic Avenue flooding because it allows the town a legal way to maintain the drainage pipe. Keeping the outfall clear is crucial to preventing and alleviating flooding in the area while a more comprehensive solution is developed, town official and area residents have said.

"This license has all the rights we've been looking for," said Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson. The five-year license agreement allows the town access to the drainage pipe for the purpose of "maintaining, inspecting, repairing and clearing out the currently existing outflow."

The town does not have the authority to expand the diameter or width of the existing drainage pipe or extend the drainage pipe.

The four-page license agreement is in effect for the next five years and is irrevocable, unless both parties sign written agreements to vacate. The agreement also stipulates the agreement will stand even if one of the involved properties changes hands.

The license agreement does not impact the Bigelow easement granted to the town in 1964 and is being provided to the town for $1.

The new access path to the beach crosses the properties of 83 Atlantic (Manchester), 85 Atlantic (Connolly), 87 Atlantic (Greaney), 89 Atlantic (jointly owned by the above), 91 Atlantic (Houghton), 95 Atlantic (Sceery) and 99 Atlantic (Hart).

In the event a repair or replacement of the pipe is needed due to a blockage that substantially limits water flow, the town must provide the property owners with a written engineering study documenting the blockage and provide the property owners advance written notice regarding the repair.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley expressed concern about this written notice stipulation, especially in the case of an emergency situation. John Connolly of 85 Atlantic Ave. and one of the involved property owners said access in an emergency situation shouldn't be a problem.

"I do not foresee a problem in the case of an emergency or safety," Connolly said.

Charlie Higginson of 159 Atlantic Ave. (Lothrop Lane) thanked the board for "finally resolving this issue."

Peter Whittemore of Elm Court, who has been present at all public hearings on the Treat's Pond issue, said the agreement was "slightly limiting," but wished the town had "free reign." But also said the agreement was "too good to pass up."

Priscilla Dewey Houghton of 91 Atlantic Ave. and one of the property owners whose property gets flooded during major storm events thanked all involved.

"So many people came together to work so hard for many points of view…there is nothing in this license that someone could disagree with," Houghton said.

The Board of Selectmen voted 4-0 to approve the license agreement (Selectman Ralph Dormitzer recused himself from the discussion and vote as he is a resident of Sandy Cove). After the vote was taken the dozen audience members clapped.

Treat's Pond access issues in brief

In 1964, the former property owner Elizabeth Bigelow granted the town an easement to Treat's Pond and its drainage pipe. In its simplest terms, the town was given the right and responsibility to maintain Treat's Pond as a marsh pond. The purpose for the easement granted to the town is vague and does not specifically grant rights to the Treat's Pond's associated drainage pipe.

For many years, the Department of Public Works has accessed Sandy Cove with a backhoe to clear the pipe on an occasional basis (usually during or after a significant rainfall) via Lothrop Lane, a paved private road. The clearing of the pipe allows the pond to drain and, according to residents, is effective in alleviating flooding.

However, the town does not have an easement to traverse Lothrop Lane to gain access to the Sandy Cove and the pipe's outfall. Given the pipe is located on the opposite end of the beach and the lack of easement, the residents of Lothrop Lane requested the town to enforce their legal easement at the opposite end of the beach.

Yet, the other side of the beach, which is accessed off a private driveway, is overgrown with vegetation and is accessible through a small walkway.

The town entered into negotiations with the six property owners to create a clarifying document that would allow the town to clear out the Treat's Pond drainage pipe in summer 2008.

Teachers' union contract ratified

"At the end of the day we have a very positive contract and the teachers recognized the town of Cohasset's and school's financial situation."
— Adrienne MacCarthy, School Committee

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy announced "big news" for the school district on Wednesday night: the School Committee and the Teachers' union had ratified a new three-year contract. The former contract expired in June.

"At the end of the day we have a very positive contract and the teachers recognized the town of Cohasset's and school's financial situation," said MacCarthy.

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz, who was on the sub-committee involved in the union negotiations, said the teachers met the schools "halfway.

"(The contract) allows us to be in a situation where we don't lose any teachers…and gives modest improvements to compensation over the next few years," Slanetz said.

Salaries account for the vast majority of the school's budget. "We are our people and what goes on in our classrooms is central to our mission," Slanetz said.

The new contract is currently being finalized and printed and will be available to the public within two weeks, MacCarthy said. The Mariner will follow up with a more detailed account of the new contract in the coming weeks.

A nice tie

Skippers rebound from tough loss with solid tie

Boys' Soccer

The Cohasset boys soccer team didn't have it easy this week.

After beating Abington 3-0 last Thursday to improve an unbeaten streak to six games, the Skippers had to face two of the best teams in the area this week, with games at Harwich and a home game against Norwell.

Both teams had beaten Cohasset earlier in the season, with Norwell scoring three goals in a 3-2 Cohasset loss. That was the most goals Cohasset has allowed in a game this season.

Harwich, meanwhile, had beaten Cohasset 1-0.

The Skippers held tough, losing a heartbreaking 1-0 decision to Harwich on Monday and tying Norwell 0-0 on Wednesday.

"Those two teams are the best in our league," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "Harwich is undefeated and Norwell's only loss was 1-0 to Harwich. Today we tied Norwell. I'm proud of the kids."

Willis was especially proud of the way his squad didn't lose focus after losing center defensive back Travers Craven to a broken arm, and the way his Skippers played Norwell right after the Harwich loss.

"We did fantastic," Willis said after the Norwell game. "To come back from a disappointing loss to defend as well as we did today was great. This game was played mostly in the middle of the field. Both goalies played great, made some saves, although I'm not sure if there were any real good scoring chances."

At Harwich, Cohasset lost in the final two minutes.

"It was really an up and down game," Willis said of Harwich. "There were a lot of chances on both sides. They got a tough corner in the last two minutes, we cleared the ball. It hit their player, bounced around and they scored. It was a tough way to end it."

Drew Cobin had a couple of solid shots and Jonah Adkins controlled the middle of the field.

"Our defenders were huge the whole game," Willis said. "It was just unfortunate the way it ended.

The close game did however, give Cohasset a confidence boost that carried into Norwell, espe-

What more can be said about Valentine's month other than awesome. In three September games, Valentine ran for 606 yards and five touchdowns against higher-division schools to help lead Cohasset to a 3-0 month. He added 165 yards and a touchdown in a 38-20 win over Cardinal Spellman in the first game of October that put the Skippers at 4-0 to open the season..

Riding the line

Valentine, Cavanaro enjoying premium protection

By Dick Trust
CORRESPONDENT

Football

Have you heard the line about the unbeaten Cohasset High School football team?

It goes something like this:

Sam Leahy, Will Lynner, Dan Sullivan, Eric Wasel and Thomas Barrett.

They're the Front Five, all starting members of the offensive line that protects junior quarterback Jeff Cavanaro and his weapons of mass production – most prominently among them senior tailback Dana Valentine.

"Every game they do a great job for me with an all-around effort," said Valentine, whose 100 carries for 849 yards and eight touchdowns this season speak to the value of the young men in the trenches and the Skippers' 4-0 record. "They work hard during the week and get it done every Friday.

They haven't blown too many assignments.

"Jeff (Cavanaro, junior quarterback) and T-Bone (junior fullback Thomas Flibotte) take a lot of pressure off me, too. T-Bone's a good running back. He's going to be nasty next year. Jeff is a really good quarterback. The whole offense overall does a great job. It's not any one particular person. We all help each other out. It makes everyone else's job easier. Every day in practice we work as a unit and we know everyone else so well that we pretty much know what everybody's going to do (in games)."

Leahy is a junior right tackle, Lynner a senior captain and right guard, Sullivan a senior center, Wasel a junior left guard and Barrett a senior left tackle.

Sophomore Robbie Mahoney fills in at any of the guard or tackle positions when someone needs a break.

Cohasset tends toward a one-tight end formation, which creates even more blocking when passing is not signaled. Prior to his injury against Hingham on Sept. 18, junior John Maher was the starting tight end. He might be back Friday, fitted with a knee brace, when the Skippers host Carver in South Shore League action at 7:30 p.m. When Maher wasn't available, Cohasset rotated junior Jack Carrier and senior Kevin O'Connell.

Among the offensive linemen, only Lynner plays both ways (tackle on defense). The other four are offense only, "which I think is a big reason for so much of our success," head coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Four out of the five linemen on offense and defense go only one way, so Skippers host Crusaders at 7:30 p.m.

The Cohasset football team will host Carver tonight with a 7:30 p.m. start at Alumni Field.

The Skippers put their 4-0 record on the line against an 0-4 squad that has been improving all season.

In recent games they hung tough against Abington, a 29-15 loss, and also battled well against Division 3 Super Bowl champion Arlington Catholic (14-0 loss).

Carver dropped a 32-0 decision at Scituate in the season-opener in a game that was just 6-0 at the half, and then fell 27-21 to Pembroke.

It wasn't exactly what anybody wanted, but both sides came away from Friday's 0-0 field hockey game between Cohasset and Hingham with at least some positive feelings.

Field Hockey

For Cohasset, there was a sense of relief, after playing much of the game in their defensive zone.

For Hingham (4-2-2), there was a feeling of a good game against a good opponent, and a bit of relief that Cohasset didn't score in the last two minutes of the game when it put on some serious pressure.

"We've been playing really well, but we haven't been able to get our scoring together," said Cohasset sophomore Caitlin cially on the defensive end.

"We've stuck together and worked hard," Willis said. "And it doesn't hurt to have a game-changer in net. Will Wise has been outstanding. Having him there gives us the confidence to take some chances."

After allowing seven goals in their first three games, Cohasset has only allowed two in their last eight, giving the Skippers a 5-1-2 record in that span. Overall the Skippers are 5-4-2.

Cohasset is also inching closer to the MIAA Tournament.

"We have to win three of our last seven games," Willis said. "We need six more points. I'd rather get there with wins than ties. I'd like to see us in some offensive rhythm."

In the a 3-0 win over Abington, Andrew Littauer scored his third goal of the season and Anders Goetz and Nick Brown chipped in as well.

Will Wise continued his string of brilliance, notching his fifth shutout in nine games.

Wise has allowed just two goals in the past eight games.

Willis credits balance and his keeper for the latest success.

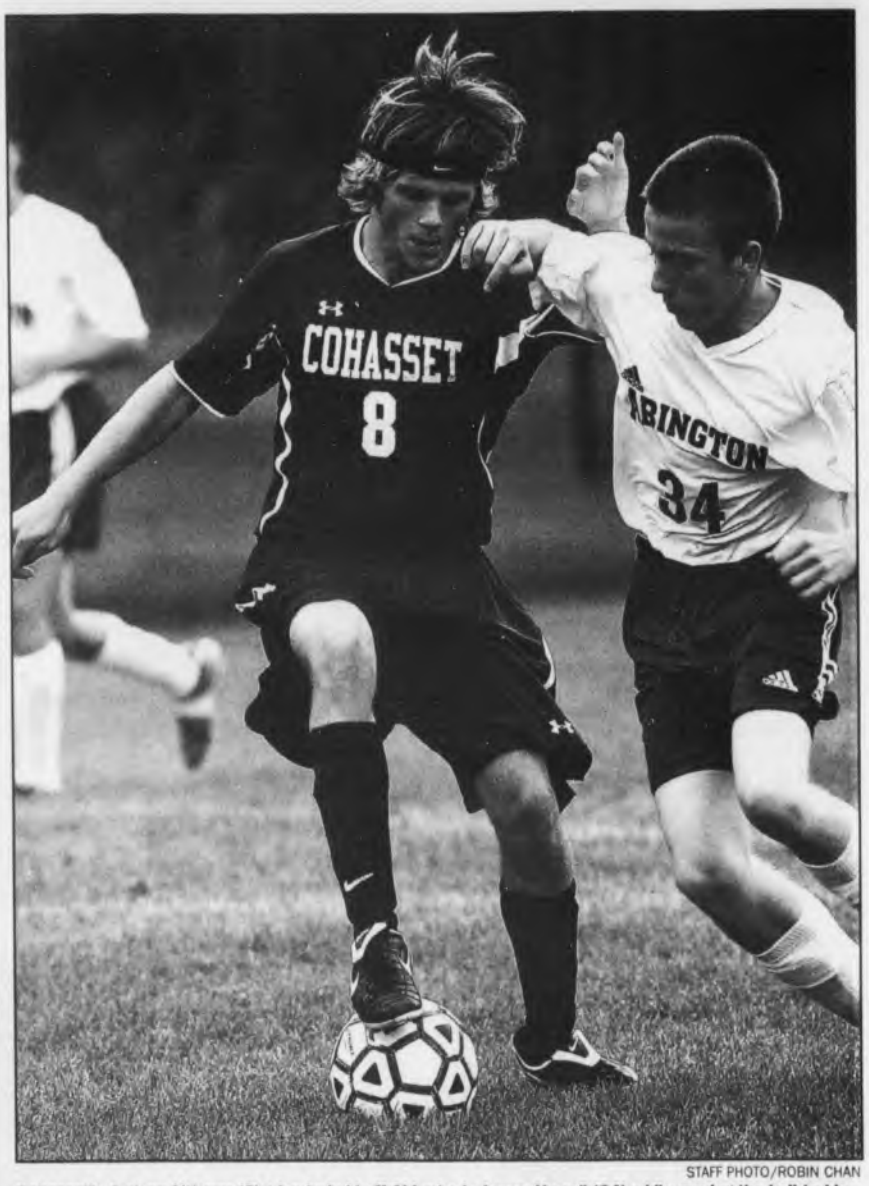
"At the halfway point we're pretty balanced," he said. "We have 10 different players with points and seven with goals. We've spread it around. The defense has also come around. They've done well, but Will has been amazing. It's really been a combined effort."

Cohasset has a few days off before traveling to East Bridgewater on Tuesday for a 3:30 game. They'll host Carver under the lights on Thursday at 7 p.m. and host a rematch with Hull Oct. 19 at 6 p.m.

Willis likes the way the schedule shapes up down the stretch.

"We finally get to play at home," he said. "We have five of our last seven games at home, three at night. We have a Monday night rematch with Hull. We tied them earlier. We also have Cape Cod Academy and we have a Friday night game on the turf with Scituate for Senior Night. It's going to be fun."

In the short term though, Willis is working to make sure the Skippers are ready for East Bridgewater.



"It's always tough playing there," he said. "But you have to play with what you've got. Their field is smaller than ours, so we have to adjust. We'll be fine."

On the girls side, Cohasset upped their record to 6-2 with a 4-1 win over Harwich on Monday.

Caroline Fein had a pair of goals for Cohasset.

Earlier, the girls beat Abington 6-1 last Thursday.

Last Week's Game

Cohasset 38, Cardinal Spellman 20

The Skippers (4-0) raced out to a 24-0 first-half lead and cruised home behind strong work from Dana Valentine (21 carries for 165 yards and a TD) and quarterback Jeff Cavanaro (13 of 20 passing, two TDs, plus a rushing score).

"The kids played well," Cohasset coach Peter Afanasiw said. "Overall, the offense was unbelievable. The defense has some things to work on, but it's coming along."

Spellman's Blaise Branch scored on a 3-yard run in the second quarter. Running back Bob Nadell broke a long 76-yard scoring run in the third to cut Cohasset's lead to 24-12.

Spellman quarterback Zac Cooney connected with Mike Marshall for a 62-yard score, but Cohasset scored twice more in the fourth quarter to put the game out of reach for the Cardinals (1-3).

Riding the line

they're that much more rested in the second half, when fatigue starts to set in. We don't have to worry about that as much, which I think has paid off tremendously. You're on the field less, which means less chance of an injury, too."

Afanasiw is a fan of the job Flibotte has been doing.

"Dana Valentine is getting 20, 25 carries a game," the coach noted. "Thomas gets three or four. On those other 20, 25 plays, he's another lineman blocking for Dana and he's been doing a great job with that. And he's an explosive runner. If we get him the ball, get him the space, he can do some very good things.

"Thomas is going to be next year's tailback, so he's learning a lot from Dana. It's good that he's getting a chance to block for Dana because now he's going to get a feel for what both positions are all about."

A 5-11, 210-pounder, Valentine in his two-plus varsity seasons has rushed 273 times for 1,904 yards and 21 touchdowns. Although he missed two games to injury last year, he still garnered 908 yards and 10 TD's on 145 carries. Splitting his sophomore season between linebacker and running back, Valentine carried 28 times for 147 yards and three touchdowns.

Afanasiw said "there isn't a more complete back on the South Shore" than Valentine. "There might be kids who are faster than him, or bigger and stronger than him. But when you put the whole package together – somebody who can run with power, someone who has moves with vision, can catch the ball, knows how to set up blocks – he is a very, very well polished running back. I don't see anybody around here as good as him in an overall sense."

If Valentine is Cohasset's meal ticket, then the offensive line is its bread and butter.

Afanasiw lauded offensive coordinator Tom Ventresca for shaping the line.

"Tom has done a wonderful job," Afanasiw said. "The schemes he comes up with for each of these kids is unbelievable. It's very user friendly for them and they're able to take that and do a lot of good work during the week. The whole unit works as a cohesive group. The linemen know they've got good backs behind them; the backs know they've got a good line in front of them. It's a symbiotic relationship and it starts with the coaching and it goes right down through the players and their execution.

"And with each game that passes, they have a strong, developing sense of confidence in their ability to move the football, no matter who the opponent is. In no way, shape or form is it any kind of arrogance. They just feel good about the fact that they know their job, they know what they're supposed to do and they're capable of carrying it out."

The pride in what the line accomplishes in the trenches is evident.

"It's really exciting to see what the total offense gets," Lynner said. "You feel very good about yourself that you're part of an offense that can put up more than 200 rushing yards per game and put up points. You have fun with your teammates around you because you're successful and they're successful. You just have a good time."

While the players in the perceived "glamour" positions of quarterback, running back and wide receiver reap a lot of media attention, the grunt work of the linemen does not go unnoticed by those who appreciate their efforts. They are as skilled in what they do as those who fill the so-called "skilled" positions.

"It all starts with the O line," Lynner said, "(but) it's not like we're working any harder than anyone else. We all do the same amount of work to score and be successful."

Cohasset has scored 133 points in four games (an average of 33.25 per outing), beating Quincy, 39-0; Hingham, 34-21; Scituate, 22-7, and Cardinal Spellman, 38-20.

"It's exciting that our offense is putting up big numbers," Sullivan said. "The offensive line is sort of the catalystic jump start to everything going."

His duties as center of the line?

"Block well, make running lanes, protect the quarterback and give him time to throw," Sullivan said. "We've been able to execute well. As Dana said, we haven't been blowing many assignments. We've been holding our own out there and giving him lanes to run."

Barrett said he can usually tell by mid-game how well he and his linemates are faring. And if any adjustments are needed to counter what the defense presents, he said, "You kind of have to scramble a little bit, but we usually get it down pretty quickly."

Wasel can live with the fact that the press, and often the fans, don't always commend a lineman's contribution.

"You don't really get credit from the fans per se. I don't know how many people go up to me and say, 'Are you on varsity?' And I'll say, 'Yes, actually I am.' Then they'll say, 'What position?' 'Offensive lineman.' 'Oh, OK, never mind,' and they walk away."

Wasel experiences a high level of excitement when he knows the line has done its job.

"Whenever you see Dana, or T-Bone or Cavs (Cavanaro) or anybody run into the end zone," he said, "you can't describe how satisfying it is. It's awesome."

Leahy knows his place in line.

"It's important that we hold our blocks and know our assignments," he said, "because Dana doesn't really get anywhere without us in front of him. He has a lot of natural talent, but it only takes him so far. If the O line's not blocking, it's not going to help our offense out too much."

Leahy is serious about his performance, but he's the one player above all who tries to keep his mates loose with his ever active sense of humor.

"I try to. I get yelled at a lot, though," he said. "We joke around a lot, but sometimes I don't know when to stop joking. Anything that I can get a good laugh out of I'll probably do."

No one is laughing at what Cohasset is doing on the football field.

Seriously.

South Coastal League Hockey League enjoying new shootouts

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The South Coastal Men's Hockey League added a shootout to its Classic Division to attempt to determine tied games this year and the Bruins in their first five games have been involved in three shootouts already.

The Bruins won their first shootout and tied their second both against the Blackhawks, but this past Sunday they lost their first shootout to the Red Wings, 1-0 and lost the game by a 3-2 score.

Scituate's Guy Sylvester and John Tracy of Hanover scored the goals for the Bruins.

In the other Classics Division game the Maple Leafs got a goal each from Dave Evans of Marshfield, Jeff Gauthier, Pembroke's Mike Bartlett and Dave Salvaggio in their 4-1 win over the Blackhawks.

Marshfield's Sean Parrell scored three goals to lead the Roadrunners to their first win of the season in the Masters Division by a 7-6 score of the defending champion Vipers. Brian Kennedy also of Marshfield, Bob Ward, Dave Laine and Ken Sweezey added a goal each for the Roadrunners.

Bob Sideropoulos had two goals and Scott Chruchill had a goal and two assists for the Vipers. Tim Burchill of Marshfield, Hanover's Peter Fallon and Steve DiMaio of Pembroke added a goal each for the Vipers.

Hanover's Jeff Ray, Mark Paradise of Scituate, Joe McCafferty and Marshfield's John Zimmer scored a goal each as the Grizzlies defeated the Wolves in a Masters Div. game.

Jim Savage had a goal and assist, Bob McCabe of Pembroke and Drew Fitzgerald added a goal each for the Wolves.

The Thunder got two goals and two assists from Tom Maguire in their 8-4 Masters Div. win over the Aeros. Hanover's Mike Maguire had two goals, Mike Joy and Paul Lafond both also of Hanover, Keith Wilson and Vin Joyce had a goal each for the Thunder.

Marshfield's Tom Godfrey led the Aeros with two goals, Josh Worrall of Pembroke and Kevin Keane added a goal each.

The Legends Division was highlighted by the goaltending of the Whalers Dan Nason, who shut out the Saints in their 4-0 win.

Scituate's Skip Tufts led the Whalers offense with a goal and two assists. Richard Keyes, Bill McMahon of Scituate and Paul Flagg added a goal each for the Whalers.

The Legends Div. champion Toros got goals from Ray Degaust, Norwell's Digger Hurley and Paul Brinkman in their 3-3 tie with the Crusaders.

Richard Buckley of Holbrook scored two goals and assisted on another and Rocco Carlino scored for the Crusaders.

The Sharks Jay Fahey scored two goals and Norwell's Dana Dolabany added another in their 3-2 Legends Div. win over the Stingers.

John Scag and Dave Christensen of Pembroke scored a goal apiece for the Stingers.

Skippers qualify, lead South Shore League

FROM GOLF, PAGE 17

Golf Course.

The wins improved the Skippers' record to 8-2, good enough to qualify for the MIAA team tournament (after the Abington win), and gave them sole possession of first place in the South Shore League.

Abington and Cohasset came into their match with 6-2 records, while Abington held the advantage with an earlier win over Cohasset.

Ian Quinlan had an outstanding day with a one-over 37 on the par-36 course in that one.

Chase Stebbins wasn't far behind, shooting a 40 to win his match in the match-play format.

David Hill (42), Morgan Grasz, Robbie Hill and Harry Sipolla were also winners on Thursday.

"That was a big win," coach Torin Sweeney said. "We lost to Abington at their course. We had to beat them to be able to win the league. We're also in the tournament. That's going to be exciting to take the whole team."

In the Harwich victory, Quinlan shot a 40 on the par-36 course, while Stebbins and Robbie Hill both shot 41.

In other recent action, Cohasset beat Mashpee on the road behind Stebbins and Grasz, who both shot four-over to win their matches.

In that match, Stebbins was playing in the No. 2 slot and Grasz was at No. 5.

Grasz has been moved into the No. 4 slot recently due to his strong play.

Quinlan, who has been excellent at No. 1, shot a 41 at Mashpee for a victory.

David Hill and Sipolla were also on the winning end at Mashpee.

That win improved the Skippers to 5-2.

Before that, Cohasset tied for the league lead with a 32-22 win over Norwell.

Grasz led the charge with a 42, while Quinlan and David Hill both notched 42's in that win.

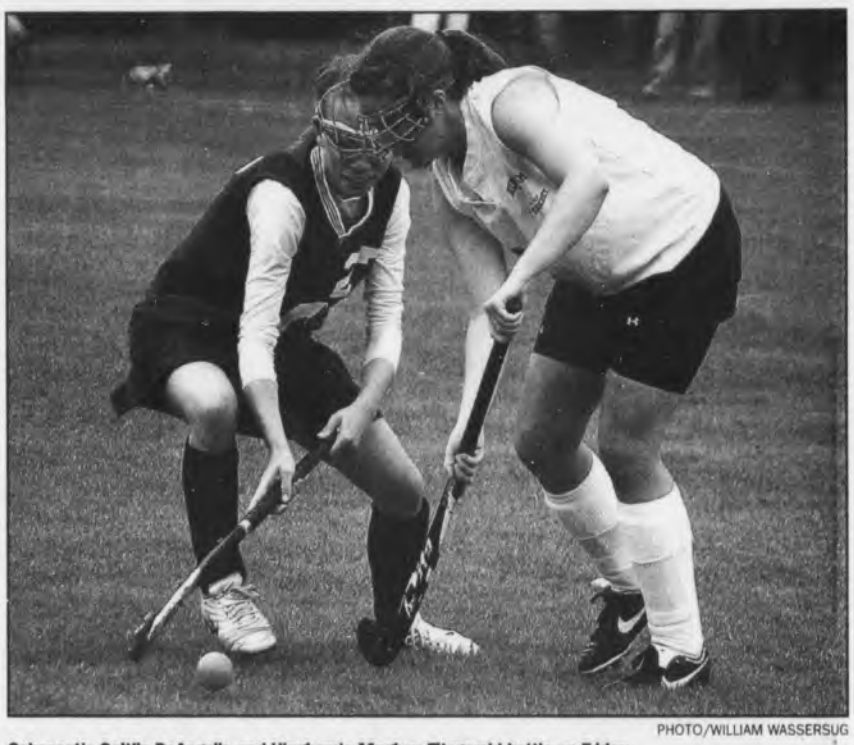
Stebbins and Sebastian Braga also won.

While Cohasset is on a roll, Sweeney knows nothing has been won yet.

"I'm still cautious. We have three league matches left," he said before the Harwich trip. "Monday will be the most challenging at Harwich. They're 4-4, but they play their course pretty well. They are a formidable opponent, and it also isn't easy to take that long bus ride and tee off."

There is also a league matche with East Bridgewater.

Carver was yesterday and E.B. is Oct. 22.



"If we win out, we win the league," Sweeney said. "We've beaten both of those teams, but golf is a funny game. Every match is different."

Sweeney said the team has talked about not looking too far ahead.

"On the bus to Mashpee we talked about taking one match at a time," he said. "They're doing a good job with it."

If there's been a reason for success so far, Sweeney feels it's depth.

"We have four seniors, Quinlan, Stebbins, Sipolla and Braga," he said. "Quinlan and Stebbins are at the top and we rotate the five and six spots between Sipolla, Braga and Grasz. Because Grasz has been playing so well, we've moved him to No. 4 recently. The kids are very consistent. They know how to stay in the moment and take it one match at a time."

Cohasset's Caitlin DeAngelis and Hingham's Meghan Fitzgerald battle on Friday.

Stickers battle to scoreless tie

FROM HOCKEY, PAGE 17

DeAngelis. "We're passing well and playing well. But once we're in the circle we're not getting it in."

Fortunately for Cohasset (4-2-3), the defense has been excellent and goalie Whitney Jaffe has been practically untouchable.

"Whitney Jaffe has been the best," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliano said. "She's only allowed three goals in eight games. Overall the team has been playing well, with a lot of intensity. Scoring would be nice, though."

The defense Giuliano was speaking of was Emily Toomey, Lucy Noble and Sarah Mavilia, who have all played well.

"Emily is a terrific defenseman," Giuliano said. "The defense really has been a big part of Whitney's success. Today they really stepped up when it counted. They had some big hits out."

Giuliano said Cohasset had to battle through a tough week.

"We had three games this week, including a back-to-back," she said. "That was difficult. The girls have played heroically."

Giuliano said she expects the offense to click at some point.

"We're working on getting it in goal," she said. "We've had chances. Against East Bridgewater we had nine corners and didn't score. I thought we outplayed them. Against Norwell we just couldn't get it in. You can't win if you can't score."

Giuliano had praise for Hingham.

"Hingham is a good team and they're up a league," she said. "So a tie is a measure of success."

On the Hingham side, they were impressed with Cohasset.

"We really wanted to win," Hingham senior captain Sarah Burke said. "But this was a good tie. They're a good team. It almost feels like a win. We played well and just didn't score. Sometimes you tie and you get down on yourselves. That wasn't what it was like today. It almost felt like we were winning."

Art Center joins with garden clubs for Luncheon and Wine Tasting

As part of the national juried exhibition "Color Matters," South Shore Art Center will present its own interpretation of the MFA's Art in Bloom event, Friday through Sunday, Oct. 16 through 18. Ten area garden club designers will create floral arrangements to complement selected artwork in the exhibition. The arrangements will debut at Color Blooms, a luncheon on Friday, Oct. 16 at 11:30 a.m., featuring a brief presentation titled "Color Speaks: Strategies for Looking at Art," by the Art Center's director of community programs Heather Collins.

Steven Marsh of Marsh's Wine & Spirits and wine expert Ian Davies will present wines from Australia, New Zealand, Sonoma and Napa Valleys on Saturday evening, Oct. 17.

"It's also a wonderful opportunity to share the artistic talents of floral designers with the community."

— Jennifer Willms, SSAC board president

Chef Robin King also will be on hand with food tastings previewing his Oro restaurant, opening soon in Scituate Harbor. A silent auction will feature food and wines as well as small paintings by South Shore Art Center artists.

"This is the first time the Art Center has partnered with the area garden clubs and we are thrilled to have their interpretations of our exhibition," said Jennifer Willms, SSAC board president. "It's also a wonderful opportunity to share the artistic talents of floral designers with the community."

South Shore Art Center galleries will be open Saturday, Oct. 17, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, Oct. 18, from noon to 4 p.m., in addition to the special event times. All proceeds will support the Art Center's exhibition and education programs.

Reservations for the luncheon and wine tasting are available by calling the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or online at ssac.org. South Shore Art Center is at 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

Head of the Weir Race set for Oct. 31

He is the author of nine books, including "Mountains Beyond Mountains," "House," and "The Soul of a New Machine."

Tracy Kidder is winner of a Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Award and the Robert F. Kennedy Award. He is the author of nine books, including "Mountains Beyond Mountains," "House," and "The Soul of a New Machine." He is currently on a book tour promoting his most recent book, "Strength in What Remains," which was published in August 2009 to great acclaim. Kidder graduated from Harvard, received an MFA from the University of Iowa, and lives in Massachusetts and Maine.

Please join the Directors of the Cohasset Library Trust, the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, the Friends of the Cohasset Library and the Event Committee for this very special Evening with Tracy Kidder. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at Buttonwood Book Store and Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Residents running in the race against cancer

As members of the Dana-Farber team, they have committed to raising at least $500 for cancer care and research for both children and adults at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its fundraising arm, the Jimmy Fund.

Runners Michelle Buckley, Victoria Connolly, Caroline Henderson, Susan Keene from Cohasset will run the ninth annual BAA Half Marathon, presented by Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Jimmy Fund, as members of the official Dana-Farber team in the Running the Race Against Cancer program on Oct. 11.

As members of the Dana-Farber team, they have committed to raising at least $500 for cancer care and research for both children and adults at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its fundraising arm, the Jimmy Fund. The team goal is to raise $360,000.

"Dana-Farber runners in the BAA Half Marathon are challenging themselves while helping those facing a much bigger challenge – fighting cancer," said Jack Fultz, the 1976 Boston Marathon winner who designs the training program for the Dana-Farber team.

The 13.1-mile rolling course combines a looped and out-and-back route, beginning and ending on Park Drive near the Boston Park and Recreation's Rose Garden in the Back Bay Fens neighborhood of Boston. The event attracts a field of 5,000 runners including world-class athletes.

The BAA Half Marathon is one of three annual events that connect the Boston Athletic Association and Dana-Farber. Other events include the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk in September, and Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge in the Boston Marathon in April.

To support a Cohasset resident running in the BAA Half Marathon, go to the Web site at RunDanaFarber.org/BAAHalf. People who have registered to run the BAA Half Marathon and would like to join the Dana-Farber team, can call the Dana-Farber Marathon and Running Programs office at 617-632-1970 or 800-551-7036, or send an e-mail to dfrunners@dfci.harvard.edu.

Homecoming week is fast approaching!

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Also on Wednesday, the student council will be selling ice cream for $2. Not just plain ice cream, I'm talking hot fudge, whipped cream, and sprinkles.

Throughout this shortened week, there has been a lot of behind the scenes work going on and its all finally paying off. With spirit week and Homecoming quickly approaching, within the Cohasset High School building, I a building anticipation to the week of the year that offers the most fun. Hey guess what? All the fun for next week is set in stone. Hey guess who gets to about all the fun that is going down at CHS next week? YOU!

Sadly, Monday is Columbus Day so there is no school, but students are still encouraged to dress up like Christopher Columbus and his merry sailors while sitting in their comfortable homes. Now for dressing up in school, here are the days:

- Tuesday: Farmer Day
- Wednesday: Formal Day
- Thursday: Clash Day
- Friday: Blue & White Day

Hold you horses though, that's not all. Also on Wednesday, the student council will be selling ice cream for $2. Not just plain ice cream, I'm talking hot fudge, whipped cream, and sprinkles. You know…the good stuff. And no, we are not just fattening the kids up; we are raising money to make the festivities during the week the best they can be. Therefore, it's very important you buy our ice cream. You don't even have to finish the worst part of dinner to get it, you just walk up to a table! Equally important is the amount of fan support we can give during the week. On Thursday, Homecoming sports begin as some good old-fashioned Homecoming soccer will take place on the turf. Sports will be kicked off on Friday by the wooden ball whacking Field Hockey team. Then, at 6 p.m. on Friday, the football team will face off against league opponent, Mashpee. Be loud!

I would have included the pep rally and homecoming dance in that last paragraph but they are gonna be so fun that those two get their own paragraphs. Let's start off with the pep rally. After lacking a certain overtone of "fun", a new element of awesomeness has been added to this pep rally. Team captains will be rallying the crowd's support by delivering some Braveheart-like speeches. The cheerleaders will be there doing their "thang" and the pep band will be rockin' out under the lead of Miss Moriarty. That's all old news though, the new news is…..A SECRET! It's new, its fun, its spectacularly hilarious, and an anticipation builder. That's all I will say for now.

Glo Jam! Is that a typo? Nope. That's just the student council letting their funky and hip side out. With so much fun, who needs a "w" anyways? As you may have figured out by now, the Homecoming dance is called Glo Jam and everything their will be glowing, hence the name. Last year's Homecoming dance planners tried something like it, but this year's student council brought it to a whole new level…I'd say about 20 levels up from last year's. With everyone wearing white, a black light every 20 feet, glowing paint, glowing bracelets, and a strobe light this WILL be the best Homecoming dance in CHS history. How much to get into the superb party? Only $10 if you buy the tickets ahead of time, or $15 at the door. Do kids read this article? I'm not sure about that but I know parents do. So I'm talking to you Mr. or Mrs. _____, make sure your kids go to Glo Jam. Everyone should be there! BUY! BUY! BUY!

Oh man, I forgot to talk about Life at CHS this week. Well not a lot happened (unless you are like my alter-ego Chicken ParmeSEAN), as we only had a 4-day week. Well, the kids only had a 4-day week while the teachers have a 5-day week. With that being said, I leave you with a "HAHA" as I will be sleeping in till noon on Friday while the teachers will be talking about me and the other students. It's important to cherish these moments.

On that note: peace out, my readers.

Sean MacCarthy wants to stress the importance of everyone going to Glo Jam.

HAPPENINGS

'South Shore and the Civil War'

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its fall dinner and annual meeting on Sunday, Oct. 25, at Atlantica Restaurant. The guest speaker for the evening is Patrick Browne who will be talking about the "South Shore and the Civil War." He will recount stories from this time with particular emphasis on the men who's bravery and deeds earned them the Medal of Honor. Mr. Browne received a bachelor of arts degree in English and a masters degree in history from the University of Massachusetts and has been executive director of the Duxbury Rural and Historical Society since 1998. He is the author of several books and has taken part in Civil War reenactments here in Massachusetts.

The evening will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a cash bar, followed by dinner at 6 p.m. The cost is $31 for Historical Society members and $36 for non-members. The menu includes clam chowder, rice pilaf, seasonal fresh vegetables and a choice of cranberry and sage stuffed chicken or grilled pork with and apple and raisin glaze. Dessert is warm apple crisp and vanilla ice cream.

Call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 to secure your reservation and make your choice of entrée by Friday, Oct. 16. Checks can be mailed to the Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Discover the Woods at Holly Hill Farm

People are invited to learn about the woods at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset at the second Discover the Woods Day from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Sunday, Oct. 18. Come celebrate the trails and paths, wildlife and fauna in Holly Hill Farm's 120-plus acres of woods at 236 Jerusalem Road.

There will be a 5K cross-country run, a 1K fun run/walk, nature games and quests for families. There will also be short walks and long hikes, as well as a guided, informational walk led by Norwell naturalist Steve Ivas. Cost is $20 per family for FHHF members, $25 for non-members. Register by October 12 and get a free T-shirt.

For more information, call Jon Belber at 781-383-6565 or email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com.

Haunted Happenings take place Oct. 17

Haunted Happenings in Cohasset takes place Saturday, Oct. 17, to benefit The Cohasset Historical Society.

The price of the one-day long ticket is $15 for adults and $8 for students and will get you into all of the events.

Schedule of events

10 a.m. Take a walking history tour of Cohasset's Historical Central Cemetery and reconnect with those buried within.

11:30 a.m. Cohasset Town Historian David Wadsworth presents the history of Cohasset Town Hall and its history with ghosts.

1 to 4 p.m. Get a personalized psychic reading by renowned psychic Dee White Dove at the Paul Pratt Building.

12:30 to 4 p.m. Talk a guided tour of haunted Cohasset Town Hall and see the historic basement jail cells…or participate in a quiet tour to determine for yourself whether you can see one of the three ghosts that reside there.

2 to 4 p.m. Travel back through time to discover past lives in a session in past life regression with time traveler Katherine McGlynn in the Paul Pratt Building.

6 to 8 p.m. Visit the "haunted" Captain John Wilson House resplendent in festive décor. Interact with psychic medium Dee White Dove as she opens the door between worlds to connect with Cohasset's spirit world.

6 to 8 p.m. Participate in a live paranormal investigation of the Maritime Museum as Nightfall Paranormal hopes to connect with the ghost of Samuel Bates, documented by world-renowned parapsychologist Dr. Hans Holzer in 1960.

8 p.m. Wrap up the evening sharing stories of Cohasset' spirited past and local ghosts at the Paul Pratt Building. Refreshments served.

COMPASS Program Director Erick Amero sprinkles some ginger ale onto the bow of America II during a toast to the large cardboard ship constructed by kids in the program.

COMPASS Program sets sail!

This school based enrichment program provides quality care and engaging activities for Cohasset students, grades K through five. Each month focuses on specific themes of study — incorporating arts, music, kinesthetic activities, exploration, science and engineering.

The program's goals are to support the academic and social efforts of the Osgood and Deer Hill schools and enrich student's needs and interests for learning.

During the month of October, COMPASS participants study the oceans on their newly created sailboat "America II" While exploring the oceans, students learn about sea shanties, the history of whaling, sea creatures, knots and sewing. As part of this theme, students will also learn about sea turtles and what they can do to help these endangered animals.

To find out more about the COMPASS program, please visit its website, available on the Joseph Osgood School site or contact Erick Amero at 781-383-8223 or email at eamero@cohassetk12.org

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
OCT. 19, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You could be caught in a torrent of advice from well-meaning friends and colleagues this week. But remember, Lamb, you are at your best when you are your own inimitable self.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect strong efforts to get you to accept things as they are and not question them. But ignore all that and continue your inquiries until you're sure you have all the answers you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Heavier than usual family and workplace duties compete for your time this week. Try to strike a balance so that you're not overwhelmed by either. Pressures ease by week's end.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's a good time for the Moon Child to show off your uniquely inspired approach to the culinary skills — especially if they're directed toward impressing someone special.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might be happy about the re-emergence of a long-deferred deal. But don't pounce on it quite yet. Time can change things. Be sure the values you looked for before are still there.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Try to rein in your super-critical attitude, even if things aren't being done quite as you would prefer. Remember: What you say now could create an awkward situation later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you can expect on-the-job cooperation from most of your colleagues this week, some people might insist on knowing more about your plans before they can accept them.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creating another way to do things is commendable. But you could find some resistance this week from folks who would rather stick with the tried-and-true than try something new.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You usually can keep your aim focused on your goal. But you might need to make adjustments to cope with unsteadiness factors that could arise over the course of the week.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) News arrives about a projected move. Be prepared to deal with a series of possible shifts, including starting and finishing times, and how much the budget will actually cover.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new relationship needs time to develop. Let things flow naturally. It could be a different story with a workplace situation, which might require faster and more focused attention.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Accept a compliment without trying to troll for any hidden reason beyond what was said. After all, don't you deserve to be praised every now and then? Of course you do.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: Welcome to St. Stephen's Church!

"There is nothing sadder than a Christian fellowship where every song must be victory, every prayer full of faith, every member always smiling and joyful. It is an exhausting pretense to keep up for long, and it condemns those who cannot hide from their fears to further pain of failure and inadequacy. It is actually dishonest. It means that we can never offer our tears as well as our smiles, our questions as well as our certainties, our wounds as well as our victories. It means that we are always keeping Christ out of the very places in our lives where we need him most – the places of our darkness, uncertainties, and fears." – David Runcorn

Twain remains relevant

Holbrook keeps one-man show fresh

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Hal Holbrook was just 29 years old when he first played Mark Twain in 1954. Two years later, an appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" as Twain provided the young actor his first national exposure. Since then – with stops along the way to pick up a 1966 Tony Award for Best Actor for "Mark Twain Tonight!," three Emmy Awards for his television work, and a 2008 Academy Award nomination for Best Supporting Actor in "In the Wild" – Holbrook has given well over 2,000 performances in the one-man show, which he brings to Veterans Memorial Auditorium in Providence, R.I., on Saturday.

He may have been touring with "Mark Twain Tonight!" some part of each of the last 55 years, but Holbrook has managed to keep it interesting by editing and changing the material to fit the times. A prolific writer, Twain -- pen name of the author and humorist Samuel Longhorne Clemens (1835–1910) – gave Holbrook much to work with including newspaper and magazine articles, letters, and novels like "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" and "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer."

The Ohio-born Holbrook spent some of his own childhood in South Weymouth. On the telephone last week from a Worcester tour stop, the 84-year-old discussed everything from his 25-year marriage to actress Dixie Carter to his even longer relationship with Mark Twain.

Town Commons: What has changed over the years about your approach to the character of Mark Twain?

Hal Holbrook: It's hard to define the acting alterations, because many of them have just happened naturally with age. You can let go of some things as you get older, especially when you're playing an older character. I didn't know all that much about Mark Twain when I started to do him. It seems odd now, but the surprising thing is that I just backed into all this. In the very beginning, I was just playing an old man. As the idea for a fully developed one-man show evolved, however, I knew I had to do some serious work to find out who this man was and get some insights into his character.

Hal Holbrook will appear in "Mark Twain Tonight!" at the Veterans Memorial Auditorium Arts and Cultural Center at One Avenue of the Arts in Providence, R.I., on Oct. 10.

TC: How do you keep the show fresh?

HH: The meat and potatoes of what Twain thought of us as people and what he thought of society still applies today. As the years have gone by, I have been astounded as to how much of his understanding of things remains absolutely relevant. There is a lot of humor, of course, but it isn't all funny. Twain wrote at length about the love affair that some Americans have with wealth. He pulled no punches when addressing corporate corruption and deceit. In a 1907 letter about a big economic crash of that time, Twain took on Wall Street and corporate America and what he said happens "when theft is practiced as a profession by our most distinguished commercial men." It is almost spooky how so much of what Twain had to say is duplicated in our lives today. What keeps me coming back to Twain is my own anger at what I see happening today, and the destruction of our values. Twain aims his literary bullets at what is wrong in society. We need Mark Twain now more than ever.

TC: Are there any memories of the South Shore you would like to share?

HH: My grandfather, Jason Holbrook, was a shoemaker who lived in South Weymouth. My sisters and I lived with him until I was about 12 years old. My grandfather's home is now the Weymouth Historical Society at the Jason Holbrook Homestead. My late cousin, Jane Holbrook Jewell, had lived in the house before donating it to the town. Jane and I maintained a close relationship over the years. We just kind of clung together. It was Jane who got me interested in our family genealogy, which can be traced to 1635 when Reverend Hull's company came from England and settled in Weymouth. Thomas Holbrook was our forebearer and his father was at one time the owner of the Mayflower. It is wonderful to think you came from people who set certain things in motion.

TC: You and Dixie have done "Designing Women" together and you also co-star in the feature film "That Evening Sun," which opens in New York and Los Angeles next month. What's it like to have your wife as your acting partner?

HH: Dixie is a great actress so working with her is always a thrill. I enjoyed guest starring on "Designing Women" because when we weren't in scenes together I could just hang back and watch her do the kind of comedy she does so exceptionally well. We have some wonderful memory scenes in the new movie, too, where we get to dance together. It is just a beautiful and lovely experience to act with Dixie. It is easy, too, because I love her so much.

Hal Holbrook will appear in "Mark Twain Tonight!" at the Veterans Memorial Auditorium Arts and Cultural Center at One Avenue of the Arts in Providence, R.I., on Oct. 10. For tickets and information, call 401-421-2787 or go online at vmari.com.

Theater review

'Fences' make for good opener

American stories highlight Huntington Theatre's season

By R. Scott Reedy

Warner Miller (Cory Maxson), John Beasley (Troy Maxson), Bill Nunn (Gabriel), and Crystal Fox (Rose Maxson) in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of Fences, playing now through October 11 at the B.U. Theatre.

Given its longstanding relationship with playwright August Wilson, it is fitting that Boston's Huntington Theatre Company has chosen to open its 28th season, one devoted to American stories according to Artistic Director Peter Dubois, with "Fences," Wilson's story of a former Negro Leagues star baseball player who ends up as a garbage collector. The sixth installment in Wilson's remarkable cycle of 10 plays, each set in a different decade, about the 20th century African-American experience, "Fences" follows eight of the other 10 plays in the cycle which were presented at the Huntington between 1986 and 2006 under former artistic directors Peter Altman and Nicholas Martin before going on to New York.

The first time the Huntington approached Wilson about "Fences," it was already booked for Broadway, where it would take home the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for Drama and Tony Award for Best Play. The late director Lloyd Richards, Wilson's most frequent collaborator, helmed that production which starred James Earl Jones. Richards' worthy successor here is Kenny Leon who directed Wilson's last two Tony Award-nominated plays, "Gem of the Ocean" and "Radio Golf," the latter after the playwright's 2005 death from liver cancer at age 60, at the Huntington before taking them to Broadway.

For this impressive new mounting of "Fences," set in Pittsburgh in 1957, Leon has assembled a first-rate company of actors led by John Beasley as Troy Maxson, the onetime baseball player hardened by the failures of his own life. Beasley's booming voice captures the attention of all around him. It likely reaches the back row of the balcony, too, with or without benefit of a mike, and it powers a performance that perfectly captures the character's mix of pride and anger. His own dashed dreams of a professional sports career just a memory, Troy forces his youngest son, Cory, to pass up a college football scholarship for a job at the A&P.

"How come you never liked me? Are you scared I'll be better than you?" Cory rails at his father. "What law say I got to like you," Troy responds before explaining that he lets Cory live in his house, and eat his food, because, as a father, he has a "duty and responsibility" to do so. As the play unfolds, Warner Miller's Cory develops from teenage boy into an impressive man.

As Rose, Troy's wife of 18 years and Cory's mother, Crystal Fox brings dignity and resolve to the challenges of living alongside a man who can be at once both riveting and repelling. When Troy lets her down for what just may be the final time, late in act two, Rose lets loose on him in a heart-wrenching summation of what he has meant to her, and what he has done to her, played achingly by Fox.

Wilson uses symbolism less in "Fences" than some of his other works, but it is still there in the fence being slowly built around the Maxson's working-class homestead, and in the naming of Troy's brain-injured, war veteran brother, Gabriel, who is never without his horn. Bill Nunn is wonderful as Gabriel, whose final scene restores faith to this damaged, but still intact family and provides hope for something better still ahead.

The Huntington Theatre Company will present "Fences" at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Ave. Boston, through Oct. 11. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-0800 or go online at huntingtontheatre.org.

A bird's eye view of the scary spider created by the pumpkins at the ASP Pumpkin Patch at Wheelwright Park. The Pumpkin Patch is open 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., through Halloween. On weekends, tractor rides and face painting are available. The Pumpkin Patch is completely staffed by volunteers. Those who buy a pumpkin support the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project, an ecumenical home repair ministry. Annually Cohasset ASP sends close to 200 people to Virginia, West Virginia or Kentucky to help make homes safer and drier.

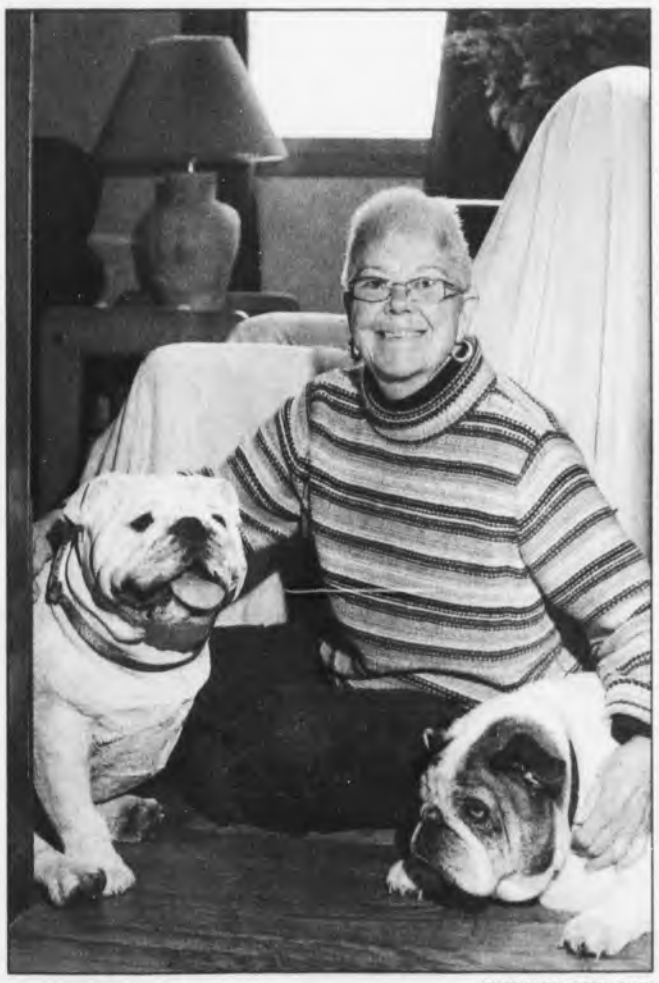
'Bulldog,' owner reunited!

Cohasset woman recognized statue

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There is a happy ending to this missing dog story. A lifelike bulldog statue, named Ronan, has been reunited with its owner, Carol Doyle of Atlantic Avenue in Hull.

The wayward K-9 was picked up two weeks ago in Wadleigh Park. Cohasset police, who speculated that the bulldog probably belonged to residents in another town, adopted the life-like fiberglass bulldog model and named it "Broderick." (Broderick Crawford, known for his bulldog-like looks, spent a summer in Cohasset back in 1934.)



The bulldog, which has a red collar but no tags and weighs about 10 pounds, was featured in last week's Cohasset Mariner (Oct. 9).

A Cohasset woman who walks around Straits Pond saw Ronan's photo in the paper Friday (Oct. 9) and recognized him immediately as belonging to a house in Hull. She left a note on Doyle's door and her son and grandson went to pick him up.

Doyle said a neighbor gave her the bulldog statue as a gift about 10 years ago when her husband was very ill. The couple had two bulldogs at the time, Rosie, now 12, and Ryan. They stuck with the "Rs" and named the new addition, Ronan.

Doyle said on Wednesday (Sept. 30) when she went out to take Rosie for a

School Committee violates state law

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Norfolk County District Attorney's Office has determined the School Committee violated the Open Meeting Law with e-mail and phone conversations during the development and eventual decision to submit a Mariner commentary signed by four of the five School Committee members.

The District Attorney "commended the committee for self-reporting its actions and for recognizing the importance of the Open Meeting Law."

The opinion-piece, "Cohasset Schools respect all views" about President Obama's back-to-school speech, was sent by e-mail to the Mariner from School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz and appeared in the Sept. 25 edition.

School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy reported at the Oct. 7 meeting that they had notified the District Attorney's Office of a possible

Tech Talk

RAM

Random Access Memory (RAM) generally refers to a computer's memory. It provides space for a computer to read and write data to be accessed by the central processing unit (CPU). If more RAM is added to a computer, the number of occasions the CPU must read the data is reduced. That allows the computer to work considerably faster. RAM technologies are not interchangeable. One type of RAM will not function if it is installed with another type, and physical differences in the RAM modules prevent them from being inserted in the same computer. If a computer becomes low on RAM during intensive application use, many operating systems temporarily use an area on a hard drive as additional working memory.

It happens to the best of us. One day your Windows-based PC just seems to be taking far longer than usual to open applications and save files on your hard drive. Unfortunately, there are many reasons why your computer could be running slowly. Let RGB COMPUTER SOLUTIONS help you. We're located at 94 Station St., 2nd Floor, Hingham. Call 781.749.1130 for more details. We depend on our computers for work, communication, research, homework, and much more. If your computer needs to stay with us for a few days, we can offer you a loaner.

P.S. When a computer uses a hard drive to supplement RAM, it is known as "swapping."

DOWN THE ROAD

The days have long passed when an automobile could be purchased on the basis of kicking the tires and listening to the door shut. Gone also is the era when driveway mechanics could tinker under the hood to extract maximum performance from their vehicles. Today's vehicles possess advanced technical systems that require trained technicians for maintenance and repair, guided by computer-based diagnostics. Regular maintenance also helps to ensure sustained, event-free driving that is both pleasurable and dependable. As advances in motoring technology continue to evolve, it is the goal of this column to inform our readers of automobile safety features, system advances and driving tips that will help them purchase and maintain their vehicles.

We at ATLANTIC TIRE & ALIGNMENT would like to welcome you to our weekly column. We hope you find our upcoming installments to be both informative and useful. We represent more than 40 years of combined experience in the automotive repair industry. We have ASE-certified technicians and state-of-the-art equipment to repair and maintain all of your vehicle needs. Visit us today at 25 Atlantic House Rd. or call 781-925-3200 to make an appointment. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: The majority of engine wear occurs while the engine is cold, so drive slowly until your vehicle's engine is fully warmed.

Police Chief search attracts 80 applicants

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he hopes to hold the first interviews by the middle of November.

The Cohasset police chief vacancy has attracted interest from many sectors. When the application deadline passed on Friday, Oct. 9 the Town Manager's office had received 80 applications for the position.

The application lot drew from a wide variety of areas. Some in-house candidates put their hat into the ring. A few sitting police chiefs are expressing interest and a number of high-ranking officers from other communities.

"Due to the large number of good candidates (at least on paper), it is going to take longer than I originally hoped," Town Manager Bill Griffin said, who has the authority to hire the police chief. (The Board of Selectmen has the power to "veto" the appointment within 15 days of its announcement.)

Griffin said he hopes to hold the first interviews by the middle of November.

In late September Police Chief James Hussey, who held the post for the past five years, resigned to return to the Boston Police Department where he started his career. Brian Noonan, who served as Cohasset's police chief from 1993 to 2002, is serving as interim police chief.

According to the process Griffin laid out last month, he will be narrowing the potential candidates to five to 10 before involving a candidate evaluation team. The proposed configuration of the evaluation team, which would interview the semi-finalist candidates, would be the Town Manager Bill Griffin, Finance Director Michael Buckley, and to-be-determined retired or veteran police chief from another community, a town manager/administrator from another community and a Cohasset citizen representative.

Following the first round of interviews, Griffin hopes there is consensus among the evaluation team members on a core group of finalists to come back for a second, more detailed interview. The second interviews will be open to the public.

If one or two finalists clearly emerge following the second interview, there will be reference checks. When Griffin determines a preferred candidate, a background check will be done.

In the job description, Griffin placed strong emphasis on "teambuilding and community outreach," what he called the "cornerstone" of Hussey's tenure.

A salary range of $100,000 to $120,000 was established for the position after Griffin surveyed the South Shore region.

Unsavory character responds to Craig's List ad

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

He reported that an unsavory looking character arrived at his home who was under the impression the swing set was free.

A 48-year-old Cohasset man requested extra patrols in his neighborhood last week after he advertised a $700 swing set for sale on Craig's List. He reported that an unsavory looking character arrived at his home who was under the impression the swing set was free. The resident told him it was not free and the individual left. However, it was a strange encounter and the resident called police, as a precaution should the stranger return.

MVAs

• At 2:51 p.m. on Monday (Oct 5) there was a rear-end collision near Stop & Shop Plaza involving a 2005 Chevrolet van and a 2003 Toyota Camry. Police said a 54-year-old Raynam man was driving the van and jammed on the brakes to try and stop from hitting the Camry that had stopped in front of him to avoid hitting an unidentified third vehicle that had stopped short.

The cars were headed north on Route 3A and the accident occurred near the rear entrance to Stop & Shop. No one was cited, both motorists agreed the accident was unavoidable, police said. There were no apparent injuries and neither vehicle was towed.

• At 5:13 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 5) a 58-year-old Hull woman came to the station to report that her 1999 Mercedes Benz had been vandalized at Stop & Shop Plaza while she had been shopping. Both of the car's mirrors were broken off. She did not report having problems with anyone but did see some youth hanging around when she went into the store. Detectives are reviewing parking lot tapes and the incident is under investigation.

• At 6:46 a.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 7) an officer reported that a 2007 Nissan Xterra parked in the St. Anthony's Church lot had been involved in an accident. The front of the vehicle was "stoved in" and there was damage to the undercarriage. Police made contact with the 44-year-old Scituate woman who was driving and she reported that late the previous night a coyote ran in front of her and she swerved to miss the animal, hitting a utility pole. She moved the car into the parking lot and left it there. The vehicle ended up having to be towed, police said. The owner was advised of proper procedure in that she needs to report an accident right away. She was issued a citation for marked lanes violation.

• At 2:40 p.m. on Friday (Oct. 9) a 54-year-old Kingston man operating at 2001 pickup truck used the Smith Appliance driveway on Route 3A to make a U-turn but when he pulled back out into traffic he cut off a 30-year-old Cohasset man driving a 2002 Nissan Altima, causing an accident, police said. Both vehicles were towed; there were no apparent injuries. The Kingston man was cited for failure to use caution when entering a state highway.

Sign down

A walk-in to the police station at 7:48 p.m. on Monday (Oct. 5) reported witnessing a red 1999 Chevrolet Monte Carlo run over a stop sign at Elm and Margin streets in the Cove area. The witness provided the plate number. An officer went to the scene and observed the damaged sign. Police ran the plate that came back to a 58-year-old Hull woman. Police talked to her and she admitted to leaving the scene. She is being summonsed t court for leaving the scene after property damage and failure to notify the RMV of her change of address. Police caution motorists that it is important that licenses and registrations are up-to-date with current address.

Mini-Cooper

At 8:38 a.m. on Wednesday (Oct. 7), a detail officer was following a dump truck to the next job site when a 2008 Mini-Cooper, operated by at 65-year-old Cohasset man, attempted to pass both the officer and the truck in the vicinity of the 400 block of Atlantic Avenue. As the Mini-Cooper was attempting to pass, the dump truck made a left into a driveway, the tiny car caught the front of the truck and went into a spin. The operator was not injured, police said. The Mini-Cooper had to be towed.

The driver is being summonsed to court for reckless driving, marked lanes violation and speeding, police said.

Stolen checks

Police are investigating a 71-year-old Cohasset man's report of stolen checks from his home. The man reported the stolen checks had been cashed at Shaw's and Stop & Shop. The incident is being investigated. The amount of money obtained from cashing the stolen checks totals about $1,000, police said. A few days later, the same man discovered some credit cards and cash were missing.

PlayStation

A 25-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station to report that her PlayStation 3, valued at $600, had been stolen. She told police the model has been discontinued and provided the serial number. Police are investigating the theft.

DVDs taken

Blockbuster reported that three women who had been inside the store likely stole 11 DVDs valued at $245. The incident was reported at 8 p.m. on Thursday (Oct. 8). The shoplifters left the empty DVD wrappers behind. The clerk found the wrappers where the women had been standing, police said. Blockbuster is conducting an inventory of its DVD titles to see if there are any others missing. Detectives are investigating the theft and are reviewing store videotapes.

Passed out

Police were able to contact the parents of a Norwell man found passed out in his 2004 Chevrolet Cavalier at the Beechwood Ball Park last Friday (Oct. 9). A passerby noticed the man and called police, who tried several times to wake him up. As it turns out, the man is under a doctor's care; the ambulance checked him out and his parents were notified.

He was not under the influence of alcohol, police said.

Bike stolen

At 49-yar-old Forest Avenue man reported that his Trek 7100 blue and silver bike with black fenders had been stolen from the MBTA train lot on Friday (Oct. 9). Police said the MBTA is conducting the investigation.

Unlicensed

A 32-year-old Quincy woman is being summonsed after being stopped by a motorcycle officer for speeding on Sohier Street. Police said she was traveling 46 in a 30 m.p.h. zone. As it turned out the woman, who is from Brazil but has lived here for three years, did not have a Massachusetts license. Her vehicle was towed, she was cited for speeding and is being charged with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle, police said.

The traffic stop took place at 4:47 p.m. on Saturday (Oct. 10).

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations will be in effect Nov. 15 through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

Can you tell which bulldog is real? Ronan, 10, left was recently discovered in Wadleigh Park – the victim of an apparent theft – and took up residence with Cohasset police until his owner was located. Rosie, right, is 12 years old and is glad Ronan is home again.

walk, Ronan, who sits under the mailbox was missing. She thought maybe her son had put him in the garage and looked "everywhere" but could not find him. She then reported the apparent theft of Ronan to the Hull police.

Doyle said Ronan will need some repair – one of his legs is missing but otherwise he is in good shape. She thinks who ever took him must have thrown him.

"He is realistic and so beautiful," Doyle said. "When I first put him out there, the mailman called me on his cell phone – he thought he was real."

Doyle describes the woman who let her know that Ronan was at the Cohasset Police Station as "her angel."

During its time at the Cohasset Police Station, the bulldog statue had been mysteriously appearing in different areas, like the garage bays, conference room and individual offices, police report.

E-mails, phone calls, decision constitute violations violation of the state's Open Meeting Law.

The Open Meeting Law is designed to ensure public business remains public. According to the law, with very few exceptions, the discussions, deliberations and decisions of elected and appointed municipal government officials must take place in posted, public meetings.

The School Committee's legal counsel wrote to the DA's Office outlining the process in which the commentary was drafted. The process included an e-mail circulating the commentary in draft form by Slanetz. The e-mail solicited edits from the other four School Committee members, edits were made and four of the five School Committee members ultimately agreed to sign the letter.

In addition, the letter states Slanetz, who wrote the draft of the letter, had phone conversations with one or more members of the School Committee, including Helene Lieb, the sole member who did not sign the commentary.

Assistant District Attorney Trisha Lee states in an Oct. 7 letter the facts provided introduced two issues. First was the issue of the e-mails and telephone conversations.

"Private discussions between members where the members share information on public policy issues for the purpose of arriving at a decision constitute serial discussions and such discussions are considered 'deliberations.' Where there is an exchange of views among members in such circumstances, a violation has occurred," Lee stated. She found both the e-mail and telephone conversations violated the Open Meeting Law in that respect.

The second issue was whether the "drafting, sharing, and sending the letter constitutes 'public business.'" She said that issue was "a close one."

"The letter commented on the Superintendent's decision regarding airing President Obama's back-to-school speech, gave the Committee's position on the issue, and responded to public disagreement with the Superintendent's decision," Lee stated.

She concluded the deliberation and ultimate expression of the views and position of a quorum of the Committee violated the Open Meeting Law statute.

The District Attorney "commended the committee for self-reporting its actions and for recognizing the importance of the Open Meeting Law."

In order to resolve the issue the Committee was asked to acknowledge the violation at an open meeting. The School Committee's next scheduled meeting is this coming Wednesday, Oct. 21.

The Mariner received a copy of the School Committee's letter and the District Attorney's response on by fax Wednesday (Oct. 14) afternoon after requesting the School Committee's letter to the DA on Thursday, Oct. 8.

The Mariner attempted to contact School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy by phone and e-mail on Thursday morning, but was not able to reach her by press time.

MCAS results are positive

Schools meet English, math targets

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset students once again made the grade on the MCAS tests.

Last month, the 2009 MCAS scores were released. Cohasset is making strides in all areas and achieved its annual yearly progress goals mandated by the federal government.

The Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System, or MCAS, is an annual statewide test in its 12th year of administration. The School Committee received an overview from Supt. Of Schools Denise Walsh on Oct. 7 and an in-depth look at their strengths and weaknesses from school principals.

"Every year we better ourselves and that becomes our new baseline. At this level, it is difficult to sustain improvement," said Nancy Mrzyglod, Director of Curriculum & Professional Development K-12.

All three Cohasset schools — Deer Hill, the middle school and the high school — met their targeted annual yearly progress scores on both the English and math. If Cohasset keeps on pace with its yearly gains, all students should score proficient and above by 2014 when all students are required to be proficient in reading and math under the federal No Child Left Behind Act.

Each year school staff at all levels from Osgood to the High School use the MCAS results to tweak their teaching methods and hone in on areas of student weakness.

MCAS tests include multiple choice, open response, and short answer questions and writing prompts. School and district results are used to evaluate, revise, and update the curriculum and instruction programs, aligned with the Massachusetts Curriculum Frameworks.

One of the areas of focus going forward is the fourth- and fifth-grade English scores.

"There's been relatively no movement (over the past year)," said Mrzyglod, whereas the math scores are on a upward trajectory. This year, Cohasset Schools are re-vamping their Language arts curriculum and are hoping to see improvements in the scores next year as a result.

"Every year we better ourselves and that becomes our new baseline."

— Nancy Mrzyglod, Curriculum & Professional Development

"One of our theories is if teachers have a deeper, richer understanding of the content they can teach the material in a deeper, richer way," said Mrzyglod.

Going forward Mrzyglod said district-wide they plan to focus on moving students from the proficient to advanced category, rather than focusing on the needs improvement/warning categories.

"We want to raise the expectations," said Mrzyglod.

At the high school level, which Mrzyglod called the "flagship," there are "standout" scores. Ninety-six percent of students scored at the advanced and proficient levels for grade 10 English Language arts and Math, 85 percent scored advanced and proficient on grade 10 science/technology.

In a comparison with six other South Shore school districts (Norwell, Scituate, Hingham, Hanover, Duxbury, Marshfield) Cohasset ranked second overall for percentage of proficient and advanced scores district-wide. They ranked first regionally in all three grade 5 tests (English language arts, Math and Science/Technology), grade 7 English Language Arts and Math, grade 8 Math, and grade 10 Math.

Looking ahead there are several areas staff will begin to focus on.

At Osgood, Principal Janet Sheehan said one of the weaknesses for students taking the reading tests at grade three are open response to fiction and non-fiction passages. Open response questions in the math section have also been a weakness. In both areas they will begin to incorporate more journal writing.

At Deer Hill, the grade 5 scores were "outstanding." Statewide Cohasset Schools ranked number fifth on the math test, 14th on the English Language and 11th on the science and technology.

"It's the culmination of a healthy curriculum in many areas," said Deer Hill Principal Jennifer deChiara.

The fourth-grade level was a slightly different story. DeChiara said sustained writing continues to be a challenge for the fourth graders.

"They struggle with topic development in the long composition," said deChiara, adding she is also noticing a gender gap in the writing scores with boys scoring lower on the English Language tests.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini pointed to the block scheduling, a switch in team configuration at the middle school and a full inclusion model for special education students for part of the students' success.

Each school will spend the next weeks and months reviewing the data from the tests and adjusting instruction, and curriculum accordingly.

"These scores are living. They really drive our decision making, drive our instruction and drive our budget," said Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh.

Cat Dam study kicks off

Neighbors come out to meet engineer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The study on Cat Dam approved and funded in a Town Meeting vote last spring got its official start last Thursday evening. A crowd of neighbors packed the meeting room to be introduced to the town's newly hired professional engineer, hear about the process for the study and give their feedback and concerns.

Cat Dam is a 50-plus-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor. It is located on Nichols Road, but affects the properties that border inner Little Harbor.

Jeff Oakes of Marion-based CLE Engineering was hired by the town to produce an operations and maintenance plan for Cat Dam as part of the Notice of Intent application with the Conservation Commission.

Over the next few months the engineer will pore over the many documented studies of the water resource area, talk to residents, many of whom have lived in the area for decades, and do his own field research. The end result will be a new operations schedule and a hearing process with the Conservation Commission.

An unauthorized change in the open-and-close schedule for the tidal gates in spring 2008 triggered the involvement of the Conservation Commission. The change to the schedule required an intervention by the Conservation Commission, which has jurisdiction over the town's water resources. The Conservation Commission is requiring the town to file an after-the-fact notice of intent, which requires the expertise of a professional engineer.

To start off his work Oakes is conducting an "existing conditions investigation." More than 10 environmental studies and reports have been created on the inner Little Harbor area over the last 10 years. He is also requesting any additional data, reports or comments be sent to him in writing by the end of the month.

Residents in the inner Little Harbor area had some concerns; many of them echoed concerns brought up at previous meetings on the subject over the last two years. The timing of the study — about a year before the massive and long-awaited Little Harbor sewer project is complete — was the first subject of concern.

"It's important for everybody to realize all the properties in the area will be sewered by the end of next year," said Shirley Marten of Nichols Road, explaining that right now there are failing septic systems and cesspools in the area. "This work seems premature when (the water quality) could dramatically change post-sewering."

In response, Oakes said the ultimate schedule would be an "adaptive maintenance schedule" that could adjust to what is expected to be the positive changes in the health of Little Harbor post-sewering.

"Sewering is not the end all be all," said David Farrag, chairman of the Conservation Commission. "We'll deal with the dam and what's going on when it comes."

Other residents had concerns about the water cover on inner Little Harbor and how changes to the tidal gate could affect the aesthetics of the area.

"If (inner Little Harbor) becomes a mud flat it will have a significant impact on the saleability of (people's) property," said Tom Killilea, who recently purchased a home in the area.

Farrag said all coastal property is subject to inevitable tidal pull, adding there were advantages to having a harbor that's healthy, which is the end goal for the Conservation Commission.

Al Stefan of Jerusalem Road questioned the engineer's intention to meet with the two different schools of thought over each one's feelings on Cat Dam.

"How can you objectively make a decision if you are incorporating more of a subjective opinion?" said Stefan, who additionally wanted to know what bearing the talks with the neighbors would have on his ultimate report.

Oakes said he was asked by the town to speak with the people in the community, but mostly he was looking for written testimony.

"Having narratives with people is another way of gathering information," said Conservation Commission member Sarah Charron, who noted many of the people in the area have a long memory of the harbor and tidal gates.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would welcome any and all reports or comments sent electronically. He plans to create an electronic library Cat Dam resource center on the town's webpage. Other reports on Little Harbor will be available for lending at the Selectmen's Office at Town Hall.

Timeline

- Oct. 30: Reports, comments, and other data are to be provided to CLE in writing prior to October 30.
- Nov. 27: Completion of site work.
- Dec. 18: Completion of the review of existing reports and data as provided by the town and residents.
- December: Presentation of a draft operation, schedule and maintenance plan (prior to Dec. 31).
- Jan. 28: Submission of Notice of Intent to Conservation Commission.
- February 2010: Conservation Commission public hearing.

Cat Dam flashback

Cat Dam is a 50-plus-year-old mechanism that limits the tidal flow of water in inner Little Harbor. It is located on Nichols Road. The structure is unique in town in that although it is town-owned it has historically been maintained by the surrounding neighborhood.

Over the last few years within the neighborhood there has developed differing opinions on how often the gates should be allowed to open — some want increased flushing while others say there is enough. The conflict brought the issue before the Board of Selectmen for several lengthy and often heated debates between 2007 and 2008.

Over the winter 2008, a committee put together a proposed schedule for the opening and closing of the dam. Before the Selectmen could approve or deny the suggested schedule, the new schedule was implemented for approximately two weeks.

When any change is made to a body of water, the Conservation Commission is obligated to get involved. When the issue came before the Conservation Commission, they issued the town an after the fact notice of intent — a formal request to the town to provide more information about the dam and its adjacent water bodies. Professional engineering services was required including information about the water quality, monitoring of Little Harbor, and an operations and management schedule.

In a narrow vote — 81 in favor, 77 against — Town Meeting approved the allocation to move forward with the notice of intent and hiring of a professional engineer.

A Request for Proposals was sent out, the town received two bids for the services, and hired CLE Engineering of Marion, Mass. for a $17,000 contract.

Norfolk County quarterly real estate activity

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 2009.

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the quarter period from July to September 2009 settled at $1.35 billion, an increase of $374 million over the immediately previous April to June quarter. A year-to-year comparison to the July to September, 2008, quarter shows an increase in this total value of just less than one percent. The total number of 3,939 deeds recorded during the July to September 2009 quarter was also up over the same quarter last year increasing 1.3 percent. This increase in the number of deeds recorded is welcome news in Norfolk County. Another positive indicator is the average sale price of deeds over $1,000 for both residential and commercial properties, which increased almost 2 percent over the same quarter in 2008 to $525,714. The increase is a strong indication that prices may have passed their low water mark.

Mortgage recording activity continued its run of positive recordings rising 37.8 percent this quarter on a year-to-year basis with 8,870 new mortgages being recorded in the quarter. Total mortgage value for the quarter stood at $3.58 billion, up over 32 percent from July to September 2008. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity.

The Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. Call the Registry at 781-461-6101 or view the Web site at norfolkdeeds.org.

Mother Of 2 Loses 50 Pounds!

BEFORE
After having my second child I realized that although I was happy to have two beautiful children I was not happy with the way I looked or felt. I decided I was going to change but I realized I was not sure where to begin. So I started to look into joining a gym and after meeting with my trainer from Get In Shape for Women I realized that this gym is for me. So I joined the program and committed to coming three days a week for a year. Within a few weeks I was feeling good about myself and the weight was coming off. I have lost 50 lbs. in 8 months and 15% body fat and still cannot believe it. The trainers were always very encouraging and always pushing me to the next level. I actually started looking forward to the gym and still do! It is a great atmosphere with great trainers and best of all it works!! I can't say enough good things about Get In Shape for Women, especially my trainers for all of their support and help.... I would highly recommend this program!

Hi Cohasset. I hope everyone is looking around and enjoying the Fall scenery even if it seems very cold, much too soon. A number of fun events are coming up in the next few weeks and they are all a great way to spend the fall and enjoy.

TROOP 28

Members of Cohasset Boy Scout Troop 28 traveled to the White Mountains in New Hampshire Oct 10 through 12.

The group, organized and lead by Star Scout Greg Berube, included 10 Scouts plus adult chaperones. The group camped at Lafayette State Park in the Franconia Range and took a shakedown hike on Saturday on portions of Cannon Mountain and around Lonesome Lake.

On Sunday, the group hiked the Franconia Ridge Trail. The hike started on the Falling Waters Trail at the foot of Little Haystack Mountain. The trail rises to 4,200 feet, crossing a running stream several times. Near the summit, the group saw high winds and very light snow as clouds passed through the mountain peaks. At the summit, the group crossed the 1.7-mile ridge trail, over Mount Lincoln (5,089 feet) to the summit of Mount Lafayette (5,260). On the ridge, the clouds cleared and the Scouts were treated to views of the Pemigewasset Wilderness, Franconia Notch and beyond. The group descended via the Greenleaf and Bridle Path trails.

Notwithstanding the stiff winds and cold temperatures, both the hike and camping were successful. The Scouts' knowledge of the proper preparation, equipment and conduct on the trail kept everyone safe, well fed and warm.

On Monday, the troop hiked the geologic formations in the Flume Gorge and returned to Cohasset.

Boys ages 12 through 17 interested in the fun, adventure and service opportunities offered by Scouting can contact Troop 28 for more information through the Troop's Web site at troop28cohasset.org.

LACROSSE

Nathan Porter, a 2008 Cohasset High School graduate, and a sophomore at the University of New England, recently was named Captain of the UNE lacrosse team. Porter, a goalie, started 10 of 13 games as a freshman and helped UNE achieve its most winning season to date. Nathan, the son of Sarah and Jim Porter, is a Marine Biology major.

FIELD HOCKEY

The first ever Middle School Field Hockey Jamboree will be held in Cohasset! Cohasset will be hosting 7 teams and over 100 kids on Sunday, Oct. 25th from 9 a.m. – 1 p.m.. This exciting event will take place on the new turf field at CHS. There will be drinks, snacks and t-shirts available for sale. Spectators are welcome!

HAUNTED FUN

With lots of fun and spooky things planned for their upcoming event "Haunted Happenings", the Cohasset Historical Society has added some bargains! Take in the "Haunted Wilson House" and the live paranormal investigation going on next door at the Maritime Museum from 5:30 to 7:30pm for the single cost of $5 or take a tour of famously haunted Cohasset Town Hall between 12:30 and 5pm for $5. Both of these events are also seen as something appropriate for kids to enjoy. Looking to get Psychic reading or to find out about your past lives? Book your appointment for either at $10 each by calling the Historical Society at 383-1434. So come on out and support the Cohasset Historical Society while getting into the Halloween spirit.

OUR WORLD

On Oct. 23, from 4 – 9 pm, a Not-So-Scary Halloween Party will be taking place at the Our World Museum. Children of all ages can come to the museum for a super night of crafts, games, Halloween Freeze Dance and a yummy Pizza Party with a few surprises thrown in. Costumes may be worn or brought and a comfy pair of PJ'S or clothes to change into would be great. The cost for this event is $25 per child with additional children 1/2 off. To register your child(ren) please call Miss Jen at 781-923-1473 or, send an email to ourworld-programs@comcast.net.

CYBSA AWARDS

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will be holding its 2009 Championship Awards Night on Thursday, Oct. 22 a 7 p.m. at the CMHS Auditorium. The event will recognize the baseball and softball spring, summer and fall championship teams, which include the following:

- Fall Ball 7 / 8-year-old Champions: Timber Rattlers
- Fall Ball 9 / 10 and 11-year-old Champions: River Dogs
- American League Champions: Mariners
- Softball Champions: Twins
- Major League: Pirates

All CYBSA Little League participants, family and friends are invited to attend. Please join in celebrating this year's awardees.

ARTIST

Susan Buswell of Cohasset is one of the exhibiting artists at the Fuller Craft Museum Members Exhibition from Oct. 17 to March 21. Susan specializes in fiber. Fuller Craft Museum is New England's only museum of contemporary craft, is dedicated to the objects, ideas, and insight that inspire both patrons and artists to explore life through the art of contemporary craft. Fuller Craft Museum is located at 455 Oak Street in Brockton. For more information visit www.fullercraft.org or call 508.588.6000.

ON STAGE

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present Ken Ludwig's smash Broadway hit "Lend Me a Tenor," from Nov. 6 – 15 at Town Hall. An outstanding cast of well-known South Shore actors will present this laugh-a-minute comedy, winner of three Tony Awards, and enjoyed by audiences here and abroad. To highlight the show within the play aspect of "Lend Me a Tenor," CDC will present the incoming audience members with faux programs and posters from "Othello" and will recreate an opening night at the Opera experience for the first Saturday evening performance, complete with red carpet and formally dressed opera patrons. Tickets are priced at $16 for general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups. They can be purchased at Paperscapes Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books or via reservation at 617-697-2115 … Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior to the show at the box office. For more information, go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

ANIMAL SHELTER

Enjoy an exciting afternoon of sensational Italian cuisine, fine wine, and culinary discussion at Orta Restaurant in Pembroke to benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter. Orta recently received Boston Magazine's "Best New Restaurant 2009 – South" and has been featured on Channel 5's Chronicle. The Fresh from Italy Culinary Event takes place on Sunday, Nov. 1st from 1pm to 4pm.

The Culinary Event includes a question and answer discussion with chefs and co-owners Jimmy Burke and Joanie Wilson, as well as delectable hors d'oeuvres and mouthwatering Italian cuisine. Fine wine will be served throughout the event and will be accompanied by a variety of sumptuous desserts. In addition, a silent auction, door prizes, and a raffle will round out the event. Visit the "Events" page at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org to direct your questions to the Chef! Tickets are just $50 per person and are on sale during public hours at the Scituate Animal Shelter, located at 780 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. For more information call 781-544-4533.

That is all for this week. Send in your news to me no later than Tuesdays, by 5 pm.

Breakfast, raffle

Cohasset Soccer Booster Club is hosting its annual Pancake Breakfast and Raffle from 8 a.m. to noon, on Sunday, Oct. 18, at Deer Hill School. This year, the raffle prize is a month's worth of groceries or gasoline. Tickets for the raffle include all the pancakes one can eat. Tickets are $5 and can be purchased at the door.

Proceeds from the event will fund scholarships, uniforms and equipment for the high school men's and women's soccer teams.

Junior Gardeners

Junior Gardeners will meet Monday, Oct. 19. Each child will create a flower arrangement that reflects the title of a book about autumn or an autumn holiday. The program will be a preparation for the Books in Bloom exhibit to be held October 28-30 at the Paul Pratt Library.

Junior Gardeners meet once a month in the Deer Hill cafeteria from 2:30-3:30 p.m. There are still some openings in the program. Contact Dolores Roy (781-383-0838) if your child would like to join the group.

Civil War talk

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its fall dinner and annual meeting on Sunday, Oct. 25, at Atlantica Restaurant. The guest speaker for the evening is Patrick Browne who will be talking about the "South Shore and the Civil War." He will recount stories from this time with particular emphasis on the men who's bravery and deeds earned them the Medal of Honor. Mr. Browne received a bachelor of arts degree in English and a masters degree in history from the University of Massachusetts and has been executive director of the Duxbury Rural and Historical Society since 1998. He is the author of several books and has taken part in Civil War reenactments here in Massachusetts.

The evening will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a cash bar, followed by dinner at 6 p.m. The cost is $31 for Historical Society members and $36 for non-members. The menu includes clam chowder, rice pilaf, seasonal fresh vegetables and a choice of cranberry and sage stuffed chicken or grilled pork with and apple and raisin glaze. Dessert is warm apple crisp and vanilla ice cream.

Call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434 to secure your reservation and make your choice of entrée by Friday, Oct. 16. Checks can be mailed to the Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Babysitting smarts

Local woman teaches class on life skill at Cohasset Rec

Kimberly Cleary, right, gives Marcus Rowland, 8, some pointers on changing a diaper during the Cohasset Recreation Department fair last March. Cleary, who is the mother of three and an R.N. is offering her "Babysitting Training Course" through the Cohasset Recreation Department on Oct. 24.

Kids of a certain age begin to take on more responsibility. Sometimes that responsibility is staying home alone after school, sometimes it's watching a younger sibling, and sometimes it's babysitting for the neighbors.

The experience can be a nerve-racking one for parents and kids alike. Does a 10-, 11-, or 12-year-old know what to do in an emergency? Or even perform basic baby care-giving skills like changing a diaper?

Enter Kimberly Cleary, a mother of three daughters and an operating-room nurse, who has taught kids in grades 5 through 8 all over the South Shore the basics of babysitting.

Later this month on Saturday, Oct. 24, Cleary is offering her "Babysitting Training Course" through the Cohasset Recreation Department.

Cleary's straightforward, interactive teaching style engages the kids in a dialogue about safety, playing with younger children, and first aid.

"Sometimes hearing something from someone else other than mom or dad is helpful," said Cleary.

Cleary has been teaching babysitting skills, which also are life skills, to South Shore kids for years.

She started out many years ago as a fill-in at Scituate Recreation and the role snowballed from there. After she became a mom and a nurse, she developed and wrote her own program drawing on the skills and knowledge of her two professions.

Each child will leave the course with a complete booklet to help them in their babysitting endeavors.

"Sometimes hearing something from someone else other than mom or dad is helpful."
— Kimberly Cleary, course instructor

"It's really taken on a life of its own," said Cleary. Currently, she teaches the course in Scituate, Hanover, Whitman and her hometown of Pembroke.

The one-day, three-hour class covers child development, playing with and caring for younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and overall responsibility of babysitting.

Cleary said the course is ideal for the middle-school-aged youngster, "it's a really big deal for them to baby-sit and they are eager to learn."

She encourages first-time babysitters to seek out a job as a "mother's helper" so they can learn the ropes, get questions answered and get to know the children.

"It's fun for kids to have a job and that's a great way to get into the business," Cleary said.

Cleary covers child development from infants to school-age to give the kids an idea of what to expect. She leads them though demonstrations on diaper changing and feeding. She tries to get them to think about different scenarios they may encounter and how they would handle them.

"If you have to feed an infant and there is a three-year-old, how are you going to handle that?" Cleary said. Through the conversation Cleary hopes the kids learn they can solve problems. Though sometimes they have "crazy imaginations" and throw all sorts of scenarios out there for Cleary to answer.

"The kids want answers to everything no matter how unlikely it may be," Cleary said. For example, someone at the door, with a gun, and there's a doggie door. She stresses if they ever are in doubt or scared in a situation to call the police. "They are there to help."

Although the course focuses on babysitting, Cleary said many kids, especially the boys, take the class so they are better prepared to stay home alone. Yet, she often finds the boys getting into the discussion.

"Sometimes the boys who come in with a chip on their shoulder don't realize at the end they are holding the baby doll on their shoulder or rocking the baby. That always makes my heart warm," Cleary said.

The course also covers basic first aid. Minor injuries from nosebleeds, small burns, insect bites to more major injuries falls, fainting, a deep cut. She always teaches the kids the Heimlich maneuver.

"Any little skill that helps them out down the line or saves a life, then it's more than worth it," Cleary said.

In fact, Cleary found out last year one of her students did save a life, thanks in part to the knowledge they gained through the class.

An 11-year-old Hanover girl performed the Heimlich maneuver on her choking 6-year-old sister that dislodged a hard candy. The girl had learned the maneuver in Cleary's one-day babysitting course offered at Hanover Park & Rec.

"That felt really good," Cleary said.

Cohasset Recreation Director Ted Carroll originally worked with Cleary at his former recreation post in Hanover where she taught the same program.

"With (Cleary) being a nurse and being a mother, it is a great combination," Carroll said. "What she teaches in three hours is invaluable for kids."

In addition, the babysitting training course caters to the middle school age, the age group that often is left out from many programming. Carroll is confident the students will use the skill they learn for years to come.

"These kids will be my future counselors," said Carroll.

The babysitting training course is offered twice in the fall and spring and once during the summer. The fall dates are Saturdays, Oct. 24 and Nov.21 from 9a.m. to 12noon at the Cohasset Library. Parents can register online atwww.cohassetrec.com or in person at the Recreation office at Town Hall. The cost is $18.

Thirty-two year old drops 10 dress sizes and 110 pounds!

BEFORE

I used every excuse in the book to not get in shape and also used excuses to validate my weight gain. I was afraid of the equipment at the gym because I did not know how to use it. I was also intimidated because I knew I was not fit and felt I needed to lose weight before I could show my face at the gym. The best decision I ever made was contacting Get In Shape For Women. The staff at Get In Shape For Women is there to answer any questions I have and to help keep me on track with exercise and nutritional guidance. I have learned how to properly use the equipment and it was all because of what they have taught me. Not only have the trainers at Get In Shape For Women shown and explained to me the importance of Strength Training and effective Cardio, they have taught me what no other gym or diet program was ever able to: good solid no-gimmicks nutrition. I know it sounds silly, but it is true. The trainers at Get In Shape For Women tie everything together for you and show you how it all works. They do that by holding me accountable for my Strength Training, Cardio and Nutrition Counseling with food journal reviews and bi-weekly weigh-ins. This is the only program I have ever tried that ties it all together. Since joining Get In Shape For Women I have lost 110 lbs, 23% body-fat, dropped 10 dress sizes, and lost over 44 inches off of my body! A picture is worth a thousand words, see for yourself. I know that I will reach my goals and it is all because of the great program and trainers at Get In Shape For Women.

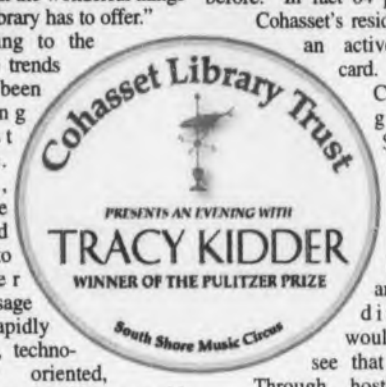
Pulitzer Prize winner coming Nov. 2

Cohasset Library Trust worth reading about

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Nov. 2 a Pulitzer Prize winner is coming to Cohasset. Tracy Kidder, author of "Strength in What Remains" and several other notable and award-winning books will be at the Cohasset High School at 6:30 p.m. to sign books and to speak about his book at 7 p.m. Kidder is coming on behalf of the Cohasset Library Trust, Inc. (CLT). CLT, Inc. is one of those organizations that silently works behind the scenes to ensure that our library remains a vibrant, beautiful resource where Cohasset residents of all ages can go to find books, magazines, videos, and programs that inspire learning and creativity.

"Cohasset Library Trust is here to encourage major gifts the income from which will support the operating budget," says Patience Towle, one of several directors of the CLT, Inc. "Essentially, these are funds that enhance all the wonderful things that the library has to offer."



According to the CLT, two trends have been working against libraries. First, costs have increased due to greater library usage and a rapidly changing, technologically oriented, more expensive library world. Second, as other pressures on the town have increased, the library's share of Cohasset's annual budget has steadily decreased.

This is the first year that the Paul Pratt Memorial Library has been closed on Sundays and that is not a reflection of usage; it's a reflection of budget. The library has more cardholders, more visits and more programs than ever before. In fact 84 percent of Cohasset's residents have an active library card.

CLT, Inc. gives $32,000 annually to support the operating budget and the directors would like to see that increase.

Through hosting "An Evening with Tracy Kidder" is just one way the CLT is working to raise awareness and raise the profile of the town library and all that it brings to the community. It truly is at the center of town life. It wasn't all that long ago that news articles were being written about the demise of town libraries. It was thought that eventually they'd all be closed, but the Cohasset library is thriving in terms of patrons, and resources in the form of major gifts are needed to meet those demands and ensure the library's future for all generations.

Tickets for the Tracy Kidder event are now available for $10 each at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library or Buttonwood Books & Toys. Seating is limited so all are encouraged to get their tickets early. Bring a friend and come find out why the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the Cohasset Library Trust are such an integral part of this town. Several copies of Kidder's new book, "Strength in What Remains," are available at the library, or for sale at Buttonwood Books. For more information visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

OCTOBER IS BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Cohasset Jewelers continues to raise money, awareness

MEN IN THE FIGHT

MARK CIRONE

There are big corporations everywhere raising money and awareness for breast cancer research, but it's nice to know local businesses care about the fight as well.

Mark Cirone, president of Cohasset Jewelers, is one of the men and local business owners in the fight against breast cancer.

Cirone has known breast cancer up close and personal through his wife, Sharon. As an advocate and caregiver, he has a unique perspective on the disease. As a businessman, he has embarked on several successful fundraising efforts over the past few years and Cohasset Jewelers is on track to raise $100,000 for the Susan G. Komen for the Cure.

Everyday Cirone wears a pink ribbon pin, the "Badge of Courage," to symbolize his dedication to the breast cancer cause and to acknowledge his wife's courage and strength in battling the disease. The sale of the pink ribbon pins is just one of the ways Cohasset Jewelers is raising funds.

Below Cirone shares some of his thoughts on why he is in the fight against breast cancer:

Why is this a cause close to your heart?

My wife, Sharon O'Neal Cirone, was diagnosed in March of 1995. Her disease was caught early and she was given a great prognosis. We both thought we got lucky and I never gave it another thought. In 2001, the disease recurred to her lung and brain and she was given a horrible prognosis. It's then that I realized I needed to do something proactive in the fight against this disease.

PHOTO/NANCY WHITE

Cohasset Jewelers president Mark Cirone stands by a shelf dedicated to all things "pink" – jewelry designed to raise money and awareness for the fight against breast cancer.

What do you do to support the cause?

We [at Cohasset Jewelers] do a variety of things to raise money and awareness for breast cancer. The "Badge of Courage," our first project, has raised over $50,000 for breast cancer research. In addition, we sell a variety of items including bracelets and cards, designed and marketed by breast cancer survivors.

Our latest project is "The History of Hingham" a book written by Arthur Roberts. Arthur has approached me earlier in the year with this project and an opportunity to be co-publisher. Since Sharon and I had both grown up in Hingham and she had been treated multiple times at South Shore Hospital, the book seemed a great vehicle to raise money for breast cancer and donate it to SSH new cancer center.

Interestingly, when Sharon recurred, her disease spread was so extensive that they couldn't treat her on the south shore and we had to go to a Boston hospital. This new Cancer Center will allow women who present like Sharon to be treated locally for the first time. The book is dedicated to "All those who have fought and endured the devastations of the disease of Breast Cancer". We are donating 100 percent of the proceeds and Mr. Roberts is matching our donation dollar-for-dollar for the first two years. With any luck, we should be giving the Cancer Center $40,000-$50,000.

More infomation including a video can be found here: www.cohassetjewelers.com/breast_cancer.php

Why is it important for men to be involved in this issue as much as women?

As a caregiver for many years, it's important on a multiple fronts. In the caregiver role, it's important to be proactive, educate yourself and then advocate for your spouse. No one cares as much for this life as we do. The doctors, no matter how good, have their own lives and you are one of many patients.

On a business front, I think it's important to show other men that there's no shame or stigma in having a spouse that's been diagnosed with this disease. We/I are in a unique position to be in front of large groups of people in a community setting and educate them. I've spoken to hundreds of women and men about this disease and I believe I've helped a lot of them with good information and the shared experiences that come with being part of the "breast cancer club."

What's the most important lesson you have learned through your involvement?

Get yourself educated about the disease and treatment options and then ADVOCATE for your spouse. Once diagnosed, your mantra should be "NO RECURRENCE EQUALS CURE". In other words, do everything in your power, treatment-wise, to try to minimize the chance of recurrence. Take as an aggressive approach as you can. You won't get a second chance at eradicating the disease if it recurs.

What inspires you, keeps you motivated, for a cure?
